Dear Dr. Sundlof, May 4, 1999

Please ban the use of antibiotics to promote growth in farm animals.

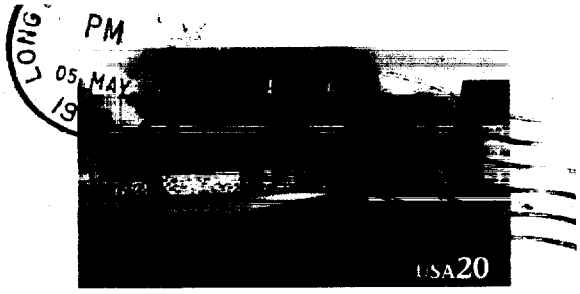
When animals are fed a nutritious diet, and live in a healthy, uncrowded environment there is little need for antibiotics. When antibiotics are used on farms, the environment and consumers becomes contaminated with bacteria that are resistant to antibiotic treatment. These antibiotic resistant germs are a serious and growing threat to human health.

The FDA should ban the use of antibiotics as growth promoters in farm animals - Thank you - Sincerely - M. & Mrs J. L. Denison

99P-0485

C 155

Mr. & Mrs. James L. Denison
6931 E. 11th Street
Long Beach, CA 90815



Teach Respect for the Earth and All Living Creatures

Dr. Stephen Sundlof
FDA Center for Veterinary Medicine
7500 Standish Place
Rockville, MD 20855