Dear FDA,

We are concerned about the forced molting of hens. The cruelty of this practice is linked with the bacterial contamination of eggs. My family and I look to the FDA to take serious measures to prohibit FORCED MOLTING of hens; to put bacterial warning labels on egg cartons, as well as to regulated egg refrigeration temperatures. Our understanding is that the FDA has been previously petitioned to ban forced molting. Consumers are disappointed at the slow response of the FDA to protect the public health. We look to your response at your earliest convenience.

C100

Respectfully, Dr JL Bloom
