To Dr. Jane E. Henney, Food & Drug Admin. commissioner

→ BAN The use of ANTIBIOTICS to promote livestock growth! Besides harming the animals and the people who eat them (both of which are bad enough in and of themselves) the bacteria easily develop resistence and the antibiotics don't even do their job!

Factory farms need to re-think those practices that require them to use 16 million pounds of antibiotics per year.

If a job is done right the first time, it needn't be covered with bandaids.

"Follow the example of the European Union, which banned adding human-use antibiotics to animal feed last year."
