Dear Mr. Hurney,

As a registered nurse, mother and grandmother, I am distressed by the routine addition of antibiotics to livestock feed. My father (now retired) while farming refused to have it added to his lifestock feed. He is a principaled man and would not act in a way to harm others.

I strongly suggest you reconsider your position and regulate the addition of antibiotics to livestock feed. The harm to future generations by adding antibiotics is very troublesome. We are seeing many strains of bacteria now resistant to our present arsenal of antibiotics because of the wide-spread use of antibiotics in livestock feed.

I urge you as one of the guardians of our societies health to ban the use of antibiotics in livestock feed.

Thank you

C. Coates RN. CSN
