Dear Commissioner Henney

2757 80 JAN -6 PM 2:01

I don't write letters of this nature frequently, only when moved to do so. I am alarmed to find anti biotics are being added to animal feed to promote growth. While the goal is worthwhile, I firmly believe the ability of bacteria to develop resistance to otherwise potent anti-biotics is a severe penalty to pay for animal growth.

I am relatively healthy and have seldom needed anti biotics, but as I move into middle age I would like to feel there is a sure-fire remedy to bacteria should I need it. Please ensure the public health has priority over an industry (livestock producers, etc) that have other alternatives available to them that may not be as harmful. Please help protect us from short-sighted remedies that benefit a small segment of our industrial base. Thanks for your attention in this matter.

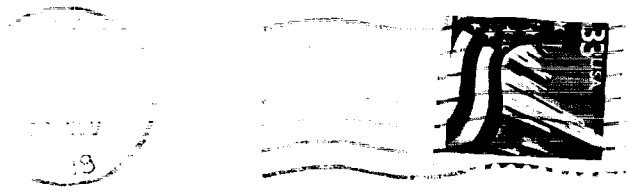
Sincerely,

Gary Simons
10170 N. Calle del Carnero
Tucson, AZ 85737

99P-0485

C 2132

Mr. Gary A. Simons
10176 N. Calle Del Carnero
Tucson, AZ 85737-9516



FDA Commissioner Jane Henney
5600 Fishers Lane
Rockville, Maryland
20857