1-14-01

To: Jane Henney

I am writing to you through my concern of antibiotic use in livestock. More and more, doctors are losing their weapons to combat disease in humans because bacteria are becoming resistant to treatment through recurrent use in livestock. A major percentage of these drugs are fed to animals just to make them grow quicker + to reach an ideal slaughter weight. Where does the health standards for humans factor into this equation? Obviously after profits are considered. Why is this not regulated? A strict inventory should be implemented immediately in order to document inherent side effects. I thank you for your time + consideration. I would also appreciate a response. Thank you

Sincerely,

Joe Cotter
12 Poplar Rd
Quincy, MA
02169

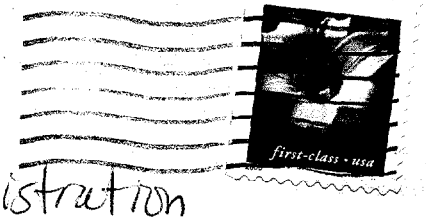
1220 01 JAN 25 AM 7:01

99P-0485

C2828

17 Poplar Rd
Quincy MA
02169

BOSTON MA 0211 7
PM
2001



Jane Henney
Food + Drug Administration
5600 Fishers Lane, Room 1471
Rockville, MD
20857