Madam - Promoting growth in 3-19-00
chickens, hogs and cattle is given preference over human health by FDA. Strains of human pathogens resistant to common and necessary antibiotics have arisen mostly because producers are allowed to use those antibiotics to feed animals. As shown in Europe, those antibiotics in animal feed are not necessary. They have been replaced by better sanitation and better ventilation.

You must at once ban animal uses of antibiotics used in human medicine. That is common sense and sound. Don't let the corporations continue to push you around. Thank you.

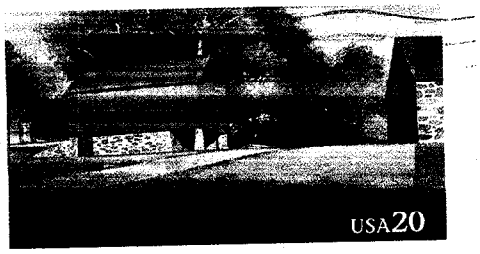
Darrell Wells, PhD, U. of Wisconsin

99P-0485

C 2577

Darrell Wells
RR 4 Box 233
Brookings, SD 57006-9118

SIOUX FALLS SD
PM
MAR
2000



Commissioner Jane Henney, MD
FDA
5600 Fishers Lane
Room 1471
Rockville, MD 20857

© USPS 1995