I am outraged about the new rules of Jan 18, 2001 concerning genetically engineered food. It is an insult to consumers. The public has a right to know what is and also what is not in food we buy. All food should be labeld as to content. If it has GE content it should be clearly stated and if it does not producers should be allowed to say so. That is not saying non GE is superior but simply giving a choice. Some GE foods may prove to be far superior to non GE but we should still have the right to know and choose. Correct labeling will definitely benefit those with medical and diet problems. GE foods should be throughly tested before allowing on the market. I am very concerned about the potential of unknown threat to the environment.
