Sirs:

This is to encourage the FDA to maintain the current labelling of irradiated foods by identifying them in sizeable print as "treated with radiation" or a similar notice. It is certainly possible that harmful effects from this irradiation may be recognized with research in the future even though it appears to be safe now. And it is only fair to alert consumers that the product may have a different consistency or flavor following irradiation.

The newness of this technology really permits no other course of action. Thank you.

Yours very truly
Kenneth R. Niswander, M.D.
