April 11, 1999

Dear Dr. Sundlof,

I strongly urge the FDA to stop the current practice of drugging farm animals to simply promote rapid growth. When animals are fed a nutritious diet & live in a healthy environment, medicine is not needed for normal growth.

Since bacteria become resistant to anti-biotics, medicine used for humans & animals becomes ineffective in maintaining human health.

Drugs should be used for animals to treat illness & not to promote growth. Let's follow the European Union's example & stop using drugs to promote growth.

Very truly yours, Celia Herman

99P-0485

C30

Celia Newman
377 N. 4th St.
Lindenhurst, NY 11757-3329

PM
13 APR
1999

USA20

Dr. Stephen Sundlof
FDA Ctr. for Veterinary Medicine
7500 Standish Place
Rockville, MD 20855