Sirs:
We feel it imperative to require prominent labeling on all irradiated foods. The federal government should not be involved in promoting irradiated foods by making everyone use them; it should not be promoting the nuclear industry - the production of wastes are already an acute problem. We understand 77% of the public wishes to avoid irradiated foods; this large majority should not be denied, by lack of labeling, the ability to choose what foods they purchase.

Also, we feel that the use of irradiation will allow more food of questionable purity on the market, under the assumption that its use will protect the consumer against contamination by careless practices.

Yours truly,

Joyce B. Soule
