Docket # 98-CN-1300

2011 '99 APR 30 A11:10

This comment is directed to the Food and Drug Administration's current policy of failure to require labeling or safety testing of genetically engineered foods.

As a consumer, who purchases food for a household, I want to know and feel it is my responsibility to know what I am buying. Any genetically engineered food, whether whole food or processed foods containing any amount of genetically engineered food should be labelled as such. As a consumer, I feel the FDA should perform testing on these genetically engineered foods to assure me that these foods are in no way a danger to my health.

I fully support the organic growing of foods and would never want to find out some years from now, that in any way, my health has been compromised by the unsuspected use of genetically engineered foods. For whatever our personal reasons, we as consumers have a right to know that the FDA has done everything possible to safegoard our food supply.
