The FDA should require food manufactures and processors to label all products treated with radiation, or manufactured from ingredients treated with radiation, with the radura symbol and "treated with radiation" warning in at least 12-point type. Americans who have their doubts about irradiated food should have information they need to make an informed consumer choice whether or not to buy it. Science, which has lauded nuclear power as "too cheap to meter" and "chance of an accident is one in 10,000 years" should not trump freedom — the people's right to know and decide for themselves.
