Dear Jane Henney,

Please help the U.S.A. come to its senses as European nations have and ban the use of medically useful antibiotics in animal feed. This will save human lives, because adding antibiotics to animal feed in order to promote growth can make bacteria resistant to those antibiotics. This causes a dangerous situation where M.D's have no way to treat life-threatening bacterial infections in humans. It would also be a good idea to ban anything in animal food that is not specifically part of the food itself, as meat never comes with a label about what additives have been put into it.

Just hope that you are never having to go to a hospital for cancer, like my cousins husband and then die of pneumonia because there are no more antibiotics that work on that particular strain. This is why I support the petition filed by Center for Science in the Public Interest.

Sincerely,

Dora Chang
