Dear Dr. Henney

2906 '99 JUN 14 P1:54

I am now retired and living in a suburban home but I was raised on an Iowa farm engaged in both grain and livestock production. From this background I wish to express my opposition to the use of antibiotics in livestock feed which are used simply to increase the profits of corporate agribusiness. I believe this unwarranted use of antibiotics is harmful to we humans who consume these products. The World Health Organization and the European Union are against use of the antibiotics and I think FDA should take a much stronger position against the antibiotics in livestock feed.

The livestock industry and drug manufacturers use lobbying to protect their profit-making positions. I urge you to take vigorous regulatory steps to protect the public health.

Sincerely, Kenneth D. Johnson
