Dear Ms Henney: 6/25/99

I understand that in May a lawsuit was filed challenging the FDA's policy NOT to require labels on foods that were produced by transgenic technology. I write to support the demands of that lawsuit for safety testing and complete and prominent labels on all such food products. None of us should be made unknowing guinea pigs (as the US made its soldiers be in nuclear tests after WW II) in the food industry's experiments with potentially dangerous foods & processes. I hope you will protect public health and at least let the public know

What They're getting.
If you don't let the public know, isn't that to be interpreted that you don't want the public to know because
1) either it really is harmful, or 2) you
don't want to bring the issue out in the open? ~~[illegible]~~ the lawsuit. You might
too. Barbara Heinrich
