Dear sirs,
Re Food Irradiation Labeling

Since many American are very much against the irradiation of their food, including me, my first statement is that we need to get back to sufficient regulations that protects the safety of our food. Back in 1997 the Food Safety Enforcement Act would have done a good job of this. Unfortunately, it failed to pass before that Congress adjourns.

If the FDA will persist in foisting this irradiation upon American citizens, then it is mandatory that labeling of irradiated foods be continued. I suggest that the label be enlarged, not discarded.

Recently the Americans have been treated like guinea pigs, and I think its illegal and dangerous to the nations health.

Please consider your policies with real deliberation and wisdom. Forget about corporate policy. Sincerely,

Lidwin A. Rose
