Dear Ms. Henney,

As a citizen of the U.S., one of the many freedoms that I value is my right to decide what food products myself and my family choose to consume. I make those choices based upon the information provided to me as a consumer, - by the product labels.

It has come to my attention that many foods are being genetically altered and the consumer is not being notified of this situation because the labels do not disclose this fact.

I am not comfortable at this point that these alterations are safe and choose to not have myself and my family consume these genetically altered foods. -

Since this concerns the health of my family and our nations future citizens I ask that you do all in your power to insure that due diligence is practiced in the labeling of these foods so that I and all Americans can make informed choices for our families.

I would appreciate your input on how we can make this happen - Thank you very much

Sincerely,
Linda G. Yiu
