Dear Jane Henney,

I am writing you for several reasons, the most recent of which is my concern over GMO or genetically modified organisms. First of all I feel that no one has the right to experiment with nature in such a way that could possibly contaminate the world's food source, through cross pollination with genetically altered materials. At the very least I shouldn't be forced to eat it against my wishes. & the FDA saying that labeling is not necessary essentially tells me that I no longer have the right to choose what I am eating. I demand labeling on GMO's. As well I demand labelling on nuclear irradiated food. I used to feel that the FDA was there to protect me but the more I learn the more I see that the FDA's primary concern is safeguarding the profits of monsanto & the other big food companys. You should be ashamed. This is such a violation of the responsibility entrusted you by the American people.

C 5760

As well, I'm writing to say "keep your hands out of Organic standards." Organic standards were started by people for people in the first place because your standards were considered by us as substandard.

I demand that GMO's, irradiated food are labled.

Sincerely

Rocco Salvatore
