To whom it may concern:

I'm writing to express my concern for human health, a concern which the FDA also professes to have. I am opposed to your approval of rBGH. rBGH has, unknown and know effects which are impacting human and animal health negatively. This synthetic hormone increase fat and decreases milk protein (casein) Fat seems to be abundant in the standard American diet, and alone create quite a bit of health risk. I am interested in farming. Healthy strong herds create better consumable products. Does rBGH create a healthy herd? Or does the quantity of the product increase while the quality declines!?

I have substitute taught in some of the inner citys of California. I witness for myself a great deal of young people "quite large and full bodied" but without the strength to complete even one chin-up. I've witnessed "fits" of Anger from youngsters allergic to BHT. I certain rBGH has that same potential.

I urge you to withdraw your approval of rBGH and see that it is banned from the market place until the full effects are at least understood. This substance along with other economically profitable and ecologically devestating products deserve greater attention and time to be studied so that their positive, and negative effects can be weighed for the long haul.

Sincerly

Thomas J. Wade

To Whom It May Concern:

As a citizen of The United States I am opposed to your approval of rBGH. rBGH has devastating health impacts on cows and likely will prove to have the same for humans, if we only study it carefully enough and for the long run.

Please withdraw your approval of rBGH and see that it is banned from the marketplace. This and all other genetically-engineered substances have absolutely no place in our food supply!

Sincerely,
Renée Wade
