To Jane Henney
Commissioner of FDA

Dear Commissioner Henney

'99 SEP 15 A9:54

I understand that antibiotics used to treat human disease are being fed to poultry cows and pigs. It seems that evidence is showing that the use of these drugs in feeding livestock may diminish the effectiveness of the drug in curing infections in people.

please look into this & if the above is true, do not allow this to continue.

Also the business of feeding animals parts of their own species is also a bad idea as well as hormones for growth.

Sincerely

Ginia Davis Wexler

P.S. I am so concerned about these questions, I have stopped eating meat & poultry altogether.
