Dear Ms. Henney:

I am a retired college teacher with high cholesterol. My doctor put me on Zocor, but later took me off Zocor because of signs of liver damage. After some research I decided to take a different approach - to find ways to help me process cholesterol so it would not do damage to my circulatory system. So I now take Vitamin E and Vitamin C supplements.

My wife, a retired nurse, is taking nutritional supplements as she battles osteoporosis.

My sister-in-law with an advanced case of bone cancer which spread from breast cancer is one a variety of nutritional supplements and is stable at this point.

We understand that claims have been filed regarding saw palmetto, psyllium husk seeds, folic, vitamins B6 + B12, and Vitamin E.

Please act promptly regarding these health claims supported by scientific evidence so that we the public can be properly informed.

Sincerely,
Lowell Noble
