Dear Mr. Lake:

I emphatically object to the United States agreeing to withold from its citizens information on issues of health — issues where a safe choice must be offered. For example, genetically-engineered products must clearly be labeled so that concerned citizens like me can avoid or even boycott such products.

If we are truly a democracy then we have the right to know which products have been tampered with for reasons of profit, monopoly, shelf-life, or built-in pesticides. All of this must be accomplished with clear and prominent labeling.

Thank you for reading my letter.

Cordially,

Richard Fuller
