Re: Proposal for listing of trans-fatty acids on nutritional labeling

I think its a very fine idea to list the amt. of trans-fatty acids on food labels. It does not require people to read this information, but many of us are eager to acquire all the information possible - good and bad - to make a wise choice on our diets. Probably the people against this proposal would be those manufacturers whose food items contain a great amount of this substance. I regularly check the nutritional values on labels, although I am not a nutritionist or work in that field. I cook for myself and sometimes my children and their families. I hope to continue good health and live more years, without too many problems. I would encourage any new health information when it becomes available, to be included on labeling.

Sincerely,
(Mrs.) Carol W. Lloyd
