Greetings,

Please grant the petition docket #98P-0151/CP1. There's no telling what animals who can't stand by themselves have. They should not be in the human food chain, IMHO. They might contaminate bacterially or have Mad Cow Disease of some form. Since you can really move these animals without great cruelty to them and they comprise such a small percentage of slaughter animals, it would seem a good tradeoff to not have to use heavy equipment to deal with them. It's sad to hear that most of the sickness could have been prevented with better handling; seems this docket would ~~provide~~ induce handlers to treat their stock better.

Thanks for listening -
