To whom It may Concern,

I have recently read an article concerning genetic engineering of foods & I am writing because I am very concerned about this practice; both from my viewpoint as a consumer + as a nurse.

I feel that we need further study before marketing these products which are genetically engeneered + even when marketed they need labeling in order for consumers to make educated decisions about personal health issues.

Consider the fact that medications are often withheld, by FDA, for our use because of the possibility of molecular changes and untoward effects on our systems. I feel we face the same dangers from foods + genetic engineering.

Thank you for your time and interest.

Sincerely yours,
Carolyn L. Lambert
