hm

November 2, 1999

2726 '00 JAN -6 A11:52

To: Jane E. Henney

I am writing to express great concern over the fact that antibiotics are being allowed to enter the food chain when they are fed to chickens to make them grow larger.

I have read that when humans eat products that have these antibiotics in them, that we become more likely to get "super-infections" that don't respond to most antibiotics, and now are becoming resistant to what had been effect treatment.

As a health care provider (Nurse) this really disturbs me. It is hard to provide care with treatments that may not even help. People may try to modify their diets to become more healthy, and the "healthy" foods they are eating may be making them sicker. This is wrong.

Please, do what you can to help.

Sincerely,
Katherine Linden

99P-0485

C2122

KATHERINE LENTEN
6702 NE PARK LN
OTIS OR 97368-9665

33USA

Jane E. Henney
FDA Commissioner
5600 Fishers Lane
Rockville, MD
20857