FDA:

Since it is fairly universally accepted that trans fats are even more damaging to your health than saturated fats it makes no sense to not list trans fats on food labels.

I understand there is a proposition currently before you to add such vital information to food labels. The only reason for not doing such will be the howls and crying from food manufacturers / processors. We, the public, need all the health information we can get if we are to be responsible for our health. Please do the right thing and require this much needed information on food labels.

The docket number I am referencing is 94P-0036.

Thank you.

Sincerely.
