Subject: Today's Sponge

After years on birth control pills. I have decided to stop taking these hormones. During my recent visit to grocery stores and drug stores I have seen no other types of birth control I would really like to consider trying. Then when I went onto the internet I went on line with Today's Sponge. These would be a birth control method I would really like to try, however with the FDA not moving forward millions of women like myself have to explore other means of birth control. In conversation with other women whom used these sponges in the past really miss having the option of using them. I myself would like to option to try this product. It can't be worse then birth control pills causing millions of women lots of side effects. Please help use and put the Today's Sponge back on the market!!!

Thank you
