Dear Dr. Henney:

I urge you to hasten action by the F.D.A. to ban the use of human antibiotics to make livestock grow faster. We must prevent diseases from becoming untreatable because of the use of drugs we need for food poisoning, staph infections and other diseases, to raise pigs, chickens, and cattle, causing bacteria to build up resistance against the antibiotics, which will then become useless in fighting disease.

Sincerely yours,
Nancy E. Ryther
