

References

1. Shannon et al. Ingestion of Toxic Substances by Children. NEJM 2000, 342(3): 186-191
2. Ipecac Syrup. Drugdex Drug Evaluations. Micromedex Systems. Retrieved 16 May 2003 at <http://csi.micromedex.com/DKS/DATA.DE.DF0067.HTM?Top=Yes>
3. American Academy of Clinical Toxicology, European Association of Poisons Centres and Clinical Toxicologists. Position statement: Ipecac Syrup. J. Toxicol Clin Toxicol 1997, 35(7): 699-709
4. Quang LS et al. Past, present, and future role of ipecac syrup. Current Opinion in Pediatrics 2000, 12:153-162
5. Bond GR et al. Influence of Time until Emesis on the Efficacy of Decontamination Using Acetaminophen as a Marker in a Pediatric Population. Ann Emer Med 1993, 22:403-7
6. Krenzelok EP. New developments in the therapy of intoxications. Toxicology Letters 2002, 127: 299-305
7. Kulig K et al. Management of Acutely Poisoned Patients without Gastric Emptying. Ann Emer Med 1985, 14:562-7
8. Merigian KS et al. Prospective Evaluation of Gastric Emptying in the Self-Poisoned Patient. Ann Emer Med 1990, 8(6):479-83
9. Pond SM et al. Gastric emptying in acute overdose: a prospective randomised controlled trial. Med J Aust 1995, 163:345-9
10. Kornberg AE. Pediatric Ingestions: Charcoal Alone versus Ipecac and Charcoal. Annals of Emer Med 1991, 20(6): 648-651
11. Albertson TE. Superiority of Activated Charcoal Alone Compared with Ipecac and Activated Charcoal in the Treatment of Acute Toxic Ingestions. Ann Emer Med 1989, 18(1): 56-59
12. Ipecac. Toxicologic Managements. Micromedex Systems. Retrieved 16 May 2003 at <http://csi.micromedex.com/DKS/DATA.MG.MG0150.HTM?Top=Yes>
13. How to Protect Your Child from Poison. Retrieved 16 April 2003 at www.acep.org/1.194.0.html
14. H-60998 Ipecac as Household Poison Emetic. Retrieved 16 April 2003 at www.amaassn.org/apps/pf_online/pf_online?f_n=browse&doc=policyfiles/HOD/H-60.998.HTM
15. H-60.995 Accidental Ingestions. Retrieved 16 April 2003 at www.amaassn.org/apps/pf_online/pf_online?f_n=browse&doc=policyfiles/HOD/H-60.995.HTM