Re: #00P-1211/CP1

Dear Ms. Henney,

As a concerned citizen and parent, I have recently become aware of the potential dangers of genetically engineered foods. Because I believe there is still a great deal to be learned about these food products I want to urge the FDA to develop thorough premarket testing procedures and labeling for these products. As a consumer, I want to know whether the food I am purchasing comes from genetically engineered plant products.

I am increasingly alarmed at the rate that these new food products are reaching the stores in my community as well as the increasing confusion over both the science and safety of these products. As I continue to educate myself on the science, please let me know what you are doing in support of long-term testing and product labeling. For the safety of my family and community, please take action on this important issue.

Sincerely,

Jonathan Beaver
