Dear Ms. Henney,

I am most concerned about the overuse, and unnecessary use, of antibiotics intended for human medical conditions to promote growth of animals. I urge you to help the FDA follow the very intelligent path that the European Union is on; due to its fear of untreatable infectious diseases it has banned all growth-promoting uses used in human medicine.

Must we wait for an irreversible crisis in health care?

Our family only purchases dairy products and poultry that are BGH-free, but that will not protect us should antibiotics fail us.

Please help change the current situation.

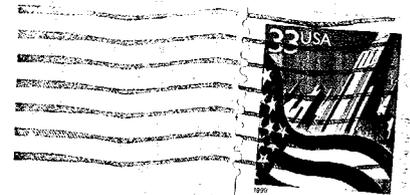

Sincerely,

Sandra Kopell
