To whom it may concern:

As a heart patient who is trying to keep arteries clear, I need to know if a food contains "trans fat", yet I find no reference to this on the labels of containers.

I'm told by doctors that transfat is as bad for me as is saturated fat. Is there any way information on this substance can be added to labels? I was also told the subject will be considered by the FDA on Docket number 94P-0036. I'd truly appreciate an affirmative decision.

Thank you.

Sincerely,

Richard Zoker
