Dear Secretary Shalala,

I am concerned about eating food that has been irradiated and feel that I should be aware of what I am getting when I buy food. I am particularly concerned that my two children eat organic non-irradiated foods.

Food undergoes chemical changes after being irradiated. This change warrants full disclosure on a food package. I feel it is our right to know as consumers any changes our food is put through.

Please defend the consumer's right to know, and resist any weakening of labeling requirements.

Sincerely,

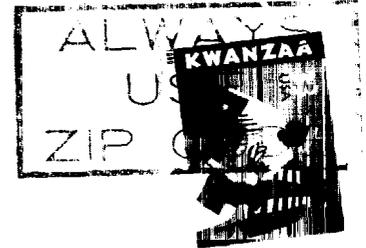

Nancy Cohn-Burke
