Dear Commissioner Jane Henny;

Please, I urge you to label GE Foods. I don't want to eat them. I want to have a choice. Is this really too much to ask? Isn't America about the freedom of expression and choice? By not requiring the labeling of GE Foods you are stepping on my rights to choose the food I want to eat. This is not right. Please, there is not enough research and long term studies on GE Foods. Furthermore, we have not explored the full detriment GE Foods might have on the environment.

I choose to eat organic foods, and this will soon no longer be possible because of contamination by GE Foods on organic crops through "genetic drift". In addition individuals who have specific medical, ethical, and religious dietary concerns may be unwittingly consuming foods that contain genes from other species. This is impinging on health and religious freedom in America.

Besides France and Europe will never, never consent to allowing GE Foods into their countries. They have a high esteem for real food. Food is a very serious affair in France. Believe me, I lived there. No matter how much money you spend on convincing them otherwise, they will never buy our altered poison. Food is a spiritual and almost religious experience. They want foods that are natural, mark my words. GE foods will never be accepted in Europe.

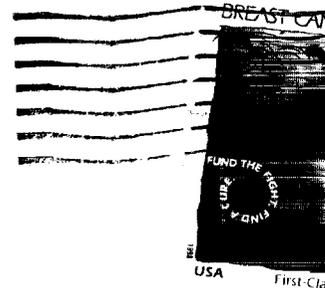

Sincerely,

Amanda Simms
