Dear Commissioner,

"Consumers should not be used as guinea pigs by companies which continue to sell genetically contaminated food", says Greenpeace, and it has created a shopping list of non-GE foods.

In the debate about genetically engineered foods, the ongoing issue is labeling, so that consumers can have the the opportunity to choose--GE foods or no. That seems only fair and not asking too much.

So far the FDA has ignored scientists, including its own experts, who warn about the risks of eating gene altered foods. After all, FDA personnel are also part of this experiment.

Sincerely,

Bernadette Soniefeld
