To Whom it may Concern,

I am taking this opportunity to comment on whether labeling requirements for irradiated foods should be removed.

I strongly support the labeling of irradiated foods. Without much labeling the consumer is not allowed to make an educated choice in regards to the food he or she buys. We must not allow irradiated foods to be "mixed in" with non-irradiated foods, for since all the effects such foods have on humans has not been researched, consumers must be allowed to make the choice.

Sincerely,
Cathy Zimmerman
