Dear Dr. Korangy:

I am writing to advise you that your mammography Accreditation Body has notified the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) that your facility was denied reaccreditation because it failed to meet the standards required for accreditation. FDA is unable to certify your facility without proof of accreditation. A certificate is required for lawful operation of a mammography facility. Upon receipt of this letter, you must cease performing mammography and you should no longer display your certificate, regardless of the date of expiration. The Mammography Quality Standards Act of 1992 (42 U.S.C. 263b) authorizes FDA to take regulatory action, including suspension or revocation of certification and civil money penalties, against facilities that practice mammography in violation of the law.

Please read the enclosed Denial of Reaccreditation Fact Sheet carefully. If you have any question about your accreditation, please contact your Accreditation Body directly. If you have questions about your FDA certificate or responsibilities associated with certification, you may contact FDA by using one of the following methods:
