

Retail Food Safety Partner:

Registration is now open for the 2022 FDA Retail Food Protection Seminar. The Seminar will be held September 19-22, 2022. Registration is free! This event is open to all interested in retail food safety, including all state, local, territorial and tribal regulators, standardized officers, industry and academia.

September 19th and 21st will include general sessions for all attendees. Highlights include:

- Keynote address from Dr. Laura Brown, PhD from the Centers for Disease Control
- Norovirus outbreak investigations
- Retail Food Safety Regulatory Association Collaborative updates, Employee health intervention strategies, Verbal Judo, and much more

On September 20th attendees are invited to participate in their regional jurisdiction's breakout session. These sessions will provide a great opportunity to connect with your colleagues from the Northeast, Central, Southeast, Pacific or Southwest. If you've never attended a local FDA seminar in the past, this is a great opportunity to make new connections and interact with others from your area. Sessions run staggered based on time zone, so you may be able to attend and listen to presentations from multiple sessions. However, don't worry if you're unable to do so or presentations you're interested in overlap. All breakout sessions will be recorded and available for later viewing by all registered attendees on the meeting website.

An optional Risk-Factor Study workshop is scheduled for September 22nd. The workshop is designed to help regulatory jurisdictions that wish to conduct a risk-factor study understand the best methods to conduct such a study to produce reliable data sets. Those who are looking to meet Standard #9 will benefit from attending, however the workshop is open to everyone!
