Introduction

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) is the regulatory, scientific, public health and consumer protection agency responsible for ensuring all human and animal drugs, medical devices, cosmetics, foods, food additives, drugs and medicated feeds for food producing animals, tobacco, and radiation emitting devices are safe and effective.

The mission of the Center for Drug Evaluation and Research (CDER) is to perform an essential public health task by ensuring that safe and effective drugs are available to improve the health of people in the United States. The mission of the Office of Compliance (OC) is to shield patients from poor quality, unsafe and ineffective drugs through proactive compliance strategies and risk-based enforcement actions.

The Office of Compounding Quality and Compliance (OCQC) aims to protect patients from unsafe, ineffective, and poor-quality compounded drugs, while preserving access to lawfully marketed compounded drugs for patients who have a medical need for them.

The Division of Compounding Policy and Outreach (DPCO) oversees the development and implementation of the Compounding Quality Center of Excellence, leads review of bulk drug substances nominated for use in compounding, directs the review and development of legislative proposals, directs collaboration with regulatory partners to promote voluntary compliance, and coordinates stakeholder outreach, education, and communication on human drug compounding guidance, requirements, and policies.

Evaluates, identifies, and helps address significant regulatory, policy, and legal problems and issues in areas where nominal policy guidance exists and requires prompt remediation.
- Engages with legal, regulatory, and policy personnel within FDA to address complex issues and establish precedence for initiatives or to identify and recommend an FDA position when policy is non-existent or inapplicable.
