Introduction:

The Center for Devices and Radiological Health (CDRH), a major regulatory component of the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and the Department of Health and Human Services, is inviting applications for a Deputy Division Director in the Office of Communication and Education (OCE), Division of Communication (DC).

Position Summary:

Located in the Division of Communication, the Deputy Division Director partners with the Division Director in developing and implementing the Center's external and internal communication strategy. The division provides strategic direction for and manages the development and release of external communication about FDA-regulated medical devices and radiation-emitting products and internal communication for CDRH employees about programmatic and organizational information. The division is comprised of the following three branches: External Communication, Internal Communication, and Web and Graphics.

Duties/Responsibilities:

Duties may include but are not limited to:

- Manage the development and implementation of strategic plans, messaging, and related communication materials, simplifying complex technical, legislative, regulatory, legal or other general issues.

- Participate with the Division Director in developing Division program plans and short- and long-term goals for presentation to the Office Director; provides leadership and overall direction to staff and for managing the Division budget.
- Work with the Branch Chiefs to implement communication outreach goals, including publishing and managing CDRH content on FDA.gov and Inside.FDA.gov.
- Serve as an advisor and technical authority for the Division on policy, program, and implementation planning issues within the public health area.
- Lead multidisciplinary teams to create, deliver, and market health information about medical devices using customer-centered and science-based information.
- Establish and maintain liaison with other components of the Center, agency, and national and international stakeholders.

Supervisory Responsibilities:

Supervisory duties may include, but are not limited to:

- Managing a multi-disciplinary scientific and professional staff by working with the Branch Chiefs to review strategies for problem analysis and resolution.
- Analyzing and reporting on work prepared by staff; and providing guidance for presentation of materials to Office, Center, and FDA management as well as outside organizations.
- Performing administrative and human resources management functions relative to the staff supervised such as developing and reviewing staff performance plans; and conducting and overseeing progress reviews and performance appraisals.
- Defining jobs, selecting employees, and assigning work; define technical work requirements and milestones; evaluate the organization and employee accomplishments by accepting or rejecting work products, and present and defend organization and employees work to senior management and other offices.

Professional Experience/Key Requirements:

To qualify for this position, you must possess technical experience and expertise which includes:

- Extensive knowledge and understanding of communication best practices sufficient to advise the Center and Agency about strategies and programs designed to communicate with the public about the benefits and risks of FDA-regulated products; and ensure meaningful and successful internal communications to keep employees well-informed.
- Managing or overseeing fast-evolving public health communication activities or programs for an office or team.
- Experience developing and reviewing communication materials and strategies using traditional and digital communication approaches to disseminate public health information to patients, health professional, media, and the general public.
- Ability to skillfully engage and collaborate with multidisciplinary stakeholders to address communication needs.
- Demonstrated ability to consolidate and balance resource needs of multiple projects in a functional activity or Division.
- Inclusive leadership qualities and managerial abilities, including advocacy and influencing, initiating, and implementing change, and people management.

Reasonable Accommodation Policy

Federal agencies must provide reasonable accommodation to applicants with disabilities where appropriate. Applicants requiring reasonable accommodation for any part of the application process should follow the instructions in the job opportunity announcement. For any part of the remaining hiring process, applicants should contact the hiring agency directly. Determinations on requests for reasonable accommodation will be made on a case-by-case basis.

A reasonable accommodation is any change to a job, the work environment, or the way things are usually done that enables an individual with a disability to apply for a job, perform job duties or receive equal access to job benefits.

Under the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, federal agencies must provide reasonable accommodations when:

- An applicant with a disability needs an accommodation to have an equal opportunity to apply for a job.
- An employee with a disability needs an accommodation to perform the essential job duties or to gain access to the workplace.
- An employee with a disability needs an accommodation to receive equal access to benefits, such as details, training, and office-sponsored events.

You can request a reasonable accommodation at any time during the application or hiring process or while on the job. Requests are considered on a case-by-case basis.
