

Limitations: The adverse event and product problem reports contained in this record are not necessarily causally related to (caused by) the reported product, nor do they mean the product was defective. Consumer complaints involving animal foods are received by FDA through voluntary reporting systems. Not all reports undergo follow up actions by FDA; however, each report received is important to FDA as part of our ongoing surveillance efforts related to pet food safety. Trends in reporting can provide an early warning of emerging safety issues of concern.

Other limitations:

- For any given report, there is no certainty that the reported pet food caused the adverse event. The adverse event(s) reported may be more related to an underlying disease, condition, or concomitantly administered medication.
- The report narratives are provided in the form in which we received them, the quality of the information provided about the adverse event/product problem is dependent on the quality of the information received from the veterinarian and/or pet owner.
- Adverse event report numbers should not be used to calculate incidence rates or measures of relative risk. It is not data from a controlled study, and there is no accurate way to know the true size of the population exposed to a product, nor the true population affected with an adverse event.
- Adverse event data should not be used to compare the safety of different products. Many factors can influence reporting, and products that are more widely distributed or sold in greater volume may have more reporting than those with limited distribution or sales. Products for which there has been recent publicity may experience more reporting for a period of time afterwards. Underreporting is also common with adverse event reporting systems.

They are adding supplements from China to their treats Whole Hearted Beef sticks. I called them to find out the source of the product and was told their supplements come from China, Chile, etc because they cannot get them in USA. I go out of my way to not purchase products from other countries because of the many tainted products that cause death to dogs, etc. They are telling the truth. I wonder what other products that they are stating that they do not use anything other than USA.

EON-386358	4/30/2019 11:32	Kibbles 'nBits Bistro	I recently incurred a $400 vet bills after rushing my 9 year old &gt;10lb jack russel terrier (b) (6) to an emergency vet after consuming kibbles n' bits wet food. I purchased the food (3 cans) since his teeth are in poor shape and i wanted to give him a break from dry food. I have other dogs on the same dry food he was on before and after the kibbles and bits and they exhibited no symptoms. He was the only dog to get symptoms and the only one who consumed the kibbles and bits. after the first day he consumed the kibbles and bits he was falling down the stairs, and the second day he ate it, he began dragging his back legs behind him. I rushed him to the emergency vet and they told me they were unable to test for that drug but that it would cause those same symptoms. They said he also could have slipped a disk in his back. I believe it is highly likely that this condition was caused by the food since after 9+ years of no such symptoms he only exhibited them during the two days he consumed this food. I also believe that even a small amount could hurt him due to his age and weight. After doing some research I found that the same food (UPC listed by FDA) had previously been recalled due to pentobarbital for causing these exact symptoms. I contacted Kibbles and Bits and requested they cover the vet bill and had the vet submit them all the information but they refused. They claim this must have been a coincidence. They also initially offered to have the food tested for me and then later refused. I have worked in quality assurance in the animal feed industry for 6+ years and find this handling of my complaint unacceptable.	9	Years	Terrier - Jack Russell	Dog	10	Pound

			Causes of increased drinking and urination include but are not limited to a urinary tract infection, chronic kidney disease, Cushing disease (excessive steroid production from the adrenal glands), psychogenic polydipsia (excessive drinking from boredom), etc. An SDMA was submitted to the lab to evaluate for early kidney disease. The abdominal ultrasound revealed thickening of urinary bladder which may be secondary to a urinary tract infection. Amoxicillin does not penetrate the prostate. Therefore, it was discontinued and marbofloxacin was implemented. Glucose was present in the urine which may be secondary to insult to the kidney from eating chicken jerky. Recheck urine was submitted to the lab to evaluate for persistent glucose in the urine. If persistent glucose in the urine is present, additional recommended but be made pending a conversation with the FDA. Abdominal ultrasound revealed a mass associated with the spleen. There is concern that the splenic mass may be neoplastic (cancerous). Thoracic radiographs were performed to evaluate for spread of cancer. Overt cancer was not identified. Two-thirds of masses associated with the spleen are cancerous and 2/3s of cancerous masses associated with the spleen are hemangiosarcomas - cancer associated with the blood vessels. Masses associated with spleen can rupture with subsequent blood filling in the abdomen. Clinical signs would include lethargy, collapse, pale (white) gums, etc. If these clinical signs are noted, (b) (6) would need to be evaluated immediately, as rupture of the spleen can be a life threatening disease. Unfortunately, the prognosis is considered poor. A needle aspirate was not performed today because the mass appeared cavitated. Surgery would be needed to remove the spleen. Additional Diagnostic Recommendations: none Current Plan: 1. Marbofloxacin 100mg tablets, #35 (antibiotic): Give 2.5 tablets orally every 24 hours for suspected urinary tract infection.

			2. Discontinue amoxicillin 3. Monitor for vomiting, diarrhea, lethargy, collapse, pale (white) gums, etc. If noted, please seek veterinary attention. 4. I will update you with the pending diagnostics tomorrow. 5. A urine culture is recommended one week after the zeniquin is finished. This can be performed with your veterinarian or myself. ADDENDUM: The urinalysis revealed USG 1.024, bili 1+, glucose trace, neg ketones, blood 2+, pH 7.5, protein 3+, WBC 50-75, RBC 30-50, rare rods present. EON-386099	4/26/2019 15:38	Sheba Perfect Portions patein natural juices Savory Chicken Entree	I am a retired vet tech. This report follows up my previous report, OMB Approval # 0910-0645 Submitted Oct 31, 2017. Please refer to 0910-0645 for initiating details to this commercial cat food poisoning. Since the initial event, (b) (6) (cat) health has deteriorated. 1) First, he lost 2.5 lbs over the winter from periodically vomiting after meal, roughly once every 2 weeks. Otherwise he seemed okay for a while. 2) Then he was somewhat less active during most of 2018, and drinking and urinating roughly twice his normal intake/output. 3) In April 2018, we took him to our vet who diagnosed Grade 2-3 luxating patellas, and recommend cosequin or similar arthritis supplement. He did not tolerate the supplements (diarrhea), so we did not continue. 4) He returned to his normal gait within 8 weeks and was walking as he normally did most of his life. But his drinking and urinating began to increase significantly more throughout the summer into fall. We tested his urine both at home and through our vet. Other than mildly dilute, there were no other abnormalities. 5) (b) (6) appetite started to become more voracious than usual in the cooler weather (he is an indoor cat with free access to an outdoor enclosure, which he uncharacteristically did not frequent most of 2018). Vet visit on Dec 10, 2018 revealed renal failure, mild anemia, and electrolyte imbalance. Vet recommended no aggressive treatment at that time, just low phosphorus diet. We added a potassium supplement. 6) When (b) (6) appetite became even more voracious and he gained 2.5 lbs in just 5 weeks, we took him for another consultation at the vet Jan 29, 2019. Renal failure and anemia had progressed; thyroid function was normal. Vet does not suspect hyperadrenocorticism as an explanation for the voracious eating, rather, possible other organ damage (brain and/or pituitary). Vet recommended reducing and monitoring food, which we had already begun doing. Vet also provided fluids for SubQ therapy at home. We began potassium, B vitamin and iron supplements also. Followup visit on Feb 13, 2019 revealed severe anemia, while renal failure appeared to be stable. Vet discouraged stressing (b) (6) with invasive testing. [Update]: As of April 26, 2019, (b) (6) condition continues to deteriorate: Little to no grooming while he exhibits constant food seeking behavior, voracious appetite when food is given, no weight loss, excessive drinking/urinating, while receiving 100ml SQ lactated ringers q.o.d. since Feb. vet	11	Years	Domestic (unspecified)	Cat	10	Pound visit. We continue to monitor his QOL while attempting to make him as comfortable as possible until we determine his condition is no longer sustainable. Note: The second cat, (b) (6) , who also ingested the suspect food, has since continually exhibited food allergy behavior; he chews the fur on his abdomen, around his anus, and a few inches along the underneath of his tail, and subsequently vomits the hair. Dietary manipulation has offered minor results thus far.

My previously active dog (requiring 3hrs of walks per day) suddenly slowed down drastically in September 2018. I noticed decreased excercise tolerance (only able to walk 1hr per day), slower walking, increased fatigue, increased panting. I took her to see a Cardiologist in Jan 2019 and she was diagnosed with mitral valve prolapse/dilated cardiomyopathy by exam/Echocardiogram. We went to see a second Cardiologist in April 2019 who confirmed the diagnosis of mitral valve prolapse/dilated cardiomyopathy; the second Cardiologist asked us to check if (b) (6) was eating grain free Acana kibble. I checked the packages and confirmed that her kibble is grain free. EON-385943	4/25/2019 12:16	Blue buffalo life protection formula Large breed puppy Chicken and brown rice recipe	I purchased a 30lbs bag of blue buffalo large breed puppy chicken Life Protection food when I first adopted the puppy in February. She had diarrhea and soft stools so I brought her to the vet who said maybe it's too much food even though I followed the recommended amount written on the bag. We listened and gave her less. One day she took some of my other dog's food (weight management blue buffalo life protection chicken large breed) and had solid stool after eating the different food, same brand and product line. I purchased another bag from Petco in (b) (6) with a different amount (15 lbs) with a different lot and expiration date, and she had solid stools. I have the proof of purchase and lot information in photographs. I sent this information to blue Buffalo. I recently bought another large 30lbs bag of the same puppy food from Menards on (b) (6) and she had diarrhea again the day after. I returned the food to Menards and told them of the issue and I proceeded to buy a 15 lbs bag of the exact same food with a different lot and expiration date and the puppy is fine. Therefore there is an issue with the food that blue buffalo is not acknowledging. They did not respond to my second inquiry.	5	Months	Shepherd Dog - German	Dog	31	Pound

She ate the treat, and then I noticed that she was chewing/licking at something - she had uncovered a piece of jagged plastic that was in the treat, and was licking the remaining treat residue off of it. The piece was over 1.5" long, and had perpendicular pieces approximately 0.5" across; visually it resembles a spine. The entire thing was very sharp. Fortunately, it does not appear that she swallowed any additional pieces of plastic, and fortunately she did not swallow this piece which would have been extremely dangerous.

She had been to our family vet in mid-February 2019 to have a split nail removed while under light sedation and there were no issues with her heart or breathing or abdomen at that time. She weighed 60 lbs then. She typically weighs around 65. She had a slight cough during the weeks following that visit but it wasn't enough to cause concern. The weekend of March 24-25 she had an episode at the dog park where she appeared to get dizzy and/or winded after running around. We left the park and I monitored her the next couple days. She appeared to get weaker and more tired as the days went by and her abdomen became swollen. She saw our family vet again on April 5. The vet found via X-ray that she had a large amount of fluid buildup in her abdomen and possibly her chest and her heart appeared to be extremely enlarged, taking over more than 60% of her chest cavity. The vet drew blood and fluid for testing, and also performed an Abdominocentesis to remove some of the fluid and help her breathe easier. She was prescribed Furosemide and Elanapril and given a referral to a canine cardiologist. On Wednesday April 10 I took (b) (6) to the emergency vet, MedVets, because she was struggling to breathe so much. She was kept under oxygen over night and was taken to see the canine cardiologist in the morning. The cardiologist diagnosed her with Stage C Dilated Cardiomyopathy, caused by either a grain-free diet or hypothyroidism. The thyroid test ruled out the latter.	6	Years	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	60	Pound

She ate the dog food for 5 days, but on the 6th day, she would not eat at all, was lethargic and seemed to have a stomach ache. I woke up that morning and she seemed a little off. I saw that she was leaking a bit from her behind area so I just wiped it away. I then left for work. Around 11:00am my sister texted me a photo and in the photo it appeared that there was a tar like liquid that came out of one of our dogs. At first she thought it came from our older dog, but then quickly discovered it was from my youngest (b)(6) who is about 4 years old. My Sister took her for a walk and she seemed weaker. She then called me and I left work. In the meantime my sister called the Vet's Office. We got there early. I had (b) (6) in my arms in a wrapped blanket. They told me that I was too early for the appointment. I placed (b) (6) on the ground and she looked like she could stand and was about to fall down. They got a Vet to check her quickly. The temp was normal but they wanted to run blood work asap, but in their office the could only do it overnight and (b) (6) seemed critical. We went to the place the vet referred us to which was a 24 hour clinic in (b) (6) called (b)(6) . They ended up running blood tests and a sonogram. They told me that there could possibly be different causes of what could of happened. But they mentioned on several occasions rodenticide ingestion. I was like no, we live in a private house in (b) (6) . We have two other dogs at home so that wouldnt be the case. (The other dogs didnt eat the hill's food) We watch her while she walks so she didn't eat anything from the outside. They also asked if anything recently changed and the only thing me and my sister could think of was her eating the science diet dry food. Her condition was very critical, and she didn't look like she was going to make it so we all decided that it was best to put her down. I can not explain in words how crushed I am. I didn't think too much into the food or what happened at that very moment because I was completely overwhelmed. After, I decided to do some research. I googled to see if anyone else had the same experience and saw that there was a ton of other people complaining that their dogs died too because of the dry dog food as well. I tried to reach out to Hill's and got a very generic answer from them saying its only the canned food not the dry food. I was wondering what could I do? Someone mentioned getting in touch with the State feed control office. I'd really like something done so that other people don't have to go what I went through. I want the word out, I want Hill's to take accountability. What do you suggest I do? I feel a little lost at this point and need some guidance. Thank you for reading my long winded email. On the morning of April 16th, 2019, he had a seizure that last approximately a minute and a half. He fell backwards and his body started to convulse, and muscle were very stiff. Towards the end he was foaming at the mouth. Once his muscled relaxed I picked him up to calm him down but he did not recognize me or my husband for about three minutes. At about five minutes he seemed to have completely regained full muscle control. I'm not sure if this is related but a day and a half after he ate the flea and tick medicine he couldn't walk very well, so he didn't go on his normal walks and stayed home and rested.	9	Years	Terrier - Australian	Dog	17	Pound

Within days he started vomiting "shard-like" two inch+ long pieces of the treats. Then he stopped eating altogether. Took him to the vet where they said his heart was enlarged more than they could believe taking up half his thoracic cavity. They couldn't believe he was still living. EON-385154	4/16/2019 6:52	Acana Wild Prairie	Our previously healthy, purebred golden retriever (b) (6) started to lose his appetite over a period over several months over the summer. He had been on a diet of 'Acana Wild Prairie' grain-free dog food for most of his adult life. https://acana.com/our-foods/dog-foods/regionals/wild-prairie/ In September, his health rapidly deteriorated as he became weak and his breathing laboured. We took him to the vet, who was unable to find anything obviously wrong initially. We returned to the vet several days later as (b) (6) was showing signs of abdominal effusion/ascites. We took him to an emergency specialist who imaged his organs with both ultrasound and an x-ray and discovered that his heart was very enlarged and weakened. The vet diagnosed he had advanced Dilated Cardiomyopathy (DCM). He was kept for two days on an intensive drip of diuretics, recovering slightly and then sent home with oral medications. (b) (6) died suddenly a week later from cardiac arrest while being brought back to the vet for a follow up exam. After speaking to the veterinary specialist, the dog breeder and researching peer-reviewed literature, the best explanation we can find fo what happened was that (b) (6) died of taurine deficient DCM, which has been linked to grain-free diets. We want to flag this issue as very real and worth further investigation. EON-385103	4/15/2019 15:36	Pur Luv Grande Bones Bacon Flavor	My dog vomited multiple times the day after ingesting one Pur Luv Grande Bones (Bacon Flavor). I was horrified by the large, hard as rocks, chunks that came out of her a full day after I gave her this treat. I actually initially though that maybe she had somehow ingested rocks (impossible since she is never left unattended outside)! These treats are clearly NOT DIGESTIBLE since a full day of stomach acid did NOTHING to break down the pieces of this treat that she ingested. I took her to the vet immediately and am grateful that he did not detect any other chunks causing blockages in her system. She experienced some diarrhea also as her stomach was clearly upset! I took another bone out of the bag and soaked it in hot water and could not even so much as scrape it with my fingernail! EON-385046	4/14/2019 22:44	Performatrin Ultra® Grain-Free Foothills Recipe Dog Food	(b) (6) my dog is a 10 year old coc-a-poo weighing about 50 lbs. She has always been update with all vaccines, wellness visits, and is well taken care of. Last year (early spring 2018) at her physical she was examined and nothing was noted about her heart. I live near a Petvalu and that had been where I was buying my food. At that time, she was eating Performatrin Ultra Lamb and Brown Rice and had been doing so for a while. (Performatrin Ultra is their "house" food) A few months later, (Spring/Summer 2018) she developed an infection in her anal gland. At that time, she was reevaluated by the Vet and still no signs of anything about her heart. I went to Petvalu and explained to them the situation. They recommended I use their Limited Ingredient Grain Free Sweet Potato and Venison formula. I used this for a few months until there was a problem with "distribution" and hey could no longer get the food. At that time, it was advised to me by the store that since my dog has been doing well with it and not showing signs of a gland problems, I should stick with the Performatrin Line and it could be a good idea to use the Performatrin Ultra Grain Free Foothills Recipe Food since it had Venison in it. I specifically asked the employees on several occasions about the DCM crisis with grain free foods and dogs. I was re-assured by the staff that their house brands are safe to use. This past March (2019) when (b) (6) had her routine physical, the vet got very worried while using the stethoscope and told me he could hear a significant heart murmur. He requested all the techs to hold (b) (6) down because he wanted to re do his stethoscope listening. He was clearly concerned and referred me to a dog cardiologist. On April 1st, I went to the Cardiologist at the (b) (6). She went through an Echo cardiogram and some other routine exams and was diagnosed with Dilated Cardiomyopathy, degenerative valve disease, mitral valve regurgitation, left atrial enlargement, and ventricular enlargement with mildly decreased heart muscle function. I was given several medications to fill and supplements to buy. I contacted Petvalu to complain and told them i wanted them to pay for (b) (6) medical bills. They had someone reach out to me and ask me for her to get a Taurine blood test done and they would be willing to pay for it. I did that on April 5th and began her medications Sunday April 7th 2019. I will notify PetValu when i get the results of the Taurine Test. I have yet to receive any money from Petvalu.	10	Hours	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	48	Pound

EON-385025	4/14/2019 13:20	PureBites Chicken Breast Freeze Dried	(b) (6) both started vomiting from eating PureBites Chicken and PureBites Whitefish. We did not think anything of it at first because cats puke all the time. (b) (6) stopped eating the PureBites so she is fine, but (b) (6) continued eating it and almost became addicted to it, making it his main source of food. Eventually his vomiting became terrible and we brought him into the Vet on (b) (6) this point he had eaten the PureBites almost exclusively for several weeks prior but from (b) (6) he had stopped eating and drinking altogether. This continued up until this morning when he passed away, (b) (6) (b) (6). We have been to several vets over the past couple weeks and after several diagnostic tests, they suspected he had cancer but have provided us no proof of it. Initial cytology came back negative and we are awaiting additional cytology post-mortem. We mentioned to the vets several times that he had only eaten this food for several weeks prior to him getting sick. The vets basically ignored us regarding this. He lost about 10 lbs over the span of a few weeks so dietary issue should have been investigated by the vets. My (b) (6) and I suspect that the food may have salmonella or be otherwise unsafe as we have read complaints on Amazon and other sources regarding this food. Obviously we realize now that the food does not have proper nutrients to be used exclusively for diet and vitamin deficiency may have played a role. At this point we would really like to have the remainder of the food we have tested. It will not help save our (b) (6) but could alert other pet owners that the PureBites treats may be harmful or deadly to their pets.	11	Years	Domestic Shorthair	Cat	19	Pound

EON-384972	4/13/2019 11:40	Zignature Canned dog food	We fed our Dog the canned Zignature Duck food that we had been giving for almost a year. Around March 2019 our dog had blood around his mouth and we couldn't figure out what it was coming from. Then in the first week of April he had an episode of loose stools and blood again on his mouth. We looked in his food dish and noticed there were pieces of bone measuring around 7mm with the largest piece about 12 mm before we broke it apart while trying to figure out what they were. We called Zignature and sent the pictures. They determined that their grinder had broke and it was bone. They had stated that they did not have to recall unless it was over 4mm. Even after being told by myself and our vet that bone measured over the 4mm. I was told that they would not recall and they sent an email stating they spoke to our vet and our vet agreed that bone is healthy for dogs. Our vet however did not say that these large pieces were safe for our dog with IBD. The bones are so sharp and jagged I do not want other dogs to get hurt. We were emailed that a supervisor would be calling me about our concerns but they never called.	2	Years	Poodle - Miniature	Dog	38	Pound

EON-384967	4/13/2019 10:20	SmartBones Large Chicken Chew Bones Dog Treats 3 pack	Our healthy 8 year old dog, (b) (6), died on (b) (6) due to consuming SmartBones Large Chicken Chew Bones Dog Treats on (b) (6). She had never had SmartBones and it was a (b) (6). She consumed 3 SmartBones dog treats that day and was extremely thirsty late the following night, 1(b) (6), drank a lot of water then subsequently vomited a very large amount two times (mostly liquid) immediately following drinking the water. She was extremely lethargic, would not eat, and her abdomen was sensitive to the touch all the following day and night, (b) (6). She also had trouble walking and continued to vomit when she drank water (continued not to eat and moved very little). We thought it was something just upsetting to her stomach that would pass with time, but early on the morning of (b) (6), she would not move and was conscious but did not respond at all to our saying her name so I brought her to the (b) (6) Vet immediately (had to carry her to the car on a small rug) and she was rushed to the back. She was diagnosed with acute/severe pancreatitis and acute diabetes (had a clean bill of health at her (b) (6) annual physical). When the vet, (b) (6), did an abdominal ultrasound, it was discovered that there was a clot in (b) (6) spleen, which surprised her. (b) (6) treated (b) (6)r with IVF, methadone, anzemet, cerenia, protonix, and metronidazole and stated that although (b) (6) was in an emergent condition at the time and continued to have vomiting and diarrhea, she was slowly improving with the medication. She said pancreatitis can sometimes result in clots but everything was treatable over time, and that the spleen could be removed in a few weeks once (b) (6) was stable. She remarked several times that it was a very acute case of diabetes and pancreatitis, per the amount of liquid around the organ (it appeared to all happened very recently). (b) (6) stayed overnight at the emergency vet and we were told she would likely have to stay there for 5-7 days, however the following morning of (b) (6) at 8:48am, she suffered acute cardiopulmonary arrest. The vet and tech heard (b) (6) loudly exhale her last breath so (b) (6) said they pulled her out of her run immediately and began resuscitation efforts for 15 minutes until they finally called it. (b) (6) believed (b) (6) threw another clot to her brain or lungs to cause death. Clots that were likely a result of the acute pancreatitis that was caused by the ingredients (and/or toxins) in the SmartBones she ingested days before.	8	Years	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	32.5	Kilogram

EON-384630	4/9/2019 23:16	Adored Beast Apothecary Healthy Gut Digestive Enzyme/Pre & Probiotic	I want to file a complaint with the FDA on the Canadian Company Adored Beast Apothecary. In December 2017 I made a purchase order with the company Dogs Naturally. My order contained items manufactured from Adored Beast Apothecary. In April of 2018, my Labrador Retrievers (b) (6) came into heat, and I was going to breed both Labs intentionally. I had previously bred (b) (6) the summer before, in 2017. I was using (b) (6), working with (b) (6) and the breeding was successful. (b) (6) had nine or ten puppies; I could check my records. This was (b) (6) first breeding. As (b) (6) were progressing in their heat cycles (b) (6) was moving ahead; she was being monitored through progesterone testing. Her LH Peak arrived, and we ordered a shipment from (b) (6) to come as the ovulation progressed. Our Vet (b) (6) specializes in (b) (6). She handled (b) (6) previous breeding. Two healthy placements were deposited into (b) (6) on separate days. The same process was done to (b) (6) It was after both breedings that I began using Adored Beast Healthy Gut, and it is labeled as an Enzyme with a Pre-Probiotic. The reason I was using the Healthy Gut was that my male Labrador (b) (6) was eating poop. I had read that dogs eating feces was because they may be lacking an enzyme. I carefully read the entire label for Healthy Gut and saw that there was no warning for use in pregnant or lactating dogs. Other products from Adored Beast did indeed have warning labels and cautioned against use in pregnant or lactating animals. It has been my opinion that Enzymes and Pre-Probiotics are generally safe for almost all to use? I thought Healthy Gut would be a positive additive to my Labs intake. (b) (6) was scheduled to receive an ultrasound four weeks into her pregnancy. A protocol used to determine success, and its always fun seeing the progress. As the doctor was exploring (b) (6) uterus, she seemed troubled. I was videoing the procedure on my phone. She saw what she believed to be a fetus/ fetuses in	5	Years	Retriever - Labrador	Dog	77	Pound

			resorption. She asked me to make a return appointment in one week to make sure that the mass continued to reduce in size. She also asked me to watch for any distress in (b) (6) and any signs of pyometra. (b) (6) was behaving normally, and we returned for the one-week appointment, the mass was continuing to reduce in size and (b) (6) was satisfied that (b) (6) pregnancy had become a miscarriage. It was (b) (6) time to receive her ultrasound; again I was videotaping and looking forward to a much positive outcome. Still, almost identical to (b) (6) situation, happened to Violet. I was at a loss to what could have happened. The only real change was the Adored Beast Healthy Gut. I began to research the product's ingredients and found some alarming warnings. I saw many articles and a study done on Papain and Oxbile. Over and Over again there were warnings about consuming papain while pregnant or breastfeeding. It read Special Precautions &amp; Warnings: Pregnancy and breastfeeding: Taking papain by mouth during pregnancy is POSSIBLY UNSAFE. There is a concern that it might cause birth defects or miscarriage. Not enough is known about the safety of using papain during breastfeeding. Do not use it if you are pregnant or breastfeeding. Here is Another; Why you should avoid latex in papaya The type of latex in unripe papaya should be avoided by pregnant women because: <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• It might trigger marked uterine contractions, leading to early labor.</li><li>• It contains papain which your body may mistake for the prostaglandins sometimes used to induce labor. It may also weaken vital membranes that support the fetus.</li><li>• It is a common allergen that could trigger a dangerous reaction.</li><li>• The takeaway</li></ul> Although ripe papaya can be a beneficial part of nutrition for pregnant women, unripe papaya can be very dangerous

Key	Created	Product Name	Description	Age	Age UOM	Breed	Species	Weight	Weight UOM
			A study; The results of the present study suggest that normal consumption of ripe papaya during pregnancy may not pose any significant danger. However, the unripe or semi-ripe papaya (which contains a high concentration of the latex that produces marked uterine contractions) could be unsafe in pregnancy. Though evaluation of potentially toxic agents often relies on animal experimental results to predict risk in man, further studies will be necessary to ascertain the ultimate risk of unripe papaya-semi-ripe papaya consumption during pregnancy in man. I have these with the websites I took them from on a Word Document. I emailed Adored Beast Apothecary on June 4th, 2018, and asked them if any of the ingredients could cause a miscarriage in an intentionally bred dog. I am enclosing the emails in an attachment. That was the only response we received from Adored Beast. I am pursuing to file a judgment against Adored Beast Apothecary for compensatory and punitive damages for failure to have a warning label for pregnant or lactating animals. After my initial contact and expressing my concern with their potential product Healthy Gut, Adored Beast has now placed a warning label on their Healthy Gut. Adored Beast Apothecary has attained a lawyer, Jason Sacha. He is now handling the matter. Jason Sacha Direct 647.255.3242 Fax 647.255.3244 jsacha@elementlaw.ca Thank you for addressing my concerns and direction in which to file my complaint. Thank you for your time. Best regards, (b) (6)

EON-384332	4/6/2019 11:04	Prescription Hill R/D Weight Redution, Prescription Hill R/D, Prescription Hill L/D	(b) (6) was placed on Prescription Hill's R/D after being on Blue Buffalo Salmon for years and than she was prescribed Prescription Hill L/D. (b) (6) started to piddle every day in the house while lying down, urinate excess amounts, drink more water and started to have a strange gait. She is extremely well-trained and never had an accident in the house except during her puppy years while training, let alone urinate on herself while lying down. It appeared as though she was unaware that she had to urinate. She then started to drink more water and turned away her food. I took her to the veterinarian and several tests were performed, CBC, urinalysis and urine culture. Her liver enzymes were extremely elevated. The veterinarian decided to place (b) (6) on Prescription Hill L/D for her liver and prescribed medication (Amoxicillin 200 mg and Metronidazole 250 mg). After receiving the medications from the office, I researched the medications prescribed and realized Metronidazole is damaging to the liver. I contacted the vet and had a lengthy discussion; (b) (6) was given Amoxicillin only and the Metronidazole was returned to the vet as discussed and agreed. Another blood test was performed thereafter and her liver enzymes were climbing although her diet changed - Prescription Hill L/D. The veterinarian re-tested the urine/urine culture to rule out Cushings Disease; came back negative. The vet believed perhaps the issue was hormone deficiency and prescribed Diethylstilbesterol Tabs 1mg to hopefully eliminate the piddling. She was taking the hormone supplement for @ 3 days, the piddling diminished and than started again in 2 days. I than noticed a blood clot when she urinated. During this time, (b) (6) was eating less and less... I was throwing out most of her prescribed dog food and each day she was eating less. I substituted foods that were good for fatty liver (alleged diagnosis). I made her chicken soup with carrots, peas, pasta without any Prescription Hill's food. She was doing much better. I than re-introduced the Prescription Hill food and she started to piddle yet again, drink more water and urinate excessively. (b) (6) developed black, tarry stools, than diarrhea, than constipation. She started to vomit, urinate excessively while lying down unaware that she had to urinate. Normally,	14	Years	Shepherd (unspecified)	Dog	67	Pound

			(b) (6) would bark to go out, she did nothing. She became lethargic, not interested in walking beyond the front of the house. I noticed one day that when she urinated there was a blood clot. I took (b) (6) urine sample to the vet immediately. The urine analysis/culture came back with a bacteria infection, Klebsiella Oxytoca, high protein level, low specific gravity, high Occult Blood, High WBC, High RBC and High Bacteria levels. (b) (6) was placed on antibiotics (Simplicef 200 mg) for Klebsiella oxytoca, which she is now taking - going on her 17th day. While on this antibiotic, (b) (6) was placed on home-cooked meals, however she remained constipated. The vet suggested introducing sweet potato into her diet. I added sweet potato, she moved her bowels, but started to piddle and urinate excessively once again while lying down. I had received an email two days prior indicating that Prescription Hill was recalled, albeit an alleged volunteer recall, but recalled for Vitamin D Toxicity. From that day going forward, (b) (6) has been placed on home cooked meals that limit the vitamin D intake - chicken and rice. She seems to be doing a bit better, but she definitely has significant signs of Vitamin D toxicity. When I introduced the sweet potato as suggested by the vet, (b) (6) resumed to piddling and excessive urination while lying down. After researching the nutrition value of sweet potato, it revealed that it has vitamin D. I eliminated sweet potato and (b) (6)s has not urinated on herself. I reached out to Prescription Hill three times thus far and they refuse to furnish me with the details of their findings and suggest that I consult with the Veterinarians. I asked the Veterinarians what needs to be done... IV, medication, food plan - I asked them to please contact Prescription Hill to ascertain their findings and prognosis. They are refusing to do so. It seems the Vets and Prescription Hill are "in-bed" together, therefore I thought it best to file this report and have the FDA investigate this matter further. I researched the dog food recalls and each food that (b) (6) was placed on in the past year have come up excessive amounts of Vitamin D - Vitamin D Toxicity. This needs to be addressed considering this toxicity is fatal. Kindly provide information as to what the treatment is for this ailment - and if you have any questions/concerns or need (b) (6) medical records as proof, please do not hesitate to contact me at (b) (6) . Have a Blessed day! Frustrated and worried, (b) (6)

EON-384268	4/5/2019 14:44	Diamond Dust Chicken Liver Powder	My cat consumed food made by the company Smalls For Cats. The food was supposed to be a wholesome alternative to the normal cat food brands, with food that resembled homemade food, without preservatives and other additives. They marketed it as containing high quality ingredients, made with care. After a few days of slowly trying to switch my cat over to this food, she became very ill - excessive vomiting, inappetence, and distress. We brought her to the vet, they ran a number of tests to determine if she had an infection or blockage. All her tests looked normal. She continued to worsen after two visits to the Vet ER and two attempts at outpatient care. We admitted her after 5 days of vomiting and refusing food and water. She was hospitalized with inpatient care for two night, they performed more tests, and she was given an IV catheter with necessary fluids and medication. The vet was unable to determine a cause for her illness and concluded there was an ingredient in the new food that caused her to become sick. She has since recovered but is still having trouble eating full meals. About 2 weeks after this, we received information from Smalls (the distributor of the food in question) that a product I received from them and subsequently gave to my cat was being voluntarily recalled because a customer had called to complain that it smelled like chocolate. I did have this product on hand, and received it during the time frame in question, and it does indeed smell like chocolate. They are in the process of testing the product and are not 100% sure what kind of contaminant is in the food, but are relatively sure there is chocolate in the food. I contacted Smalls, who were very responsive, about my cat's illness and let them know she consumed the contaminated food. I am in the process of working out a reimbursement arrangement for her medical bills, which totaled around $4,000. I wanted to reach out to the FDA to make them aware, since it does not look like this product is listed on your site. I am looking to also get the food independently tested to see what contaminant is in the food and how concentrated it is. If you are aware of any services that provide this, please reach out. Thank you and let me know if you need any further information. Thanks, (b) (6)	7	Years	Siamese	Cat	11	Pound

But after purchasing this last bag, suddenly my dog started having issues with leg weakness. He was an older dog, so i thought it was just age related. A week or so later I noticed that he had pretty much quit eating. He started spending more time outside (he was an inside dog with a doggie door and fenced area. Shortly after I noticed he wasn't eating much, if at all, I noticed he had started vomiting. He has done this occasionally, but not with any regularity. I spent a few days out of town and when I returned I realized he was sick. He died before I was able to get him to the vet. I realize now that some of what I thought was age was something else and that even if I had gotten him to the vet, there was probably nothing they could have done. I began looking online and found that Purina has been sued on several occasions over this particular brand of dog food and feel like that is what caused the death of my pet. I did not take him to have him tested, I buried him the evening I found him and only afterwards realized that the dog food could have caused his death. It all happened in a matter of 3 weeks or so. His age was likely a contributing factor. I still have the food if you would like a sample to test.	10	Years	Retriever - Flat-coated	Dog	55	Pound

Once he started the diarrhea episodes I started looking at his food, toys and treats to see if anything was wrong and unfortunately I checked these packages versus the FDA website and they were all recalled. Apparently, WellPet bought out Sojos a couple of years ago so that could have something to do with it. The food texture changed to a more powdery substance but my concern is the "twigs" that I have found several times in the food. These twigs range from 1.25" to 2" and are quite hard. So I contacted Sojos via Facebook and the email. I conversed several times with them and they asked me to send in the twigs which I did so they could do an analysis. I stressed my concern of this being a choking hazard however, they didn't seem too concerned and said that the twigs are from the apples and/or sweet potatoes that are ground up. I stopped using the food because I didn't want my dogs choking on these pieces as Sojos is unwilling to do anything about it per their emails. I alerted the store that I was buying the food from and they discontinued it due to the fragments being found in the food. Other people have posted on Sojo's Facebook page of finding twigs and paper in the food.

The recall was posted but the affected food was not taken off of the shelf. The management had not said anything and were continuing to sell the food. I took it off the shelf after asking for permission and receiving no response. I cannot work in good conscience selling dangerous food. The food was later then put back on the shelf because they "needed the shelves filled and no holes". This is what I understand to be illegal as well as down right wrong. I am reporting this because management is refusing to take down the bad food. I have called the corporate tip line for Pet Supplies Plus, and I have not had any responses. The tags on them say best used by 2017. That is almost 2 years expired. Now I'm no professional but I'm sure that it can't be healthy or good for any dog or anyone to consume food that is out of date by 2 years. This is not the first time I've found expired dog food at this Kmart. A few month ago I found a bunch and complained to have the manager tell me he would fix the issue but clearly the issue has not been fixed. When I brought this to a employees attention I was treated badly as the associate Jacob responded with I'm only 17 I can't do anything about that and walked away from me. Then another associate said we don't own this store and walked away. I asked for a manager but was told they are busy with an employee who just had a seizure and I was shunned away as clearly no one there cares if they sell expired food products that can potentially harm or kill a innocent animal. About 30 mins later I called and spoke to a manager who clearly did not care and sounded like she was laughing at what I had to say as she said she was gonna go check the food there and said the reason I found that is because they are short staffed but I saw 6 employees doing nothing up at the registers.. the lack of customer service here on top of expired food is unacceptable I didn't even get a apology I was blown off. I picked up the box and put it behind two double doors right by pet department hopefully someone will not put it back out

Knowing they have had dogs in/out of their flax mill and office, I know they do not have a clean facility to bottle this. Additionally, they have had issues in their office where they did not have trash service and this was piled at the back door, inside the building for months. You will not find a clean facility here! After a few days my husband was feeding the dogs and noticed a sharp piece of metal, maybe an inch long,in the food. EON-383438	3/26/2019 18:40	Hills Prescription i/d Diet Canine Chicken and Vegetable Stew 12.5 oz and 5.5 oz cans	(b) (6), our dog, originally weighed approximately 92 lbs. (b) (6) had a well visit with our Veterinarian on 11/26/18 and everything was fine. In late December 2018, (b) (6) began to be sick. He lost weight, began vomiting and had diarrhea, he was also more thirsty, and need to urgently urinate more frequently and he was also very tired. We brought him to our Vet in late December and the Vet could not figure out what was wrong. After doing bloodwork and Xrays, the Vet discovered (b) (6) had abnormal blood levels, swelling of his intestinal tract and had developed a slight heart murmur. The Vet gave us medications (Flagyl and Cerenia for the diarrhea and vomiting) and they worked a little for the vomiting but his bowel movements were never the same. About 1/21/19, we took (b) (6) back to the same Veterinarian because he appeared to lose more weight, still had diarrhea and was vomiting sporadically, plus continued to drink excessively and needed to urinate excessively. He was now very tired. The Vet said his blood work was indicating some anemia but did not know what was causing it. He still believed he was having general gut problems. The Vet switched the medicines but (b) (6) continued to deteriorate, display symptoms of this vitamin D poisoning, and continued to lose weight. On January 31, 2019, I received a call from my Veterinarian's office telling me about the Hills Prescription Diet Canned Pet Food Recall and wanted to go over the code and lot numbers with me. The told me where to find the information on the internet also. My dog (b) (6) had been eating Hills Prescription Diet I/D Chicken & Vegetable Stew, which I purchase through this same Veterinarian's office since 2015. At the time of the 1/31/19 recall, what cans of food we had left did not match. Unfortunately, our dog, (b) (6), continued to slowly deteriorate and could barely walk the last week of life. By the time he passed away, he weighed only 79 pounds (so he lost 13 pounds very quickly). We had scheduled (b) (6) to be euthanized realizing he was nearing the end of his life for Monday, (b) (6) however, (b) (6) passed away a very painful death on Saturday, (b) (6) and we feel the undisclosed toxic levels of Vitamin D in Hills Prescription Canned Pet food cause (b) (6) death prematurely. My family and I later saw (on March 21, 2019) that the Hills Pet Food company revised the recall list on March 20, 2019, and (b) (6) food brand was now added to this list. EON-383431	3/26/2019 16:48	Hills Science Diet Digestive Care Low Fat i/d Rice Vegetable & Chicken Stew	(b) (6) was diagnosed with Pancreatitis in 4/18 at which time the vet prescribed Hills's Science Diet Digestive Care Low Fat I/D. We have been feed it to her daily ever since. Over the course of this time she has slowly become lethargic, started drinking more and more water, having excessive urination, lack of appetite, and most recently (after the first of the year) began vomiting/diarrhea issues. The vomiting and diarrhea were sporadic. We took both our pups in for their February teeth cleanings and because of their age (13) they ran blood work to make sure they were healthy enough to be put under anesthesia. This is when we first noticed her kidney levels were high, and also when I first found out about the I/D food recalls. My dogs are litter mates and are on all the same foods, treats and meds. EXCEPT that she has been on the I/D and he hasn't. His blood work is great, she is showing to be in renal failure. They had me bring her back 2 weeks later just to confirm with another round of bloodwork. She is now on 200 ml of sub cutaneous fluids every other day, which have already become more frequent from the 100 ml every 3rd day that we started with and only did for 2 weeks before increasing. This will continue and possibly/probably increase until she passes. The vet said we could have 6 months to a year with her if we're lucky. Her blood line is generally a long lived one, as they generally have lived to about 20, so I could have had another 6 years with her, and now I'm losing my baby girl, and her brother is losing his best friend, and literal sister/littermate. The food is the only thing that makes any sense as to her being in this state of health (renal failure). I was buying food by the case and have the receipts. I do know for fact that she has consumed some of the recalled food as I still have a can in my possession. I have talked to Hill's, they opened a file on (b) (6), and they sent out a packet, and have asked me to sign paperwork saying I will not sue them, which I will not do. I feel they are not really concerned with our pets, they're only sad they got caught. That's just my opinion of course, but that's how I feel about it. Thank you for your time and efforts with this recall concerning our beloved pets.	13	Years	Terrier - Fox Smooth	Dog	20	Pound

EON-383389	3/26/2019 12:16	Veggie Stick Chips	I am writing to you concerning food product packaging, primarily chip bags, and other snack bags. I am wanting to report the dangerous suffocation hazard to animals of chip bags. There is not a warning on these bags or other food product packaging. (b) (6) a young Australian Shepherd/Border Collie puppy in training for search and rescue, had his life cut short on (b) (6) when he suffocated in a chip bag. He was left alone for only 20 minutes and we tried to resuscitate him with CPR without success. Dogs, cats, livestock, and wildlife suffocate in these bags every day, mostly chip bags. The bag vacuum seals around their face and they can't get it off it only takes 3-5 minutes for them to die and many people are home when this happens. My dog and hundreds of thousands more have died in chip bags. My dog died because I was completely unaware that chip bags posed any suffocation hazard and I have learned also that the vast majority of people are unaware of this fact. Many people erroneously believe that a dog can simply remove a chip bag from his head with his front paws or tear through it with his claws. Once the bag starts to seal around the dog's neck, it's extremely difficult to break the suction of the seal and the material is too thick to tear. While it is my responsibility to ensure my dog's safety in his environment, it is these companies' responsibility to educate their consumers on the dangers of their product packaging. Furthermore, it is your responsibility to recognize there is an urgent safety concern with this style of packaging and to take appropriate steps in solving problem, as these bags cause the majority of animal suffocation. As a leader of the product safety industry, you have the power to start making signification changes in the number of animals that die daily due to suffocation in a chip bag by changing the design of your product packaging and/or the material, as the material of the packaging is not even recyclable. I understand this would require significant research and changes to the production processes and that is going to take time and money. However, suffocation chip bags happens every single day to pets and wildlife everywhere due to lack of education and awareness. While working on a solution to the problem of the product design, these companies

			could take a very small step of applying a warning label similar to that of other plastic bags. I understand people think that people don't read warning labels, however, when they are seen over and over again, educating the masses, they become etched in your brain and common knowledge by society. Just like the warning label we see on plastic bags or other areas in life: " Warning: to avoid the danger of suffocation, keep this plastic bag away from babies and children" or "Hand washing prevents the spread of disease," or "Objects in mirror may be closer than they appear." He eats twice per day, once in the morning and once at night. By March 6th, he became increasingly lethargic & was what we thought "refluxing" his food and water. He went to see the vet on 3/7 who initially thought it was a fluke or virus. We withheld food but not water for a couple of days then started to reintegrate his food. Within approx 2 days that followed, he couldn't keep any of his food down or in and had massive diarrhea develop as well. He became increasingly lethargic and dehydrated and we brought him to the vet on 3/11. He spent 4 days in the hospital and Vet ER (overnight) for meds, iv fluid and to get him well. When they allowed him to come home he was only given a bland diet for a week and then they had us start integrating his dog food back in. When he started to eat the dog food again? His vomiting and lethargy started all over again. He again had IV fluid therapy and treatment. We went back on the bland diet again for him (just hamburger / chicken boiled and rice). He went back to the vet today - with a sample of the dog food. He ate one piece of kibble while under their care and within 20 minutes he vomited it up. We were asked to report it as it may be a bad batch of the food.	7	Months	Terrier - Boston	Dog	15	Pound

I asked her if she knew there was a problem why wasn't there a recall on the food. she said it was not the brand it was the store. she then told me that the store had an infestation of spiders and they got into several bags of food. I about through a fit! I demanded to speak to a manager about putting MY dogs as well as countless others at risk of eating spiders, spider eggs and PESTICIDE! because i was told while waiting for a manager that never came. that they had the store sprayed! I am at this point quite upset and told this girl why weren't all the bags of food removed from the floor... all she could do was say she was sorry.. the public needs to be aware that there is not only pesticide on theses bags of food , but there are UNopened bags of food with spiders, webs and eggs. this is absolutely the worst case of neglect of a dangerous situation I have come across with a petstore. EON-383155	3/23/2019 12:56	Pro Plan FortiFlora Dog Probiotic Supplement	Dear FDA, Thank you for the opportunity to report. Purina confirmed by telephone to me yesterday that Pro Plan FortiFlora Dog Probiotic Supplement is being widely counterfeited. They confirmed that I received counterfeit product from third party fulfillment at Amazon this month. Purina said it is third-party fulfillment from Amazon involved. Their lawyers have not gotten Amazon to solve the problem. Amazon reviews suggest this problem goes back to 2017. Looking at the orders, I began receiving third party fulfillment August 2017, giving it to my dog in September. He became inappetent in September and when we brought him to the vet he had jaundice and liver disease. The insult to the liver seems long-term, not transient. I've become aware that his aunt in Arizona became ill with jaundice and elevated liver enzymes after ingesting FortiFlora more recently. We have no proven causation, but that is my report. Amazon could resolve this easily by disallowing third parties who cannot prove that the item is coming directly from Purina.	5	Years	Great Pyrenees	Dog	130	Pound

EON-383081	3/22/2019 13:32	Hill's Prescription Diet Digestive Care i/d with Turkey	In December of 2018, my dog exhibited excessive thirst and urination, I immediately made vet appointment - concerned it may have been diabetes. Dr. report came back negative for diabetes. Symptoms continued, by January, her appetite was noticeably affected and she was loosing weight. I found this very strange as she is normally a glutenous eater. I took her to a 2nd, more local vet for additional testing, (b) (6) e ran tests looking for urinary issues. She stated the bacterial test came back normal. Symptoms of excessive drinking, urination, and weight loss continued. I returned to vet for more blood tests. Results suggested possible kidney changes and liver changes, but still not pinpointing the cause. On vet's recommendation, I took (b) (6) to a specialist hospital for an ultrasound to try and detect underlying cause. The specialist Dr. stated he saw some minor irregularities and that he wanted to repeat the ultrasound in a month. My dog is still not eating well and continues to exhibit thirst and urination. We have been trying everything we can think of to get her to eat, including home cooked meals. We give her as much water as we can, and take her outside to urinate at least every 3-4 hours (waking up through the night to do this). Yesterday we received information that her food, Hills ID prescriptive brand has had a massive recall due to excessive amounts of vitamin D which can cause kidney damage - manifesting symptoms of weight loss, excessive thirst , and excessive urination. I contacted Hills corporation today to report this issue, they stated that they will send me "coupons" and packets for reimbursement for the three veterinarians I've had working to try and identify/resolve my pet's issue. I explained to the representative that the cans that my dog has eaten are and have been discarded as I of course had NO IDEA THAT HILLS WOULD HAVE A RECALL . To this date, my pet's health remains abnormal; she continues to exhibit; lack of appetite, excessive thirst , and excessive urination, and I am distraught with concern that my dog my not recover. This is unacceptable.	14	Years	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	48	Pound

			To Whom it Concerns: The following is an eMail I sent to Dollar General Corporation in a complaint about your HeartLand for Cats - dry food. Please respond back to me when you have investigated this matter. Thank you :)   March 18, 2019 To Whom this Concerns: I have purchased my normal brand of Cat Food from DG for a number of years now. My Cats, of which I have 3, love your hard food. Never once have I found a problem with it until my latest purchase on Friday, March 15th, 2019. I always buy the same Brand and Type. As I stated above, my kitties love your cat food. This time however, they would not even touch it. Not a one of my 3 kitties would eat the food. For 4 days I would put fresh food in their bowls and still they would not eat it. So, I bought an alternate brand from Krogers and once placed in their feeding bowls they ate it like no tomorrow. There is something wrong with this batch. Not certain what, but definitely something wrong with the cat food. This is why I am writing you to turn this complaint over to the company or someone who can review the batch number, date and etc...to determine if something was amiss with this particular manufactured run.

Again to reiterate my complaint - I always buy the same Brand and Type My 3 cats

EON-382911	3/21/2019 0:32	Kirkland Signature Nature's Domain Cat Food, Wellness CORE Grain-Free Original Formula Dry Cat Food, BLUE Basics Limited-Ingredient Diet Turkey & Potato Formula as well as Duck & Potato Formula	(b) (6) suddenly went into congestive heart failure on the evening of (b) (6) ~7.5 years old, having shown no prior symptoms of cardiac or respiratory problems. He spent the weekend at a 24-hour veterinary clinic and was diagnosed with dilated cardiomyopathy through cardiac ultrasound. Following his 3-day emergency stay, he had repeated incidents of respiratory distress until the day I elected to euthanize him (b) (6) because I did not want to him to a painful death drowning in his own lungs. Upon doing research about DCM, I requested a taurine blood test, but his regular vet declined because he was on a commercial diet, and most commercial diets were supplemented with taurine, thus the vet deemed it unlikely to be due to diet simply for that reason. Two weeks following (b) (6) diagnosis, I brought his brother (b) (6) (~15 lbs, neutered male) into the vet clinic for a check up to get him on pet insurance (because I couldn't afford another $3400 financial hit from another surprise vet bill) (b) (6) was determined to be relatively health (no audible heart murmur), but then (b) (6) went into congestive heart failure within an hour of leaving the veterinary clinic. The stress of the vet visit had brought on the heart failure and brought to light that he also was suffering from cardiomyopathy. We elected not to do an ultrasound to get a confirmed diagnosis because the stress of being at the clinic is what had caused the heart failure. We strongly assumed it to be DCM, given his brother's diagnosis just two weeks prior. We started him on the same medicine regime. (b) (6) generally fared better and kept responding to increased doses of furosemide, but eventually his disease progressed to the point where he was no longer responding to a very high furosemide dose. He took a turn for the worse, and when I suspected he threw a blood clot and he was struggling to breath despite medicine, I had him euthanized on (b) (6) to prevent further suffering. I had both (b) (6) and his brother (b) (6) since they were 5 week old kittens (from a feral mother). I had fed them both a grain-free dry kibble diet their entire lives, primarily Blue Buffalo Limited Ingredient cat diets, Kirkland's Nature's Domain cat	7.5	Years	Domestic Shorthair	Cat	10	Pound

			food, and Wellness Core cat food. They were strictly indoor cats (and as such their diet was not supplemented by birds/reptiles/rodents/etc). I added a taurine supplement to their diets about 3 weeks after (b) (6) diagnosis, but could not find information on how many mg's to add for DCM cats, and later realized I had only given them half the amount of taurine of that cats were supplemented with daily in the original taurine-DCM feline studies. In light of the recent research with DCM dogs on grain free diets, and given what happened to my cats, I strongly suspect that similar diets in cats may be linked to DCM in cats, and that DCM cases are likely underreported in cats because: 1) cats are on the prey menu and hide their ailments, so they are more likely to show cardiac problems only when severe and often when it's too late--many probably die before the specific cause of cardiac failure is assessed and necropsies are often not elected because it doesn't change the outcome and is cost-prohibitive; 2) many pet cats are indoor/outdoor cats and kill wildlife which supplements their diets with natural, absorbable taurine; 3) outdoor cats are likely to hide before dying (again, due to being on the prey menu) and may just never return home, so cause of death (and even the outcome of death) may remain unknown to cat owners; 4) veterinary clinics are generally a more stressful place for cats than dogs, stress exacerbates heart conditions and a cat is more likely to die while being treated for acute heart failure before the specific form of cardiomyopathy is determined, or the owner is less likely to bring them to the vet to begin with because of the stress associated with the veterinary clinic; and 5) vets may be dismissive that diet could play a role given the addition of taurine to commercial cat foods and the apparent resolution of the problem when taurine was added back in the 80's/90's (despite that this was prior to grain free diets becoming popular and regularly available; and despite the fact that other ingredients in the food could potentially inhibit the absorption of the added taurine). I strongly urge the USDA to look into cat cases of DCM that may be associated with grain free diets. I am happy to provide additional case details regarding my cats if requested.

In the dry food I have found multiple objects baked into kibble. What looked like to be plastic pieces, something that resembled cobb webs, a extremely strong smell of a paint/paint thinner like smell in the dry food bag as well as what looked like a piece of wool yarn sticking out of kibble. In the canned dog food I found a large piece of plastic (just under 1 inch long). I have many photo's. This company claims to provide holistic pet food. During her exam, we noted that her heart rate was over 200 but her pulses were weak and occurred at 100 per minute. An immediate ECG was ordered but she collapsed before we could get her to the treatment area. We initiated CPR but she had no cardiac electrical activity on our monitor. We continued CPR for 20 minutes but she did not respond. We sent myocardium to (b) (6) Laboratory and received the following report: Description Three sections of myocardium are examined. In these sections of myocardium, there are thin strands of fibrous connective tissue interspersed between myocardial fibers. Also interspersed between myocardial fibers are abundant accumulations of adipose tissue. Some of the entrapped myocardial fibers are atrophic while other myocardial fibers are hypertrophic. Histopathologic Diagnosis Myocardium (three specimens): Multifocal myocardial fibrosis and steatosis with multifocal fiber atrophy Comments The histologic lesions observed in the examined sections of myocardium are compatible with underlying cardiomyopathy. Presumably, arrhythmias associated with cardiomyopathy were the primary underlying cause of the clinical syndrome and death. I did switch her back, but she broke out in hives/rash all over. She was on grain-free food for a reason- she is highly allergic to "normal" dog food. EON-382672	3/18/2019 15:40	Zignature Brand Pork Flavored Limited ingredient dog food.	I gave my dog the same food, Zignature Brand, Pork Flavor, dry dog food, which she was eating for approximately 6-12 months. Upon her eating, after opening a new bag, she began projectile vomiting, diarrhea and became lethargic. I brought her to the vet where they instructed me to put her on a bland diet, and see if she improves. She had the bland diet and improved, so the vet said to slowly start incorporating the Zignature dry food back into her diet. Upon doing so, we were back at the vet with the same issues. I reached out to the manufacturer, who informed me that they had recently changed their production methods, and the food has different ingredients than before, which may be harmful to pets with weak stomachs (like my dog does, as she was eating Zignatures limited ingredient diet food). The company never warned its consumers of this change, nor made any note of this on their social media accounts, nothing to inform the public that the way they make the food is changed. This food made my dog sick and I incurred vet bills as a result. I was back and forth with a couple people at Zignature and they asked for the medical records and bills and would have someone reach out to me to discuss paying for these bills. I was given the run around for a while, and I explained that if I do not hear back, I would have to file a lawsuit against them. I got one more email back saying they apologize and the boss, Jeff, would reach out. Fast forward about two weeks, I have sent three emails, and got no response. Now, I would like the FDA to step it and deal with this. This is something that can become very harmful to my pet, as well as other consumers. I would still like to be refunded for my vet bills, but more so, I would like them to be fined and/or reprimanded for changing the way they produce the food, which in turn produces different food, without notifying anyone of this change.	4	Years	Boxer (German Boxer)	Dog	65	Pound

Had to take home to vet and get a shot for pain and fluids. Vet said it was a blockage. I have the bill. The vet was not interested when I called to say he was much better because I changed food and knew it was the previous food that caused him to be seriously ill. I called lams they only tool the information. Said someone would call me about the vet bill. It is on consumer affairs about this particular food this year that has countless cats sick and dying. I hope that helps you make a recall on this cat food. This needs to stop. Consumers should not have to be concerned about possibly making their cats sick with cat food that is bought. Within a few days of starting the food, she became lethargic, polyuric/polydipsic, and began vomiting. Local veterinarian treated symptomatically at first with no response. He then ran blood work which showed azotemia and a markedly elevated total serum calcium. She was referred to me. During the 2 week interim, they fed her a home cooked chicken and rice diet and she slowly improved. When I saw her I suspected vitamin D toxicity or atypical hypoadrenocorticism. Her creatinine was almost normal and her ionized calcium on the day of the appointment was also almost normal. The owners reported that she was acting much more like herself. I submitted a baseline cortisol, calcium, PTH level and Vitamin D level to the Endocrine Lab at (b) (6). Results showed evidence of severe Vitamin D toxicity. I contacted Hill's on the first day that I saw her and they said that they wouldn't even consider testing the food unless I could prove that the dog was Vitamin D toxic. I faxed them the results and spoke to a staff Veterinarian after I received them. She said that she would send the results to her supervisor. I waited 48 hours and heard nothing from them so I called again today and spoke to the same veterinarian. She said she would send another message to her supervisor to say that I had called again and I heard nothing back from them today. (b) (6) 8 year old standard dachshund... (b) (6), 9 year old Doberman), Wholehearted All Life Stages Chicken & Brown Rice Recipe for almost a year. In December, each dog started throwing up stomach acid each day. I removed all treats from their diet and double checked that I had added nothing new to their diet/medicine routine. I had my water tested for any possible contaminants/bacteria and it tested negative on everything. However; I still installed a water filter and only give them filtered water. The dogs continued to throw up. after almost 2 months, I switched to Life's Abundance All Life Stages Dogfood with chicken. Within 2 days after switching, even though I did a complete switch without mixing foods, all dogs stopped throwing up and have not thrown up once since. I was concerned since some sources for ingredients in the Wholehearted food are imported and the symptoms seemed the same of recently recalled dog food brands due to excessive vitamin D. I contacted Petco regarding the food on Feb 9th, 2019 via on-line chat and gave them all info, including the batch info on the last bag I had purchased. They immediately refunded the amount for that bag, after informing me that they had not received any other complaints. They said they would investigate and contact me with their findings. After hearing nothing from them, I called Petco on March 5, 2019, resubmitted all info and informed them that if I did not hear from them within 2 days regarding this issue, that I was submitting a complaint to the FDA. I have heard nothing and thus, this complaint. Feb 1 or Feb 2 I fed my dog like I normally do her Hill's Prescription KD Diet. My dog consumed a part of it and didn't finish her meal which was quite out of the ordinary.....she usually had no issues with finishing her dog food. After that day...she refused to touch Hill's Prescription Diet. I tried to feed her other things however she wouldn't eat. She did take a little of Chicken/Rice that I had made for her. On Feb 4, my dog became extremely ill Vomiting/Diarrhea/Lethargy/hyporexia and her Serium chemistry showed a progressive elevation in her Kidney values. On Feb 6 I received an email with Lot Nos. and Dates of canned food from Hill's that were exposed to High Levels of Vit D. I looked at my cans of food and saw where I had (3) cans left that had matching Lot Codes/Best by Dates on the bottom of the cans. I normally buy a case of food and I had about (3) cans left in this batch. On Feb 4 I took my dog to my regular Vet office to obtain a checkup, they took bloodwork gave her SubQ Fluids and told me to continue the chicken/rice. Between 2/7/19 and 2/14/19, her bloodwork went off the charts. In one week's time her BUN increased from 46 to 199, her Creatinine jumped from 1.9 to according to my regular Vet (not able to read) and per phosphorus levels went from 7.6 to 16.1. My regular Vet suggested that I take my dog to a 24 hour emergency Vet Clinic because she was too sick to be at home. I took her into the 24 hour Vet Clinic in (b) (6) ) and in the ICU they redid her bloodwork their results were similar. The bloodwork showe BUN at 176, Creatinine at 4.4 and Phosphorus level about the same at 16.1. (b) (6) kept my dog in ICU from 2/14/19 to 2/18/19 under the care of Internal Medicine Dept. They proceeded by putting her on IV Fluid Therapy. Throughout the Therapy her bloodwork numbers fluctuated up and down. I advised to both my regular Vet and (b) (6) that I suspected the Hill's recall might have had something to do with her going downhill so fast. I believe that they didn't take this too serious. 			day. She was released on 2/18/19 to come home with 2 antibiotics to take Flagyl and Clavamox, Cerenia for upset stomach and given an appetite stimulant to try to get her to eat. She ate very little chicken and rice that I made for her. I was to give her SubQ Fluids at home, which I did. After taking her back for a follow-up a week later on 2/25/19 her numbers again did increase again and blood pressure was extremely high at 220 so they started her on Amlodipine, which is a calcium channel blocker..which reduces the amount of calcium that is passed into the cells of the muscles of the heart. Her Liver Values went extremely high and my regular vet suggested we try another round of IV Therapy at their office which I did between 2/28/19 and 3/2/19. An Echocardiogram was done because my regular Vet thought she heard an irregular heart beat. Also my regular Vet did a test to check for Pancreatitis. The test was confirmed that there was inflammation in the Pancreas. On the evening of (b) (6) I brought my dog home and she became Lame in all four legs and wouldn't let me touch her legs or her belly....she would scream in pain. The Vets office put her on heavy sedative and by (b) (6) morning (b) (6) again I took her to the 24 hour Vet emergency clinic. They didn't quite understand the loss of her legs but stated that it had nothing to do with her back or neck or spine. They thought that is was more joint/muscle related. The emergency Vet suggested that I put her down that day. I was not emotionally prepared at this point to make that call so the emergency Vet suggested that I take her home overnight to see if there would be any improvement and she put her on heavy pain medication. There was no improvement the next morning, actually I thought she was still in severe pain and decided to Euthanize her on (b) (6) I called (b) (6) and I wanted to have the (3) cans that had matching Lot Codes/Best by Dates from Hill's KD Prescription Diets. I spoke to a Dr. there that worked with toxicology. He stated that if my Lot Codes/Best by Dates matched it wouldn't be necessary to have the dog food cans tested because, as he explained it 1. EON-382077	3/11/2019 14:52	Hemp Quiet Moments	On a cat club blog I saw an endorsement for a product being promoted to calm or sedate cats and kittens when they are being shipped or transported, or have other stressful situations. This product is clearly a derivative of Marijuana. I know the person who is promoting it is a heavy drug user who also manufactures tinctures of marijuana and sells them to cat breeders around the country through the USPS. I suspect that this product being sold by Petsmart is another way to get around FDA controlled substance laws. Hemp Quiet Moments. I can forward photos of the product including the label which shows the ingredients. It is made by Nature Vet. This looks like the typical "pet products" that are really intended for human consumption but are sold under the pet label to circumvent Federal regulations. I am reporting this because I believe it could also be very harmful for pets being shipped Air Cargo who are high on marijuana to sedate them

EON-382010	3/10/2019 17:52	Hills Prescription Diet Digestive/Weight/Glucose Management W/DChicken Flavor	On Saturday March 2, 2019 I purchased a purchased a bag of Hills Prescription Diet W/D dog food. My dog has been using this food for 5 years because of a diabetic condition and has had no issues during that period of time. We gave her a feeding at approximately 5:00 P.M. from the new unopened bag. We gave her more food Sunday morning and Sunday afternoon she vomited that entire feeding up several times. Although unusual for her to vomit we continued to feed her normal feedings on Monday. The dog began to vomit again and on Tuesday and Wednesday the sickness became worse and worse. We contacted our veterinarian and made an appointment to bring her in for an examination. We discontinued the food and began to give the dog boiled chicken breast and rice which eliminated the vomiting but the dog remained listless and developed diarrhea. Our veterinarian examined out dog on Thursday 3/7/19 and took blood samples for analysis and her recommendation was to continue the chicken and rice feedings until the blood work came back. On Friday 3/8/19 our dog's blood work indicated that her liver enzyme count was at 4,000 (normal being 100-150) and the vet asked if Tinkerbelle could have gotten into anything toxic. I advised her that there is nothing in the back yard where she goes out that was toxic. I take great care to make certain that there is nothing in the yard that she could eat or lick that would make her sick. The doctor has scheduled an ultrasound test for Monday 3/11/19 to assess the condition of the liver and gall bladder but suspects something toxic to the dog (bad food or something) has elevated her liver enzyme count and caused the illness. She also changed her prescription food to Royan Canin Glycobalance dog food. We have been giving her that new prescription food for two days now with no adverse reactions.	10	Years	Poodle - Toy	Dog	13	Pound

My dog eats Natural Balance Limited Ingredient diet -- moist and dry kibble, mixed. I ordered a new moist flavor from Chewy.com called ChopLick'n Stew with Tuna, Lamb, Brown Rice, Peas and Carrots in a Tasty Gravy in an 8 oz. tub. On 2/8/19, my dog began to vomit approximately 8 hours after ingesting his dinner serving of 1/3 cup. Vomiting continued for a few hours, followed by one instance of runny stool. The vet found nothing medically wrong with him and administered sub-cutaneous fluids and an anti-nausea medication. He slept the next 24 hours, then was fine. I fed him a bland diet of boiled ground turkey and rice for the next two days.  The same exact thing happened on 3/7/19, though not for as prolonged a time. Eight hours after eating the same mix for his dinner, my dog vomited three times. He was fine the next day and I fed him a bland diet for the next couple of days. The timing of the two events is exact. I cannot suspect any other reason for my dog's reaction other than this specific moist dog food.	12	Years	Bichon Frise	Dog	14	Pound

(b) (6) only received approximately 2 tbs. of Hills Prescription canned glucose food in the evening and in the morning feeding. Due to the small amount it took a few weeks for the Vitamin D to build up in his body. He began throwing up every time he eat. This began approximately the week of January 7th. He appeared to get somewhat better. I traveled out of town and boarded him at a veterinary clinic starting January 18, 2019. On Tuesday, January 22 the veterinary clinic called with great concern. He was not eating or drinking and made some indication he may not make it through the night. Due to this, he could not get his insulin. His blood glucose was all over the place. I returned home and got him from the clinic on Friday, January 25th. At this point, no one was aware of the recall regarding the Vitamin D. It took several days to get him to start eating properly again. I received an email from Chewy.com on January 31st regarding the Hill's Pet Nutrition Recall. Upon further investigation and getting the Lot Code through Chewy.com, I confirmed Lot Code 092020T30 was the food we were feeding my dog. I don't understand why the recall was so late. This indicates the product was produced in September. Why did they wait until the end of January. At this point, my dog had eaten all the canned food in the case with that Lot Code. He was already compromised with Diabetes, I trusted the Hill's to supply the proper nutrition form my pet.	11	Years	Terrier - Yorkshire	Dog	10	Pound

EON-381767	3/7/2019 11:12	Hill's Prescription Diet Digestive Care	In December 27, 2018, per veterinary suggestions, we have purchased Hill's Prescription Diet Digestive Care dry dog food (Product Code: 8618) along with two cans of Digestive Care Turkey flavor (Product Code: 7008). Even though the can food wasn't consumed by our dog (b) (6), the dry food version of the product was consumed by him for 67 days. About a month of consumption, (b) (6) has started to show symptoms such as seizures, muscle cramps/tremors, abdominal pain, weakness, depression, increased thirst, and increased urination. The first visit to vet on Monday February 4th, he was diagnosed as old dog vestibular disease. Then, on Tuesday 5th, his face was swollen and was treated possible of tooth infection. On the third visit of February 27th, he was diagnosed as possibility of brain tumor. Since MRI scanning required to diagnose whether (b) (6) has a brain tumor or not, we were not able to fulfill the required scanning. We had to accept that (b) (6) was dying and we were not able to do anything. Luckily, on Monday March 4th with a pure instinct, I've searched the brand name on the web and came across the recall. Even though, recall was on selected canned food, I've discontinued the dry food effective immediately beginning on Monday March 4th. Within four days, I see no signs of seizure, muscle cramps, depression, and abdominal pain in (b) (6). However, he continues to show signs of increased thirst and increased urination, and his weakness on his legs getting lesser. Sadly, we are not able to know whether this dry food caused irreversible internal organs damages or not. We are hoping that he will get better within days. What if (b) (6) was euthanized last week, what would we felt today?	14	Years	Chihuahua	Dog	11	Pound

EON-381612	3/5/2019 19:20	Hill's Prescription Diet Digestive Care i/d low fat	We noticed (b) (6) stool was a bit dark back in August 2018 and the vet recommended we put him on Hill's Prescription Diet ID low fat canned wet food. Within a few weeks, he developed severe diarrhea, bloody urine, lost a significant amount of weight, was lethargic, and we began to feed him Hill's Prescription Diet ID (normal fat) to try to help him gain weight again. He was put on two kinds of antibiotics because they thought he had a gut infection and UTI. He also started vomiting bile occasionally and had nose bleeds. We couldn't figure out what the problem was because in August before starting him on the Hill's food he had a blood test and urinalysis and the vets said everything was ok. We continued to feed him the Hill's ID food until January 4th 2019 when we put him to sleep after a week of him having trouble breathing (usually at night) and the vet noted muscle wasting on his head and hindquarters and said they suspected cancer. He was urinating once every hour or two and it always smelled very strongly. He was very thirsty and the vet had put him on Prednisolone (steroids) and doxycycline (antibiotics) to try to help with his breathing trouble. We refused invasive testing because of his advanced age and the excessive cost. We didn't think if we put him under anesthesia that he would live through it. We found out about the Hill's recall on February 4th 2019 from a Facebook link and then received 2 emails from the company we ordered the food from. I checked the remaining cans we had and can confirm that during his last week of life we fed him 2 cans per day, and fed him 10 of 12 of a recalled batch of cans. We also had ordered another 3 trays of food that arrived the week of his death, and another tray in that box was on the recall list. I believe we were feeding him recalled food on and off for months. I have itemized receipts for every single purchase of his food from the vet and the pet food store. I have all his vet records except for the last day we took him in (they will not give me his records from that day? claim that the vet moved away and they don't have any notes...) but we also took him to an emergency vet his last week and have those records as well.	16	Years	Terrier - Bull - Staffordshire	Dog	20	Kilogram

EON-381533	3/5/2019 11:40	Purina Cat Chow Indoor + Immune Health Blend	I purchased a brand new Purina Cat Chow Indoor + Immune Heath Blend on February 19, 2019 from Walmart and my indoor cat passed away by (b) (6) after he ate handful of the cat food. Before he ate the cat food he was a perfectly healthy 2 year old Russian Blue male indoor cat. After he ate the cat food, he got sick, vomited, and started walking very slowly, and lethargy. He passed away in less than 30 hours after he ate the food. He would not return to the food and eat and refused to drink water. It happened so fast, and the only denominator was the food. My cat's name was (b) (6) I called Purina Petcare and reported what I suspected, they sent me $125 check and a mailed me a baggy to return about two cups of food. I followed their instructions. I received a call from their claims manager before I sent the a sample of the food, and the claims manager said there is nothing wrong with their cat food, and if so, their phones would be ringing off the hook. He said he wanted to cv lose the claim, and I told him I'm not closing any thing until the food has been tested. I returned the cat food sample to Purina on (b) (6) It was mailed to Purina in Saint Louis Missouri. I have not heard from Purina, yet.
EON-381527	3/5/2019 10:36	Hills prescription diet kidney care k/d pate with tuna.	I just received a case of 24 Kidney Care k/d from Chewy. They all indicats Best before 02 2021, T3030420B 27226, T2631657B 25197, T3030420A 27226, T3030419A 271226, T3030419A 27226, and the plastic wrapping of the box indicates 02 2021 T293 0804 030. I have used about 8 cans so far, and immediately noticed that all of them seem to have an entirely different consistency from the ones I have used for the past 2 years, either from Chewy or from vets. It is a pate, but normally it can be picked up as a chunk with a spoon and shaken off whole on a plate. Now, these products are very sticky, do not fall off the spoon as a chunk, and smear off in a jelly like consistency. My cat has consistently tried to refuse these, eating a partial amount, but walking away, when normally it will eat every part off the plate, particularly in the morning meal. I am concerned there is a change to the recipe, and I don't know what that means for the safety of the cat. I am surprised there are so many different lot numbers in the same 24 pack.
EON-381499	3/5/2019 2:32	Hill's prescription diet k/d	Started hills k/d food beginning of December 2018 after a prescription given by my veterinarian. My dog was sleeping early stages of kidney disease and the vet felt this diet would help improve his life. The initial results were a drastic improvement to his quality of life and I purchased more food mid December. I believe this was the tainted food. He began to show no interest in the food. His previous symptoms came back but this time included lethargy and vomiting. He slept a lot and overall seemed to be decline. 4 days and I took him in to vet hospital and they showed a high toxicity in his body... concerned to the point of questioning of ingesting poison. They felt no long term improvement to his life through treatment. And ultimately euthanized to end his pain.	14	Years	Terrier - Yorkshire	Dog	5	Pound

EON-381466	3/4/2019 16:40	Hills Pet Nutrition Z/D canned dog food	Hills Pet Nutrition had a recall of their Z/D canned dog food. This was the food that our dog eat almost exclusively (dry and canned mixed together). The manufacturer recalled their Z/D canned dog food due to excessive amounts of Vitamin D. I know that our dog ate at least three cans of this food. Then, we returned the balance of 9 cans in the case to our Vet for a refund. However, I do not know how long this tainted food had been on the market prior to the recall. Our dog began vomiting and having diarrhea and drinking lots of water and having accidents in the house. Our dog was very lethargic and had little appetite. Our vet said that he had acute and severe kidney failure at a visit on (b) (6). We kept him alive for a bit with intravenous fluids treatments. However, he then developed seizures due to his failing kidneys and we euthanized the dog on (b) (6)	13	Years	Poodle (unspecified)	Dog	18	Pound
EON-381419	3/4/2019 12:20	ACANA SINGLES LIMITED INGREDIENT DIET LAMB AND APPLE FORMULA GRAIN FREE DRY DOG FOOD	We noticed he started to have labored breathing and a bad cough. Vet thought it could be kennel cough. After more diagnostic tests they found him to have Dilated cardiomyopathy (DCM). It was suggested we take him off of his grain free food, Acana Lamb and Apple, and move him to a grain inclusive food. We transitioned him to Fromm's Gold Large Breed and started him on medications prescribed by a local veterinary cardiologist. After 6 months of new food and medications his heart significantly improved. The vet believes that the new diet along with meds shows this disease was caused from a grain free diet.	5	Years	Pit Bull	Dog		Pound
EON-381402	3/4/2019 10:52	Hill's Prescription Diet i/d Digestive Care Low Fat Chicken Flavor Dry Dog Food 27.5-lb bag	After switching (b) (6) to the prescription diet, his health and digestion seemed to improve. He became more energetic and like his younger self. However after about a month he started suddenly getting worse - He was lethargic, incontinent/frequently urinating, excessive thirst, blurred vision. We started on the strict rest again and limited pain medication, and he seemed to get a bit better. However his health then suddenly went downhill very quickly, displaying all of the prior month's symptoms, and clearly in some pain. (b) (6) then reached a point of severe pain and inability to move one day, and we knew that was it. About a week after (b) (6) passing, I was informed by a friend that two of their own dogs had recently passed away, and they believe it was directly related to the Science Diet I/D prescription canned food which had just been recalled as it was proved to cause kidney failure. While (b) (6) was eating dry food and not the recalled canned food, his symptoms exactly match those of kidney failure, it is too much of a coincidence. Please investigate the Hill'S Science Diet brand for the safety of other pets. Thank you.	13	Years	Pug	Dog	20	Pound

EON-381226	3/1/2019 13:24	Hills Science Diet Mature Adult Toy Breed Chicken canned food; Hills Science Diet Small and Toy Adult canned food;	There were a progressive series of symptoms leading up to severe illness and kidney disease. During the months of October, November, December 2018, (b) (6) was listless, not sleeping well, drinking water and urinating during the night, he started shaking very badly and seemed uncomfortable. For part of December some of these symptoms eased up, but then in January he became very ill. He started vomiting every day, diarrhea, lethargy, shaking, photo-sensitivity, having seizures demonstrated by loss of control of his muscles and violently shaking and collapsing. He became very weak, poor muscle coordination, and seemed disoriented and confused. He also seemed to have lost his eyesight for the most part. I first took him to the vet on January 25th after the vomiting and diarrhea wouldn't stop. The vet recommended a Hills Science Diet canned food, antacid, and nausea medication. The symptoms persisted, but once the Hills Science RX food ran out he went back to the regular canned Hills Science Sensitive stomach. The vomiting and diarrhea stopped but he continues to worsen in all of his motor functions, discomfort and energy level. Hills Science issued a recall and paid for his initial bloodwork which revealed he was in acute kidney failure. Since then, he has had a change in food and kidney flushes that have helped his condition, but he now has kidney failure. I believe this was caused by months of on and off ingesting contaminated Hills Science food. It had been over a year since (b) (6) last blood panel, but at that time his kidneys and liver were functioning perfectly. He has always been in excellent health with no concerns up until this event. He is a Pomeranian and is not predisposed to kidney failure.	15	Years	Other Canine/dog	Dog	5.5	Pound

EON-381209	3/1/2019 11:32	Taste of the Wild Pacific Stream Canine Recipe with Smoked Salmon A Grain-Free Diet	My mixed breed dog who has previously had no health issues since I adopted him in August of 2016 started coughing and had an increased respiratory rate around mid-January 2019. The veterinarian diagnosed him with heart disease and congestive heart failure and placed him on enalapril, furosemide, and pimobendan. I also changed his diet from Taste of the Wild Pacific Stream Grain-free food--which he had been on since I adopted him--to Purina Pro Plan Sensitive Skin and Stomach Salmon and rice dog food because my primary vet stated that his heart problems could be related to a grain-free diet. I was able to take him to (b) (6) veterinary hospital on 02/26/19 where (b) (6) diagnosed him with Degenerative Valvular Disease with Congestive Heart Failure. (b) (6) stated "...since he had been switched from a grain free diet, it is difficult to know whether he had poor contractility at the start of this disease although this would not have changed the appearance of his valve." (b) (6) started him also on spironolactone and stated that my dog's prognosis is that he likely won't live more than 9-12 months. Perhaps if he hadn't been on Taste of the Wild food that could have caused loss of contractility of his heart, my dog's heart valve wouldn't have started such a downward spiral. They need to take this food and other grain-free foods off the market because it is killing dogs. Now I have to have my other 6 dogs tested for possible cardiomyopathy related to a grain-free diet.	7	Years	Other Canine/dog	Dog	23	Pound

EON-381148	2/28/2019 16:04	Blue Buffalo Life Protection Formula Adult Chicken & Brown Rice Recipe Dry Dog Food	(b) (6) was a normal, happy, healthy dog, but then at age 6 1/2, he seemed to tire easily and constantly coughing. Then he had a fainting spell so we took him to emergency vet and they said he was in heart failure and had an enlarged heart. She referred us to a specialist who diagnosed him with DCM and they put him on medication. But a couple of weeks later, he collapsed, howling in pain, so rushed to ER again, and they said he was suffering from massive heart failure, so we had him euthanized. We never knew why a dog so young suffered major heart problems until someone recently showed me the article about the FDA Investigating Potential Connection Between Diet and Cases of Canine Heart Disease. We fed (b) (6) Blue Buffalo Grain Free from the time he was about two years old until his death at age 6 1/2. Everyone made the whole grain free idea sound like it was really better for dogs, and I never made the connection until reading the FDA article. It's too late for our dog, but I hope his story can help to find out the truth.	6	Years	Collie - Rough-haired	Dog	56	Pound

EON-381110	2/28/2019 10:32	Rachael Ray Nutrish Just 6	My dog started regurgitating his Rachael Ray Limited Ingredients Just 6 about 2 hours after he ate his dinner. I did not think too much of it at first. I was concerned but thought I would monitor him. On the morning of 2/20/19 he again regurgitated his food within a couple minutes of eating. I called my Vet and they asked if he got into anything? I stated that he did not. This was very out of character for (b) (6). They instructed me not to feed him and let his stomach settle then start him on boiled chicken and rice. I did just that and he was fine kept everything down. Thursday 2/21/19 in the evening I fed him chicken/rice and about a half cup of the Just 6 again to get him back on tract. He immediately regurgitated the food and the chicken/rice mix. I called the Vet first thing Friday and he was seen that morning. He had blood work done and was given like an IV under his skin to rehydrate him. He was put on medication given shots and we were instructed to NOT feed him anymore of the Just 6! My Vet is convinced he became ill from this food. (b) (6) has eaten this for probably 5 years without a problem. I ended up with a $426 Vet bill due to something in that bag of food. (b) (6) is now eating Royal Canin for German Sheps and has had no problems.	6	Years	Shepherd Dog - German	Dog	98	Pound

An echocardiogram done by a veterinary cardiologist the next day (9-11-2018) confirmed that he had severe dilated cardiomyopathy. He had been eating Earthborn Meadow Feast Grain Free dry kibble for the past 6 years, since he was transitioned off of puppy food at around 1 year old. They noted severe damage to his heart, aside from medication, he was given a diet change to Royal Canin Early Cardiac and a taurine test was done. Taurine levels from (b) (6) came back within normal range. He was also given taurine supplements and L-carnitine along with Vetmedin and enalapril. We were told the prognosis was very poor. We had a follow-up echocardiogram 3 months after the diet change on 12-11-2018. (b) (6) showed very minor improvement in the overall chamber size and wall thickness and the ability of his heart to constrict. They determined that this is dietary DCM due to the minor improvement at the 3 month echocardiogram after being taken off the grain free Earthborn Meadow Feast kibble. He is still extremely sick and we have been told that he has at the very most 6 to 18 (with a miracle) months from the time of diagnosis in September 2018.	7.5	Years	Terrier - Welsh	Dog	22.4	Pound

EON-380881	2/26/2019 11:20	Blue buffalo Freedom Senior Chicken Grain free Dry dog food 24lb bag	(b) (6) is my 12yr old Neutered Labradoodle Male Dog. I switched his food to Blue buffalo Freedom Senior Chicken Grain free Dry dog food in August 2018. The last order we placed was on 1/14/19 from Chewy.com. He had his annual check up at the vet 8/13/18 and he was as healthy as a 12 year old dog could be. He had some arthritis but all in all he was a healthy dog. On 1/23/19 i noticed he was having a hard time going up the stairs and thought it to be because of his arthritis. Although after he came into bed he had a hard time breathing and couldn't catch his breath. He finally did settle down and sleep. The next evening i noticed he wasn't his self and took him to the vet on that Friday 1/25/19. From there we ended up at the animal hospital as fluid had gathered around his heart and chest cavity and they needed to tap the fluid. After a full body scan there was a mass found in his heart. Surgery is basically impossible and they couldn't say for sure if it was cancerous but could start chemo. Due to the age we decided against it. He was finally released on 1/27/19. We had a follow up exam with the primary vet on 1/28/19, where he was observed to be in good spirits. (b) (6) was back to his old self the following days and his appetite picked up. In the early morning on (b) (6) (b) (6) had passed away. At the time we just suspected it to be due to the issues the vet had found. However, My best friend also has a older dog (b) (6) who is a 9 year old Mutt. I had offered the remaining dog food to them to feed him as i couldn't donate the food since it was already opened and i didn't want to waste it. My friends dog Dudley has always been a healthy dog. However, on 2/18/19 Dudley's Leg was severely swollen and he was limping. It had been icy and we suspected him to have slipped and have a muscle spasm. on 2/20/19, when he was not getting any better I had Brought him to the vet to get checked out. They did X-Rays and did blood tests and said they would have more information in the next day or two. I was able to bring (b) (6) home. On 2/21/19 he started to have a bloody nose and i immediately rushed him to the animal hospital. After doing several tests they had suspected he was poisoned. He had to get several transfusions and spend several days in the Hospital. He was released on 2/25/19. The only common denominator that these two dogs had was that they were both fed this food. They never had another contact with each other or their respective environments. (b) (6) was a very protective dog so I had never let the two dogs meet. Also Neither house hold has any rat poisoning as we have other animals in the household. I keep the food in plastic containers and tossed the bag back in January so i am unable to identify exactly the information requested by the manufacturers.	9	Years	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	100	Pound

We have taurine tested at (b) (6) We continue to treat the DCM.  I do realize that there is probably a genetic component to my danes DCM. I am reporting for a couple reasons. I've been doing a cardiac workup and echocardiogram every 4 months since diagnosis. We taurine tested but did not see a taurine deficiency, so we did not change his diet or supplement with taurine. With the new study that recently came out that showed that even dogs with normal taurine, their DCM improved with changing from a grain free diet and supplementing with taurine. We've done 6 echocardiograms and 24 hour holter on our dog, 5 of them since diagnosis. I'm going to change his food and add a supplement and in June, I'm going to do another echocardiogram. While I think it's pretty good to assume it's probably genetic based because he is a great dane, we will soon see if the changes from grain free will improve his condition. Due to the expense, I doubt there are a lot of DCM dogs on grain free diets, have had as much testing and extensive workups. I'm happy to provide all medical records from diagnosis, and into the future.	7	Years	Great Dane	Dog	200	Pound

He was lethargic. He was treated for a UTI. He continued to decline and was taken back to vet. He had lost 8lbs in a week. Images and labs were normal. Same symptoms continued. He was admitted to ICU. He appeared to improve when given IV fluids. The vet was feeding canned Hills i/d chicken stew. They instructed me to feed the same so I purchased a case and began feeding him the canned food with dry food mixed in. Once home he began to decline again, vomiting. Would eat rice and chicken, refused canned or dry food. (i/d) Returned to vet, suspected pancreatitis. Was checked for dehydration and kept at the clinic with meds for nausea and vomiting. No IV fluids needed. He was drinking excessively. He stayed at the vet's through the day and I was told he was fed 4-5 cans of canned i/d and ate without problem. I picked him up and the vet said, "he's going to be fine. needed to get the nausea stopped is all". Within minutes of getting home, he began to tremor terribly, couldn't walk, listless, no muscle control, panting rapidly, hot to cold in minutes. I learned of the Hill's food recall and contacted them and an emergency vet. The emergency vet told me there was nothing they could do and that I should take him to his regular vet in the morning. Through that night he continued to tremor. He would take fluids and keep them down but not eat. He could not walk, urinated on himself and was taken in to the vet first thing in the morning. EON-380213	2/20/2019 9:36	Purina ONE Chicken and Rice Formula	Recently purchased a bag of Purina One Chicken and Rice formula dry food for both my beagle and my Pomeranian. I have never had any issues with this product until this recent purchase, as this is has been the food my dogs eat since I have had them. Both dogs have been vomiting and have had numerous counts of diarrhea. Some times it has been bloody. When they don't eat the food, the vomiting and diarrhea stops. They do act normal and seem to still want to eat and drink. I used to work for a vet clinic and have seen food allergies multiple times but since I have never had issues with this particular food, it has begun to worry me that something is in there that should not be causing my pups to get sick. I have not heard of anyone else having this problem but I would like to report this incident to help others who DO purchase this food in case something is wrong. EON-380199	2/20/2019 0:28	Cesar	I purchased Cesar dog wet food 2/16/2019 at my local Walgreens I bought the $4 for 4 deal. I been feeding my puppy this wet dog food for the past couple of months never had a problem till now . I had gave my puppy (5 months ) 3 of the dog food already with no problem. 2/18/2019 I was getting to give him his normal afternoon feeding. I pulled the small Cesar dog wet packaged out my Walgreens bag ( place of purchased) and proceeded to open the product. What was before my eyes was beyond words . The smelled filled my home immediately & I began to gag at what I seen and smelled. The dog food was packaged with PURE FENCES ! I was furious !!! Now food that just goes bad has a rotten or sour smell . No this was straight up poop . It gotten all over my hands the texture was clearly diarrhea . I was disgusted . I immediately wrapped the food up and took it back to the place of purchase ( Walgreens) and the store manager Kevin wouldn't even come out to speak to me at first . He kept sending out his assistant who kept trying to cover the shell with febreze .He wouldn't even give me a full refund he didn't take no type of responsibility on why this product was able to be on his shelves. I asked him to remove every Cesar product from his shelve. He told me "No because there's no recall" . I don't know if at some point I'm able to upload a photo on this report if not can someone contact me soon as possible and I will email the photo.

He had always been a light eater Just eating a few bites of dry food at a time all during the day. The vet thought he might have mild chronic pancreatitis and I agreed. He ate 1/3 can of the Hill's I/D twice per day which I added water to and warmed it slightly to encourage him to eat. He ate about 3 1/2 cans over a few days before refusing to eat it anymore. In the meantime I offered him his usual dry food with warm water and he ate some of that for a few days. He began Projectile vomiting white phlegm and refused to eat anything. I would offer him other things to eat. He would try but everything made him vomit and once it did he refused to eat that again. I gave him Nutrivet puppy nutritional supplement for extra calories and vitamins and CBD oil for dogs. The CBD seemed to calm his stomach and allow him to eat small amounts. He drank water and continued to urinate as normal. After I had exhausted all types of food in an effort to get him to eat, I took him back to the doctor. He prescribed something to encourage him to eat and another antibiotic. That same week the recall was issued. I still had the food left from the case. I checked it and the two remaining cans had one of the recalled lot numbers along with the stamp on the plastic cover on the case. I sent an email to the doctor and took pictures of the food and the case before returning it to the doctors office. I told them again that it was on the recall list and I wanted a credit for it along with the small cans of another Hill's food that the vet said any dog would eat. My dog had lost six pounds since his previous visit. The doctor decided to keep him during the day and give him fluids. Then on Saturday he checked his blood levels and they were far worse than before. He kept him over the weekend on fluids and rechecked his blood levels on Monday. They were all elevated and my dog was so weak he could barely walk. We decided to euthanized him as there was nothing else to do. His doctor sent him to UT extension service for a necropsy. So she brought him to live with us due to lack of space at her sons dads home. Upon her arrival I noticed that he was much skinnier than he should be, I thought it odd cause he is a sturdy big dog. After getting all his love and reconnecting with our baby boy (b) (6) went to feed him. I made his bed area then went outside to garage. I let him in back to poop and pee. no poop. which isnt normal for him. I came back inside through the garage. I glanced at his food wondering if he had eatin at all. His bowl was full still. Thats when i saw what looked like paper, a leaf, a pebble.. I wasnt sure so i grabbed it cause what ever it was DID NOT belong in his dish. Do my surprise it was a shard of glass. I panic and searched his bowl and found more class and a rubber band. I took the 55 lb bag to the kitchen and dug through it. It was full of glass and other junk. I called the 800 number and spoke with a Micheal who was kind and patched me over to Kmberly, Kimberly was a rude evasive person that was tryinh to put the blame on me and the family. As far as his condition, we don't know what will happen and are monitoring his levels of Vitamin D and his calcium and other vital blood work weekly. We are told there is no treatment and that we must wait for the vitamin to leave his system which could take up to 4 months and in that time untold damage to his organs could occur. EON-379744	2/14/2019 10:40	Beneful Healthy Weight	Our dogs were tiring of their previous dry dog food, so we decided to try out Beneful Healthy Weight as an attempt to provide them with some variety. We bought the food from a local Sam's Club on Sunday, February 10th and began feeding it to the dogs that evening. My son noted that our Boxer, (b) (6) seemed to be in pain while trying to have a bowel movement late that night but we did not make the connection to the food at that point. She continued to seem to have problems on Monday, but it was not until Tuesday (2/12) that she began throwing up repeatedly and having bouts of diarrhea. I called our veterinarian and she recommended the standard protocol of keeping her off food and giving her very little water for the next 24 hours since we still did not know a cause for her distress. After the waiting period, we were told to carefully reintroduce food in the form of cooked ground beef mixed with rice to help tighten up her stools. However, later that same evening, (b) (6) broke out in hives all over her back and her face became puffy. She was clearly having an allergic reaction. The following morning I called the vet and she asked me if there had been any changes to her diet, etc., and I told her about the Beneful. She said that was likely the culprit since that was the only major change we had made in the past few days (i.e. I did not wash her bedding in new soap and she did not have any new toys or anything). Her hives were markedly improved by Wednesday evening and she had only had one more incidence of vomiting and diarrhea between Tuesday and Wednesday. We gave her some ground beef and rice as instructed and she continued to improve. She was given a small amount of her regular food this morning and she seems to be returning to her old self. After some investigation, it seems that (b) (6) had a reaction similar to reactions reported by others who had fed their dogs this food. Luckily for us, we caught it early enough and took her off of it fast enough that she did not suffer an extended or more serious adverse event. (b) (6) is the only one of our four dogs to have had a bad reaction to this food, but I wanted to report this because her reaction was so swift and so severe.	1	Years	Boxer (German Boxer)	Dog	61	Pound

The next month I was more careful and was unable to purchase for the same reason. I notified the manager and believe the product was pulled. The next month my wife had a long conversation with the manager and he admitted the strip mall had a problem and they were working on it. 			ill with vomiting, diarrhea and bloody stools such that we had to take her to an emergency hospital in (b) (6) some 75 miles away. When we arrived at the hospital we were told we had a 3 hour wait for someone to see her. After taking her outside 3 times in 5 minutes for her bloody diarrhea, we grabbed a technician to look at her outside; the technician was so alarmed at her terrible condition, that she immediately took (b) (6) into the hospital, made a quick analysis and started her on an IV. They finally stabilized her after 4 days in the hospital and released her. However, she rapidly deteriorated and was readmitted for another 4 day period in the hospital. Prior to and during this period, (b) (6) developed a habit of refusing to eat the Hill's Prescription Diet w/d when placed before her, by smelling the food she previously had eaten willingly, walking away and not eating. Since she has diabetes, we forcibly made her eat the food so that we could give her an insulin shot not on an empty stomach. In hindsight apparently we were forcing her to eat bad w/d canine food and exasperating her problems. Upon the second release she was switched to Royal Canin Glycobalance canine food and has had no relapses. Our second Schnauzer, (b) (6) was diagnosed some time ago with valley fever and our veterinarian prescribed Hill's Prescription Diet i/d Digestive Care canine food because of its nutrition ingrediants that would support his lifestyle while dealing with valley fever. None of the vets could understand why his BUN and other kidney values skyrocketed. He vomited bile, lost 2 lbs in one month (was only 16 lbs to begin with), had excessive thirst and urination. Kidney BUN levels were over 300 and they shouldn't have been any higher than 25. Shame on you Hill's for not monitoring your food production more carefully. We are so heartbroken and their food poisoned him to death. $1500 in vet bills and hundreds of dollars in the expensive food. We will never get our sweet boy back but at least we know now WHAT caused his death. I cried and cried for days saying "why? why? I just dont understand why did he get so violently sick and died? If I only had a reason -it just doesn't make sense". His vet gave me ALL his lab work for the past 6 months, their records of prescribing this food and their comments of not understanding why he was becoming so ill so fast - 3 WEEKS! I am concerned because the potential for a large ingestion to lead to issues this serious is not something that most veterinarians are aware of and I want the word to get out and would like to see something on the packaging indicating that if a large ingestion occurs, induction of emesis needs to occur to prevent issues. Most veterinarians may think that GI upset or pancreatitis could occur, but aren't familiar with glycerin toxicity issues. I contacted MARS and they said that their product is not at fault, would not divulge how much glycerin is present in their product and overall, dismissed me. EON-379484	2/12/2019 13:44	BLUE Wilderness Salmon For Adult Dogs	I am contacting you because I noticed that the FDA was looking into grain free dog food being a link to DCM. On 02/10/2018 My wife and I had to put our Rottweiler down. The reason he was put down per the veterinarian was he had DCM / enlarged heart. This is something that came out of nowhere. The day before he was running in the back yard and showed no signs of DCM. The vet stated DCM is hard to fine until it's too late and there was not much we could do. (b) (6) (our Rottweiler) was 7 years old and we took him to the vet every year and he never showed any signs. After (b) (6) died I contacted the breeder where we got him and notified them of what the vet stated. The breeder stated no other dogs from (b) (6) litter had any problems with DCM and the parents of (b) (6) were still alive and doing well. I thought this we odd as DCM can be genetic but out of the 5 Rottweiler from (b) (6) litter and his parents still being alive and showing no signs this brought questions to me. It's been over year now that (b) (6) has been gone and this morning I saw a news article that the FDA was looking into grain free dog food being a link to DCM and I wanted to make contact with you guys and pass on my story and maybe it could help. Information about (b) (6) and what food we provided him is below. Thanks for looking into this and also if you could keep me informed about the FDA findings that would be great. Also If I can be anymore help please contact me. (b) (6) Rottweiler American / German mix. Have papers from breeder. Dog Food- BLUE Wilderness®SalmonFor Adult Dogs. EON-379417	2/11/2019 20:08	Purina Fancy Feast Seafood Classic Pate Collection	I purchased Purina Fancy Feast Canned Cat Food, Variety Pack of Seafood Classic Pate, 48 Cans, from Sam's Club in (b) (6) on 120718. I stored the box of cans in a cabinet inside my home. Afterwards I kept getting a whiff of a bad odor and could not determine where it was coming from. After using about half of the box, I pulled it out of the cabinet to retrieve the remaining cans and place them on the shelf. I suddenly smelled something exactly like feces. I looked inside the box and discovered what looked like empty shells from bird seed and upon closer inspection I discovered one can of Ocean Whitefish and Tuna was stuck to the box with a brown material that looked like it could be dried liquid excrement. I threw the can, which had not been opened, into a bucket of soapy water and took the box to the garage. When I returned inside I was overwhelmed with the stench of feces. I poured out the soapy water and cleaned the can of cat food and bucket. I sprayed the entire house with Febreze Air Spray for two days afterwards trying to get rid of the smell. Last night (021019) when I fed the cat I opened the can of Ocean Whitefish and Tuna and as soon as the seal was broken I was again overcome with the gagging smell of feces. I had only pulled the top of the can maybe one third of the way back but I could see inside the can was half full of a brown or black material which was covered by white slime. I quickly slid the can into a double zip plastic bag but I could still smell the wretched odor. I took the bag containing the can and put it inside another double zip plastic bag. I wanted to take the can outside to the trash but realized it would be needed if the horrible smelling material was to be identified so I reluctantly placed the double bagged can in a remote corner of my refrigerator. Today I Googled Fancy Feast Consumer Complaint and discovered a website www.consumeraffairs.com where 136 complaints about Fancy Feast Canned Cat Food had been entered with a number of recent complaints from consumers indicating in the past few months their cats have become ill and even died after eating Fancy Feast Cat Food which they had fed their pets for years with no issues. It appears something terrible is going on with this brand of cat food and it needs to be investigated and recalled.

Due to recent discovery of diet-associated dilated cardiomyopathy (DCM) in dogs, and especially since (b) (6) is a golden retriever (this breed seems to be more predisposed to this), the owner had his whole blood taurine level measured. It was low (204) for a golden retriever (ref. reported to be >250). The patient had no symptoms of DCM. An echocardiogram was performed on 10/10/18 to screen for the presence of DCM. Mild DCM was diagnosed. The patient was switched from Nutro grain-free chicken, lentil, and sweet potato dry food onto Fromm's gold adult dry food. Also, taurine supplementation (1000 mg by mouth every 12 hours) was started. A recheck taurine level in January '19 was normal (331). A recheck echocardiogram on 1/31/19 revealed that the DCM had resolved.	6	Years	Retriever - Golden	Dog	30.6	Kilogram

The issue worsened through the day and he started vomiting. He went to the vet and was diagnosed with cardiomegaly, heart failure, and a stage 3-4 heart murmur. He was started on Lasix and heart Rx. The BNP came back as over 1500 (normal 900.) The only other prior clinical sign was that he was panting more.  In hindsight he had a decreased energy level over the last 6 months. I have attached a link to their online brand and product guide here: http://online.flipbuilder.com/pneo/ubbbq/mobile/index.html In the health concerns section towards the back of the leaflet specific claims include that their "kidney diet" will improve Glomerular Filtration Rate in dogs with Chronic Kidney Disease and their Fermented Fish Stock will lower hypertension associated with Chronic Kidney Disease. EON-379141	2/8/2019 14:28	Nutro Wholesome Essentials Pasture-Fed Lamb & Rice Senior Dry Dog Food 30 lbs	Over the past year, my dog has lost approximately 12 pounds. On Wednesday I found out the reason why. In January 2018, the exact time (b) (6) started eating this food, the Nutro Company changed the dog food formula but never notified consumers, online dog food sites or national chain pet product stores, at least not in my city. No notification of this change was given on the bag of food itself.	11	Years	Sheepdog - Old English	Dog	67	Pound

I called VET right away but couldn't get in until two days later, but by morning she had collapsed. Took her to VET as emergency. Blood test showed complete kidney failure and liver failure. VET said she was dying, and she did indeed look that way. She was unresponsive. We were able to say goodbye and the Vet said she was near death and suffering so she euthanized her and had her cremated.	7	Years	Samoyed	Dog	57	Pound

He also lost 1-2 pounds between his vet visit on the (b) (6) and the (b) (6). We discussed what could be wrong with him, could it be an esophageal condition? Could his ibd be causing all this? Could it be something worse? He is suffering, is it humane to keep going like this? We wrestled with these thoughts and spoke with his vet 3 times on the (b) (6) t when it was finally decided that we could see him suffer any longer. EON-378919	2/6/2019 22:16	Wholehearted	(b) (6) is a new kitten. He was eating wholehearted kitten wet food and Instinct dry kitten food. He is in perfect health and is from a local breeder. He came with complete disease/genetic testing and was given a clean bill of heath. He didn't have any issues with digestion or show any signs of sickness until he ate some of the Wholehearted adult food that our other cats didn't eat. This day he had extremely explosive and bloody diarrhea. This was the day I stopped feeding the wholehearted foods all together. He continued to have diarrhea for a few days. He was only eating instinct dry and some of the Kidney wet food prescribed to my other cat (b) (6). He was the youngest and most healthy.	4	Months	Ragdoll	Cat

After having extreme vet bills I was unable to take them to the vet as well having paid out thousands for 3 other cats. I used the kidney food prescribed to (b) (6) to feed them, they were not force fed because they were eating on their own. They recovered and were not damaged as badly. My kitten who had been on a different brand had eaten some of the Wholehearted by accident. He had diarrhea so bad it was complete liquid. I immediately pulled the food from them, because I realized that it wasn't just their stomachs adjusting. That was the day every single cat had explosive bloody diarrhea. (b) (6) continued to decline rapidly, the vet gave me urgent care food and antibiotics. (b) (6) was not responding and his body was unable to hold the fluids they gave him, they passed through his system very quickly. I have blood work, urinalysis and vet record for (b) (6). The vet agreed while she first thought (b) (6) decline was due to cancer, having 3 cats with the same exact symptoms it appeared to be food poisoning of some kind. (b) (6) was no longer responding to any treatment, his gums were blistering and his drooling was not stopping. He was not able to use the bathroom or keep food down. EON-378903	2/6/2019 18:40	Taste of the Wild Pacific Stream	Before the family left the house he was acting energetic, running and jumping as normal. After returning home three hours later, he was moving very slowly, would normally be excited to go outside and eat dinner, which he was not excited at all. Went out doors very slowly, attempted to go to the bathroom, barely made it up the 6 stairs back onto the deck and collapsed once he entered back into the house. He was still breathing, but unresponsive, no eye movement and mouth was foaming. After trying to wake him back up and shaking him, we immediately called the emergency vet hospital as this was a Sunday evening and our regular vet office was closed. The initial check out by the Dr. reported that he had a heart arrhythmia and an enlarged heart, as well as a very high heart rate. We retraced everything for the day and know that he had not ingested anything that was not given to him or would harm him. That office set him up with an IV pic line so that he was ready for treatment once we arrived at the second vet hospital. They treated him and monitored him over night and was scheduled to be seen by the cardiologist. The Dr. called the next morning to give the details she observed and asked what type of diet we feed him, as they are starting to see linked cases with these symptoms. It turns out that the GRAIN FREE dry dog food diet that we had chosen as what was best for our dogs is what has led us to this point and caused all of these health issues. He is now on two heart medications to help with his irregular heart beat and strengthen his heart and two vitamin supplements to help with both issues as well. It has been a very heart wrenching, exhausting, disappointing and upsetting week since the issue started.	7	Years	Retriever - Labrador	Dog	70	Pound

She was drinking much more water than usual, thus urinating much more also. She was vomiting multiple times per day. She was very lethargic, low energy. Because she's such a small dog, it was noticeable that she was starting to lose weight. After about three days, we took her to our vet on December 27, 2018, where they ran blood work.  We found out that that her blood was very dehydrated and she was put on an IV for the next several hours. The rest of her blood test came back normal. We were given an appetite stimulant as well as two cans of Hill's Prescription Diet dog food (which we found out later was NOT part of the recall). She improved after several days.  It was about this time that we started a new bag of her regular dog food, Royal Canin for small dogs. It wasn't until February 5, 2019, that I read about the recent dog food recalls. I called out vet office, and found that the Hill's Prescription Diet Canine that we received were not part of the affected lots. However, because of the very similar symptoms, I was concerned that the dog food she finished around the same time could have been affected if a supplier was in common with Hill's and Royal Canin.	15	Years	Poodle - Toy	Dog	4.5	Pound

They both drank water during the day and we stopped about every 2 hrs to let them walk around. Tuesday they were offered kibble but did not eat. Tuesday afternoon we noticed (b) (6) had projectile diarrhea. It was dark but didn't seem to have blood. Went to a Pet Supply store in (b) (6) and got a canned dog food that was chicken and brewers rice. Gave them some of that with steamed rice. Both had diarrhea thru the night and threw up the food they had eaten and were generally uncomfortable. Headed home Wed because they were sick. Gave them a few small milkbones and any water they wanted. Put them on home cooked chicken breast once we got home which they ate. Waited til Thurs to see if they would improve and took them to vet. She prescribed Reglan Metronidazole and Centrine and gave them injections of centrine, reglan and penicillin. After a few days of treatment and thinking the problem was motion sickness, I gave them another piece of the chicken treats and diarrhea started again. They are feeling better now. We have been giving this to him for at least 2 years, and always purchase from the same pet store (b) (6) near our house. Upon opening the bag, I noticed the food looked a little different than it usually does, darker in color and a bit oily... just to be safe I checked exp date and read front and back of bag to see if there was notice of a formula change. I thought maybe they increased fish oil (as it's salmon food) therefore resulting in a more oily kibble. I fed this to my dog, but he did not finish it all as he usually does. I tried again the next morning and the same thing, i even tried to hand feed him which will usually work but he would not eat the food... two days later after not being able to get him to eat this food I purchased another bag of the EXACT SAME food from petco. i called ahead of time to ask if they were aware of any formula changes or if they had any customer complaints. they said none that they were aware of. This bag of food looked to me the way it has always looked in the past. lighter brown, and dry. i offered him this food, he ate a little but would not finish as at this point he has completely lost his appetite. as of today, a few days later he's been admitted into the veterinary hospital with EXTREMELY ELEVATED LIVER LEVELS. So high that the machine in the vets' office could not read. This due to ingesting something TOXIC. clearly something that has contaminated this dog food. EON-378791	2/5/2019 21:16	Hill's Prescription Diet digestive care l/d low-fat rive vegetable and chicken stew	My dog, (b) (6) suffered an attack of pancreatitis in July 2018 and was recommended to start a low-fat prescription food. I was given the choice of either Royal Canin or Hill's, and began filling a Hill's prescription at PetSmart. I had purchased multiple cans of the Hill's l/d low fat chicken stew periodically since August or September 2018. I would use that to supplement her dry Hill's low-fat food from time to time. From around 11/15 to the morning of 11/18 I fed her exclusively from cans of the Hill's low fat l/d chicken stew (from unknown lot numbers) first purchased on 9/23/18 because I had run out of her dry food. I then purchased a new bag of food and several more cans of the low-fat Hill's i/d food on 11/18/18 at PetSmart. I had a vague sense she might not be feeling well, as she was whining a bit more when lying down, and I thought she might be heading toward another health event, but she continued to eat, drink, and eliminate reasonably well. She had struggled some with her appetite in those last few weeks, but I could usually count on her wanting to eat the chicken stew food, so I would use a spoonful with her dry food to entice her to eat. I also recall that she was drinking a bit more water even than usual and I wondered if she wasn't responding to her desmopressin as well and needed a dose change, or I wondered if the batch of desmopressin I had received wasn't as effective. Around 1:00am on (b) (6), I woke to (b) (6) laying on her side in her bed and barking extremely loudly--at first I wondered if she was having a dream, but quickly realized it was a medical problem when I couldn't rouse her. I wondered if she was barking from pain, but she seemed unresponsive to any touch from me, which led me to believe she wasn't aware of her surroundings. I attempted to pick her up and realized her jaw was clenched on her dog bed, so I began to believe she was having a seizure. I brought her into the kitchen so I could see her better and she had quieted, but then had another short episode of barking. At the end of that she was breathing shallowly, but was largely unresponsive. I took her immediately to the (b) (6) in (b) (6) and they began to treat her. The vet reported that she had elevated levels of calcium in her blood, but didn't mention vitamin D toxicity as a possibility. I don't know if they specifically tested her vitamin d level. The vet wasn't certain if she seized or had a stroke--she thought perhaps it was a stroke related to a previously	12	Years	Dachshund (unspecified)	Dog	18	Pound

			undiagnosed cancer. Given (b) (6) age and health history, she said I could consider euthanasia at that point, but could also try and see if she would improve. (b) (6) was on oxygen and had begun to respond to stimulation, so I chose to have her admitted to the ICU for monitoring. Around 6:30 am, the vet called and said she suspected (b) (6) had another event because one of her pupils was dilated, and she was posturing. She recommended I consider euthanasia again, and at that point I agreed. I did not ask for a necropsy at the time because I didn't have a reason to suspect anything outside of a natural process. Subsequently, I read about the dog food recalls that occurred around that time, and thought some of (b) (6) symptoms were similar. Since Hill's wasn't a food that was recalled at that time, I didn't pursue the issue. When the Hill's recall was recently announced, I compared the cans of food still in my possession and determined I had lot numbers T1911124 and T1911125. As best I can tell, these lot numbers haven't yet been recalled, but because she had some symptoms of possible toxicity, and because she had eaten the food so recently in advance of her death, I wanted to make a report. I still have the 3 remaining cans I purchased from 11/18 in my possession if they are needed for any reason.

EON-378777	2/5/2019 19:20	Hills Science Dry Dog Food.	After watching the news on how the FDA has recalled the Hills Science wet canned food due to high levels of Vitamin D, I think my young dog is reacting similarly to the dry food. She is very picky on dog foods and we usually have to mix in other foods to get her to eat the dry food. She ate it the first week and a half we bought the food, and unfortunately we buy the largest bag to stretch our dollar. So we cannot take it back because the bag has been long gone. She used to two cups in the morning and two at night. Now, my dog eats MAYBE one cup a day. In the middle of the night I heard her vomit. Her skin has been the driest I have seen it. I really didn't know what it was until the FDA recall of the wet food on tv. I feel that if this information is of any help it should be passed along. I will now be going out to buy new dog food after seeing the FDA recall.	1	Years	Retriever - Golden	Dog	55	Pound

EON-378720	2/5/2019 12:44	Acana - grain free formulas. We fed both chicken and beef formulas.	Our dog was fed Acana Grain free food for her lifetime. We did a lot of research and thought we were feeding her a good brand. She began to have a coughing spell like she was choking or gagging. After a few days we took her to the veterenarian to find out that her heart was extremely enlarged and she was in congestive heart failure. We immediately took her to a cardiac specialist that day and were told that the outcome was not overly optimistic. We were told this was highly unlikely for a dog her age and her breed as she was diagnosed with Dialated Cardiomyopathy. This was in August 2017. At the time we were told she would probably have about 6-8 months to live and we began giving her many different heart medications. At the time we were still feeding her Acana grain free food. Her repeat visits showed no improvement and actually her heart continued to enlarge. In March 2018 we received a call from our heart specialist regarding some studies they had found with DCM and grain free food and we were told to immediately take her off this food. She continued on her medication regime which includes 4 heart medications as well as taurine and L-carnitine supplements and a drug was added for high blood pressure in her lungs. At her next visit several months after being removed from grain free food, her heart actually showed some improvement and at her visit in January 2019 we recieved additional great news that her heart has continued to get smaller and her blood pressure issues have resolved in her lungs. In addition, for the first time her heart function has improved! We were told that there is no way that her condition would have improved like this from just medication and there is definitely some correlation from removing her from grain free food. I have thought about this for a long time and have decided that this must be reported. I am confident that the food is a contributing factor to my Dog's heart condition.	1.5	Years	Retriever - Labrador	Dog	70	Pound

EON-378511	2/3/2019 18:08	Hill's® Prescription Diet® Metabolic + Mobility Canine Vegetable & Tuna Stew 12.5oz	My Veterinarian called me on 2/2/19 to notify me that a product I purchased from them on 12/18/18, has been recalled. In December I was going on vacation and hired someone to take care of my dogs. Its common for my dogs not to eat well when I am away, so I purchased this product to be added to the same dry version of this product to promote their desire to eat. From the time my hired help started feeding this product my dogs were not wanting to eat, but would eventually by the end of the day. I was told they were also drinking water excessively, peeing on the floor, gagging, drooling and throwing up, which all were NOT things they would do while I was away, nor anytime. This person was very upset, worried and scared. I tried to ease her mind by telling her that it wasn't her fault that my dogs were doing all of this and that we should chalk it up to me being gone. When I arrived back home a week later, both still had all those symptoms and had lost a noticeable amount of weight. I took one of my dogs to my vet. They put her on different medicines. My dogs finished the affected product. The symptoms have lessened, but not gone. And now, I am sure this recalled product is the root and cause.	14	Years	Spaniel - Springer English	Dog	58	Pound

He was diagnosed with diabetes the first week of Sept. At this time (Dec), his diabetes was managed but I strived for more consistency in his "bell curve" BG levels (in hindsight I wish I never did). Less than one week after starting Hills I noticed rapid weight loss. I asked my vet (also a Hills vender) if it was due to w/d, her response..."I don't think so". Again I'd like to reiterate, my dog was not overweight, he did not have any pre-existing medical issues (besides recent diabetes diagnoses), was happy &amp; EXTREMELY active! Under the direction of my vet, I continued to feed him this food &amp; four days later he was hospitalized due to: loss of appetite, diaherra, vomiting, lethargy, etc. - all signs of vit D overdose!!! He was discharged 3 days later (Christmas Eve) but was not his typical spunky self. I asked if I should discontinue food &amp; again the discharging vet said, no. After feeding him Christmas Eve night, Christmas day he refused to eat, yet again! Given his abrupt &amp; rapid decline in health, I didn't visit with family Christmas day! In response to his GI issues, the vet conducted an ultrasound &amp; the Internal Specialist, at this time, did not see anything alarming. Over the course of the following months we ran EVERY test imaginable: CT scans, ultrasounds, endoscopy, etc. My vet hypothesized the following ailments: brain tumor, IBD, colon cancer, GI cancer! Nothing was ever found; besides a severe infection in his GI tract! I continued to question my vet about the dog food, as his decline in health correlated with my when he stared the Hills food. Again, my vet dismissed my concerns &amp; I (stupidly) continued to feed him the Hills. He was ultimately admitted into the hospital THREE times, this past time for over a week! The last week he was admitted for EXTREME GI issues. He almost died!!! My vet offered two options: euthanize or insert an E-tube &amp; conduct the GI biopsy, as they suspected bowel cancer due to the level of severity of his health decline! Id like to reiterate, prior to this month, my dog has NEVER had any GI issues! The day that the vet suggested the tube &amp; scope or	13	Years	Terrier - Boston	Dog	21.6	Pound

			euthanize, I didn't get to visit with my dog &amp; I am so happy I didn't! My husband made the decision to proceed with the e-tube, prior to my visitation with him. After the decision was made, and more money was paid I went to visit him, prior to surgery...he looked AWFUL!!! Diarrhea was chronically leaking out of him (they also use the Hills in the hospital for admitted patients)! I questioned if I was making the right decision to proceed with the surgery, and my vet asdured me he was not suffering &amp; advised us to proceed with the e-tube. Fortunately my husband stuck to his decision &amp; we conducted the biospy &amp; had the e-tube placed (since he was still refusing to eat orally we hoped we could get nutrition in him)! The Internal Specialist said he had white mucus throughout his GI tract &amp; had extreme inflammation of his bowels. Whatever was ailing him was not good! After the surgery, my dog was treated for 6 additional days in the ER. My vet then changed his diet to Hills i/d canned food, where upon discharge I was instructed to e-feed him this mixed with a little water. Four days later my buddy was still deathly ill...and his health continued to decline! I couldn't understand how my spunky, healthy boston could be abruptly dying so rapidly! At our f/up appointment (4 days later) my vet gave me "the talk" &amp; said this is her one final "hail mary". She sent us home with more i.v. fluids, injectable steriods (despite adverse effects with diabetes) and said, "if he's not better in a few days, we need to let him go." At this time, his kidneys were failing and he had deadly levels of phosphorus in his blood! Again, I question the food - he was a specimen of health prior to this food!!! We had conducted EVERY test imaginable &amp; could NOT find ANYTHING WRONG! What else could it be?! Again she tells me she didn't think it's the food but by this point strongly disagreed with her. I took my weak, frail &amp; dying dog home and I prayed like I've never prayed before! I ultimately made the executive decision to no longer feed him Hills - he's literally dying in my arms, at this point what do I have to lose?! And sure enough, he begins to get

			better! Within two days of discontinuing the food, he "shakes out" his e-tube! He still has a long road to recovery throughout this debacle he lost FIVE pounds - almost 30% of his body weight in less than two months! Since he is diabetic recovery will be slow &amp; extensive! I have spent thousands of dollars desperately trying to keep my healthy dog alive! I have diligently researched Hills recalls throughout this entire process and, despite hundreds of complaints on consumer affairs, no recalls ever appeared! I have the cans of both types of foods that I am KNOW made him deathly ill. I have noted the sku &amp; lot # of each below. I can also provide copies of all medical procedures conducted &amp; blood level test resukts throughout this entire nightmare. PLEASE CONDUCT ADDITIONAL TESTING - I urge you!!! I would hate for any other dog (or cat) &amp; owner to have to endure this suffering! This has been the worst two months of our lives! If additional testing is not performed, at your discretion, I will send my "leftover" cans for supplemental analysis. However, I'm unsure who to send them to, your guidance would be greatly appreciated! I wish I learned that the FDA oversees dog food prior to now, as I would've contacted you earlier! Currently, Hills has a "voluntary" recall on these canned foods but have not confirmed this contamination prior to the dated they listed. I know with every fiber of my being that this food IS TOXIC!!! Hills has an extensive history of toxic food recalls, how can this gross negligence continue to occur year after year?! I am INCREDIBLY grateful the FDA is available to oversee the safety of dog food! I wish I knew Hills operated under Science Diet...given their track record, I NEVER would've exposed my dog to this deadly food. Digestive/Weight Glucose Management (w/d) Sku: 52742 70170 Lot: T0922324 23417 Digestive Care (i/d) Sku: 52742 70080 Lot: T2320509 24549 Thank you for your time, support &amp; expertise. Respectfully, (b) (6)

EON-378456	2/2/2019 20:08	Earthborn Holistic Western Feast	Our 4Y old dog (b) (6) (Husky mix) started experiencing severe GI upset on Monday (b) (6)—Mostly watery and mucousy diarrhea with undigested food and some vomiting. She had often had cycles of GI upset over the last year, but we were always told by our vet to feed bland food and were never asked about her food or brand. Everyone seemed to think she had a "sensitive stomach." This time, the GI upset did not resolve and progressed to hemorrhagic diarrhea with frank blood, noticed by her owners on (b) (6). She was taken to the ER a (b) (6) the same day and was found to be severely anemic and her blood was found to be markedly hemolyzed (see attached records). She presented with a fever. She was transferred to (b) (6) emergent and required 2 blood transfusions that night. By the following evening she was starting to decline again, with liver and kidney values rising and extreme lethargy. She also developed very red skin, eyes, and gums were injected which doctors found curious given her severe anemia and previous hemorrhagic state. Ultrasound findings suggestive of hepatitis, nephritis, and GI bloating/distention. COOMBS test came back negative. Her third night in the ICU she developed tachypnea, bradycardia, and severe edema in lungs and abdomen. It was hard for her to breathe and the decision was made to hasten death by euthanasia. With such an aggressive disease process and no diagnosis yet found, doctors at (b) (6) recommended (b) (6) be taken to (b) (6) for a necropsy. Necropsy results found extensive liver and kidney damage and also moderate dilated cardiomyopathy (see report for reference). Case coordinator (b) (6), writes in the necropsy report: "With the marked dilated ventricles of the heart and a history of being on a grain free diet for 3.5 years a dilated cardiomyopathy must be considered." (b) (6) regular dog food was a Earthborn Holistic, a grain-free dog food high in legumes that the owners fed (b) (6) upon recommendation from a local 'natural' pet food store. Because of these startling findings underlying such an aggressive disease process in a young dog, and because of the recent warnings issued by the FDA in summer 2018 about connections between grain-free food and DCM, it was thought that this report would provide helpful data to the government.	4	Years	Other Canine/dog	Dog	26	Kilogram

It was a 2 mile walk around downtown (b) (6) for owners and their dogs. (b) (6) had walked 2 miles before without any issues. This particular day was cooler and overcast and slightly rainy. During the walk I noticed (b) (6) was panting easily - I attributed that to the excitement of the day. In the days after the walk I noticed he wasn't his usual self - he wouldn't eat, was very listless and had a persistent cough. I thought he may have contracted kennel cough from being around all of the other dogs during the walk, so I made a vet appointment with our normal vet. At this appointment the vet took XRays and performed an ultrasound where it was indicated (b) (6) had an enlarged heart and he had fluid building in his lungs. We were given a low dose of a diuretic for the fluid in his lungs and were told to make an appointment with a specialist sooner rather than later. The next day we went to a canine cardiologist where it was confirmed he had dilated cardiomyopathy. He was put on a host of medications to help his heart and were told he had 6-12 months to live. It was first suspected it was genetic DCM given he was a Boxer Mix. He was eating Zignature grain free Duck formula at the time of is diagnosis due to his food allergies. He was immediately switched to a raw diet with added fish oil and taurine supplements. The improvements were noticeable right away. He has to have checkups every 3-4 months to monitor his condition - at $500 a visit, it was putting us into debt quickly. My husband lost his job the day of (b) (6) diagnosis and I lost mine a few months later so keeping up with the cost has been difficult. At his most recent visit on January 25th 2018 our cardiologist noticed a significant reduction in the size of his heart and an increase in the output of his heart - all great news. Given his dietary history and diet change she concluded that more than likely it was his previous grain-free diet that was causing the issues. There is no concern of congestive heart failure currently with (b) (6) Note - on the report there is an error. It states that his previous grain-free diet of Fromm probably caused his DCM. He is a 12-year-old Silky Terrier that has diabetes and Cushing's disease. I noticed that he started having excessive thirst and urination the next day. We had just run a test for his Cushing's to make certain that he was medicated to the proper level and his blood sugars were in a normal range for him. On Saturday January 26, 2019 I dropped off a urine sample to make certain he didn't have a UTI. The test results came back that he was negative for a urinary tract infection so my veterinarian asked me to bring him in the next morning for an x-ray to check for bladder or kidney stones. I brought him to my vet on Thursday, January 31 for his x-ray. I met with his veterinarian (b) (6) to review the X-ray. The results were negative for any stones. We agreed we would retest his urine again in two weeks because she couldn't find a cause. Late last night I noticed that Hills issued a recall on some of their wet dog food. They would often only report lot numbers that complaints had come in on and not necessarily every single lot that was affected. I sent an email to Hills immediately last night. My veterinarian called me this morning and asked me to contact Hills directly by telephone. I dumped food from bowls into trash and put the dental care food I had been using for a week before this into bowls. They have refused to eat anything at all since. They have continued to vomit bile even though they are no longer eating or drinking. I took one cat, (b) (6) , to the vet because he seemed the worse. I cannot afford to take 12 cats to the vet since my bill so far is over $600.00 for 2 visits for one cat. The vet gave me meds for all 12 cats. EON-378021	1/29/2019 20:12	Freshpet Select Roasted Meals Tender Chicken flavor	I had been purchasing the various sizes of the bagged Tender Chicken flavor of Freshpet Select Roasted Meals. At first, it seemed fine and my dogs liked it but after a few bags, they started refusing to eat and I started noticing a faintly sweet scent. I wasn't sure if it had always had an offputting scent and I just didn't notice (most dog food doesn't smell good to humans) or if maybe my dogs weren't going through it fast enough before it went bad, or what could be the problem. So I recently ordered it frozen from Amazon fresh as I had before and before putting it in the freezer, I was going to put it into smaller freezer bags so I didn't have to thaw too much at a time and hopefully avoid it spoiling or being questionable. Upon opening it, there were several large chunks of black mold on the surface of the frozen food. I took pictures of the food and the sell-by date (May 24th, today is January 29) then threw it away. I opened the other bag that was in my freezer from my previous grocery delivery and the spoiled smell was overwhelming. The sell-by date on that bag was May 11. My dog had just finished a different bag with his baby sitter and he's been sick with diarrhea and throwing up for the last two days. What's worse, when I went to report it to Amazon, there were several other reviews on this and similar same brand items stating their dogs got sick with diarrhea and the food was spoiled.	6	Years	Chihuahua	Dog	16	Pound

On January 20th, we had to rush our dog to the emergency hospital because he became listless, vomiting and continued diarrhea. Once at the hospital the doctor told us our dog had heart disease. Our local emergency hospital could not treat our dog and referred us to the (b) (6) Veterinary (b) (6). The doctors at (b) (6) Vet Hospital, told us about DCM which may be linked to grain free foods. EON-377912	1/29/2019 12:52	Nulo FreeStyle Turkey & Sweet Potato Grain-Free Adult	On 10/20/18 (b) (6) started a new food with a 4.5 lb bag of Nulo FreeStyle Turkey and Sweet Potato. A couple weeks later an 11 lb bag was purchased, so he began eating it around the second week of November. Dart first presented at the vet 11/22/18 due to changes in his behavior, being intolerant of other dogs jumping on him and being restless. He was placed on an extremely low dose of gabapentin to see if it was a neurological issue. By that weekend, 11/24/18, it was noticed he was increasing his consumption of water and was increasing urination. This is not a side effect of the gabapentin but the vet recommended decreasing to every other day when consulted 11/26/18 after the dog began urinating in the house. Due to having multiple dogs in the home with free access to multiple water sources and his bathroom schedule being unobserved due to living in the country we could not tell the vet if his drinking and urination had been increasing over time or started at this high level just this weekend. On 11/29/18 Dart returned to the vet as he was desperately drinking to excess and could not maintain bladder control for more than an hour or two, even through the night. At this visit his blood calcium was found to far exceed the normal range (normal high 11.9 - his was 15.6). Other blood levels, such as kidney were affected as well. He was referred to a veterinary specialty clinic with a tentative diagnosis of possible hyperparathyroidism where an elevated ionized calcium was confirmed. From that point he went under an extremely wide range of tests, all of them coming back negative or normal. During this time 3 specialists recommended we put him on a more balanced, non-grain free food to make sure he was as supported as possible. His food had been considered at the beginning as a cause, but was not on a recall list and his initial test for Vitamin D was in normal range. However, after the food switch there was a slight drop in his total calcium, it was attributed to the diuretics and daily fluids. Still no answer for his hypercalcemia could be found. None of his symptoms fit totally into a disease diagnosis and all results continued to come back negative or normal. By the end of December he had seen 2 vets, and 3 specialists had seen or consulted. On December 21st he was brought to the (b) (6) for further evaluation. At that point he had been off the Nulo food for almost 3 weeks. His calcium was re-evaluated and found to be at a high normal. No treatment other than	4	Years	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	65	Pound diuretics and fluids had been given. The vet decreased the diuretics by half and reduced the fluids and rechecked him after the holiday - still in low normal. He was removed from fluids and medication and rechecked and the level remained stable. After 3 weeks it was rechecked, along with a full blood workup and all is well into the normal range. He has gained back weight and is acting completely like his normal self. A complete list of possible things he could have ingested was given to the vets but none was likely to cause the condition and it did not present as a single dose toxicity. The only thing that changed was his food prior to his illness and due to the resolving of the problem when the food was removed the veterinarians feel strongly that it is the most likely source of his illness. Though the initial Vitamin D test came back negative they say there are other metabolites that could have been the cause or it could be due to another imbalance or contaminant in the food. Some food from the bag does remain but has not been sent off for testing as they are unsure what would be the best test to run with the limited amount remaining. I am reporting the Nulo FreeStyle Turkey and Sweet Potato dog food as needing investigation to ensure that there is not a flaw in the food or manufacturing process that could cause other dogs to become as ill as (b) (6) or possibly die, which was a definite possibility in his case and if I had not stopped feeding him the food may have happened. I believe the stress and worry and cost of this episode and the possibility of danger to other dogs justifies at least an initial investigation as his extensive testing found no other possible cause and the vets in his case feel strongly that this is the most likely cause. (b) (6) from the (b) (6) has already reported his case. If nothing else we are hoping for guidance in what testing may be the most recommend to perform on the food.

EON-377687	1/27/2019 20:20	Darwin's Natural Pet Food Products Feline Food:  Chicken Lamb Turkey	I slowly introduced my two cats to Darwin's Natural Raw Diet about four to five months ago. Everything went well until Thursday, January 10, 2019 when (b) (6) refused to eat in the morning. (b) (6) loves to eat, anything, so this was alarming. I made an appointment with a vet that day, East Shore Veterinary Center in Branford, CT. (b) (6) examined (b) (6) that afternoon and said he seemed okay. (b) (6) is a healthy cat, but he does get constipation and needs miralax at times. (b) (6) pooped in the litter box on the way to the vet, so we determined that (b) (6) wasn't constipated. (b) (6) and I thought he looked fine, so I took him home. (b) (6) tried to eat that night, but couldn't eat much. The next day, he got progressively worse and he refused to eat. This was Friday, January 11th. He was lethargic, weak and refused food so I brought him to (b) (6) to the emergency room. The doctor's examined (b) (6) and couldn't find anything notably wrong with him. I believe they did some testing, blood tests, and sent him home again. On Saturday, (b) (6) was much worse so I brought him back to (b) (6), they did more testing but sent him home again. I believe it was Saturday afternoon when (b) (6) was admitted into the hospital because we all knew, the doctors and I, that (b) (6) was truly sick and it would take some testing to find out what was wrong. The blood testing and x-rays were coming back normal, his intestines were not blocked and he was urinating. (b) (6) refused to eat! On Sunday night, the veterinarian on call told me they were going to feed (b) (6) through a tube, inserted in his nose. This nearly killed him because he vomited profusely. This is when the hospital advised me they had to stabilize (b) (6) and complete an endoscopy in order to see his upper GI track. This test revealed that (b) (6) upper intestine was infected and inflamed with Echoli Bacteria. I was told that the bacteria was a particularly difficult strain for antibiotics to fight. (b) (6) stayed a (b) (6) until I brought him home on Sunday, January 20th. I am still administering two antibiotics and an antacid. This was such an upsetting experience for me because (b) (6) is an extraordinary kitty. I live alone and he takes care of me and keeps me company so I was grateful to bring him home. The doctor's at (b) (6) were really clear in advising me that the bacteria in (b) (6) stomach was caused by his raw food diet. I let Darwin's know about the whole situation pretty early in Leo's hospitalization. They were unkind on the phone and wanted nothing to do with me. Darwin's did not even offer to refund the food until a week into (b) (6) hospitalization when I sent an email, an strong email challenging them to take responsibility. They do not appear to want to take responsibility for this issue at all.	6.5	Years	Domestic Shorthair	Cat	16	Pound

He was on oxygen for an hour as they were mami g calls to emergency veterinarian 1 hour away. They weren't sure he would make it to the other vet. He was diagnosed Congestive heart failure, secondary to dialated cardiomyopathy (DCM) . His heart is so enlarged, its pumping blood into his lungs. He is now being with heart medication, medication to dry out his lungs, and high doses of the vitamins(taurine) that he was starved of with the grain free food. EON-377524	1/25/2019 14:48	Pet Pride Chicken Jerky Treats for Dogs	The patient was presented to me for increased urination (waking the owner up twice per night). On physical exam the dog appeared BAR and healthy. The urinalysis strip showed extreme glucosuria but the dog's bloodwork showed normoglycemia and elevations in 2 of her kidney values. During the investigation into why this dog could have abnormal proximal renal tubular function, I questioned the owner about possible chicken jerky treats. The owner had just started feeding some chicken jerky treats within the past month. The owner checked the bag of treats and they were manufactured in China. My tentative diagnosis for this dog is Fanconi-like syndrome due to chicken jerky treats. I have sent off blood to a reference lab to check lepto titers as well. Two days after my initial exam, and 2 days after the pet's last jerky treat, the dog is doing better and only had to go outside once to urinate last night.	8	Years	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	20	Pound

EON-377495	1/25/2019 11:56	Wellness Trufood Salmon & Turkey Liver Recipe	My husband and I bought a bag of Wellness Trufood (Salmon flavor) and found at least a hundred disgusting worms or larvae crawling inside the bag of food. Our dog's veterinarian said the food appears to be spoiled with mold and that some sort of insect laid eggs inside the food when it was manufactured or bagged. Our dog had been eating the food for three weeks before the eggs hatched inside the bag. Our vet believes the live creatures may be moth larvae or skuttlefly phorid larvae (the latter being deadly if the pet or humans have any open wounds). Whatever these creatures are, it is absolutely disgusting, and it made my dog sick. We checked the date on the bag of food to make sure it is not expired, and it is not expired! As a result of the spoiled, moldy food, our dog is experiencing nausea, loss of appetite and lethargy. After ordering bloodwork, our vet confirmed that the moldy food has caused our dog's liver enzymes to elevate. We've accrued $180 in vet bills thus far as a result of this contaminated food, and we are expected to have more vet visits to treat her liver, which was injured by the contaminated food. Our vet is ready to submit supporting documentation that this was caused by the food. I also have video and pictures of the creatures crawling inside the food, which I can send upon request. We are extremely disappointed by our experience with Wellness Trufood. We've been customers for a long time. I understand Wellness plans to discontinue the Trufood line, but that is no excuse for less oversight in the production of their food! We are absolutely horrified that their food injured our dog and have reached out to them to demand our money back for the food and for coverage of our vet bills. Please let us know if you need us to submit pictures or documentation relating to this issue. We don't want this to happen to anyone else!	6	Years	Shar Pei	Dog	54.8	Pound

We put her on a bland rice/egg diet for a week, but no change was noted...other than a new symptom occurred of her panting a lot. When (b) (6) started to noticeably lose weight, I immediately took her into the vet for a physical exam. She had dropped 9 lbs from the previous visit of two months earlier! The vet kept us there most of the day running blood work, etc. Everything came back fine. When xrays were performed, it was clear what the problem was.. (b) (6) heart was clearly enlarged. Where it normally was supposed to be within 3 ribs, it was over 5 ribs and encroaching on her other organs! The vet immediately suspected it was the grain-free kibble (Wholesomes Food For Dogs Chickmeal and Chickpea formula:Grain-free/Gluten-free that I purchased at Tractor Supply) that I had her on....and she prescribed her heart meds, an antibiotic (going the remedial course as if peritonitis as a secondary diagnosis), and a medication to alleviate the nausea. I actually wrapped up this mold in a cling wrap and brought it into Walmart and asked for a refund and told them I was going to report this to the FDA as well. The toll free number on the bottom of their cartons is no longer in service. I know I tried calling it. I also discovered that there was 5 other trays in this carton that had mold growing on the sides of the food as well. The Home Delights trays are see through and the Classic pate' is solid white so I could not tell if there was anything unusual about those in particular. I tried to not get too close to this because it could be deadly for myself. I can not take Penicillan or get near any moldy substances due to Ango-Edema. I have had anophylaxic shock before and I am also suffering from Multiple Sclerosis.

My cat has been on this diet since September/ October 2018. I noticed that my cat seemed to be gaining weight out of relation with the amount being fed daily and that his personality had changed to become very hungry and overly food obsessed. I evaluated him and noticed that he had developed bilateral thyroid gland enlargement (goiter). I was concerned with possibly too much thyroid hormone and collected blood to evaluate his status. I found that his Free T4 was quite a bit below the normal range. I ran a canine TSH and found that is was fairly low as well. I submitted for an iodine level since the diet of concern uses kelp as an ingredient (and I am aware that some kelp products can vary greatly in iodine content) and found that his blood level for total serum iodine and serum inorganic iodine was GROSSLY elevated. I then submitted a food sample from his bag for testing to further investigate if this is truly coming from his food (he gets no other treats). The food evaluation returned well above the AAFCO max of 9ppm (it came in at 23.2ppm). All iodine testing was performed through (b) (6) labs.	9	Months	Sphynx	Cat	10	Pound

EON-377087	1/22/2019 2:08	Jerky Treats Tender Beef Strips Dog Snacks	This particular product made my three small perfectly healthy dogs sick. On August 2018, I broke a large piece into smaller pieces and only fed one thumb sized treat to each on one night and another the next night. They did not look normal and did not seem very happy or energetic, as they were always lying down or sleeping. After noticing that, I immediately stopped feeding them the treats and returned the product. They remained that way for a few days. I also noticed that their ribs had become very thin when picking them up and holding them. One had frequent urination and an unusually hard back and thighs. Their eyes were also yellow and red. After several months, their eyes have still remained that way. When I finally looked for information about it on January 2019, sources say it may be glaucoma. I am very worried that they will become blind in a few years and will have to endure constant excruciating eye pain, eventually having to be euthanized. I suspect the product may contain steroids, as steroids are what cause glaucoma. I also looked up negative reviews and complaints against the brand and learned that multiple other people have had their dogs dead or needed to be put down due to the dangerous treats. One even warned of it causing liver failure in both young and old dogs. The treats had a very strong and unusual scent. I originally bought the product because it claimed it had calcium. I used to feed canidae but needed an option that I can pick up locally. So I settled on eukanuba Lg breed puppy food. I began the weaning process at 4 weeks. Within a few day I noticed the puppies coats just didn't look as full and healthy as they should. Then I began to notice the hair was thinning, their eyes were red and slightly swollen, and their eyes were constantly tearing. I really didn't think much about the food at this point. At a puppy check up I asked my vet if he thought a vitamin would help with the issues. So, I ordered a powder vitamin and tried that from 5-7 weeks old. There was no improvement or change so didn't continue with the vitamins. Then on December 21st 2018 I had a family reach out to me that adopted their second Dane baby from me. They said she was knuckling over on both front legs. I knew instantly this is a major nutrition deficiency. They were still feeding the eukanuba large breed puppy food. I told them to transition her to a new food and I would order a kit (http://www.firstchoicenaturals.com/kit-5-hod-pano-knuckling-and-bowing-legs.html) from the greatdanelady.com (http://www.greatdanelady.com/articles/puppy_feed_program_for_knuckling_over.htm) website that will balance the nutrition and get their new baby back to normal. They received the kit 2 days later and their baby improved and was back to normal in a little over a week!! I at this point began to think eukanuba large breed puppy food is designed to provide the proper balanced nutrition for Great Dane puppies. They even have a Great Dane puppy on the bag. Then on December 25th 2018 I had a second family contact me with the exact same knuckling over in the front legs of their Great Dane puppy. This guy is from a completely different litter and different set of parents. I instantly asked them what food he was eating. They sent me a picture of a large bag of eukanuba large breed puppy food. I told the to stop the food and go to the greatdanelady.com website. I told them this a server nutrition issue and told them the kit will get their new baby back to normal in a couple weeks. They received the kit on December 28th 2018 and their baby was improved by January 1st 2019.	5	Weeks	Great Dane	Dog	5	Pound

			Then I had a Dane knuckle on me. His family was supposed to pick him up on January 13th and he started showing signs of knuckling over on January 12th. I called his family immediately and they opted to choose a different baby. So, I switched this guys food immediately and decided to give him a week on new food to see if he improves without the kit. I immediately noticed the knuckling did not get any worse the first few days on the food. It didn't improve as fast as it would have on the kit but it was very slowly improving. Today is day number 6 on a new food and he has improved! His right leg is completely normal and his left leg is very close to normal!! I contacted eukanuba about the coat issues and the knuckling and they said they would investigate. They didn't even take my contact info. I had to ask her to take it to call me with the investigation findings. I feel as if there was no intent to do a review. Because I would think my infonand the families that had the knuckling issues info would be very important? Thank you for your time and help with this issue.

His health started to decline (he was vomiting, drinking an excessive amount of water, urinating 12-15 times a day, he was lethargic and not eating) so I took him back to the vet January 15th and x-rays and blood tests were performed. The blood test came back showing an extremely high level of calcium in my dogs blood. To this day my dog is not eating and has lost eight pounds in nine days. I just saw a news article of toxic levels of vitamin D found in many types of dog food and my dog is showing all of the signs consistent with the article.	4	Years	Retriever - Golden	Dog	78	Pound

EON-376748	1/17/2019 21:48	Instinct Original Real Venison Recipe	We purchased the following brand/flavor of canned cat food for our cat: Instinct by Natures Variety Original Grain Free, Real Venison Recipe Pate. Upon opening a can from the case we purchased, we noticed it differed in look, texture, and smell. We are aware that this is common among different batches of cat food and so didn't think much of it. However, upon feeding it to our cat, he refused to touch it. Normally, he inhales it as it is his favorite flavor. We took note of the expiration date of the current cans we had (October 24th, 2021) as well as the lot numbers: 239CVM3200911, 239CVM320101, 239CVM5201211, 239CVM5201311. Due to our cat not eating it, we decided to go to our local retailer and purchase new cans to see if the difference in quality was the culprit. When we got to the local retailer, we noticed that some of the cans on the shelf were the same expiration date, but had different lot numbers. We purchased 5 cans with the expiration date of October 24th, 2021 and 7 cans with the expiration date of July 20th, 2021. When we went to feed our cat that evening with one of the July cans, he ate it right away. The next day to further test our theory, we presented our cat with an October dated can which he again refused to eat. Immediately following, we gave him a July can and he inhaled it. We deduced that all of the "bad" cans had an expiration date of October 24th, 2021 and the "good" cans our cat would eat had an expiration date of July 20th, 2021. We brought the "bad" cans back to our local retailer for a refund and also contacted Natures Variety on this issue. Customer service did get back to me and they stated they would share the information with their Quality Team and report the issue. However, I wanted to report this incident because I have also read negative online Amazon reviews of Nature's Variety canned cat food within the last three months. Another aspect that may or may not be related to this issue, is the fact that we brought our cat to the vet when we noticed he wouldn't eat the food, first thinking he was sick. He struggles with high ALT levels. When we brought him, we did find out he has had another flare up and his ALT levels are elevated. Our vet did explain that while this could be caused by food, it would be hard to determine if that were the source. I figured it was still worth mentioning since we started feeding our cat this brand of food around the same time he started having episodes of elevated ALT levels.

I asked a Vet on what I should do and he informed me to allow her some rest and to feed her wet food mixed. I also contacted the Manufacturer and they were no help at all. A few days into only a little of this blend Mixed with his regular food he became very ill. He had vomiting, diarrhea, excessive drooling, shaking, and could barely stand. It was a weekend when the symptoms got really bad and my veterinarians office was closed so I called a friend who breeds and owns many bulldogs for help. She suggested that I fast him immediately. As soon as the food was out of his system he was back to his normal playful self. EON-376626	1/16/2019 21:20	Abound Salmon and Sweet Potato recipe	During the summer months we began to notice (b) (6) needing longer to urinate for a longer period of time as well as an overall increase in thirst. Over the months her urination attempts became more and more frequent and were not always accompanied by actual urination. I began to suspect that she had a bladder infection so I researched some natural remedies including ACV and cranberries to help relieve her discomfort. But the frequency and straining continued. In October she began having frequent accidents in the house and I noticed hot spots on her arms from frequent licking. In December I took her to the vet who confirmed she did have a pretty terrible uti and that the hot spots were probably a response to the pain from the infection. I informed him of my concern that it was a bladder tumor with how much strain she had to urinate. We decided to treat with antibiotics 1st and if we saw little to no improvement I would come back in for an x-ray. By January her symptoms had not only gotten worse but I also began to notice her stools were now smaller in size than normal furthering my concerns of a blockage. I took her in for an x-ray where the vet discovered her bladder was entirely full of bladder stones and that she needed surgery immediately to remove them. He informed me this was a direct result of the food I was feeding her. Oxycylate bladder stones can be a direct result of too high of levels of vitamin D. (b) (6) showed no symptoms and had no issues until we began feeding the Abound Dog food which I now come to find has been recalled. Although currently the chicken and brown rice is the only flavor to be recalled, we also fed our dogs the salmon and sweet potato flavor which I highly request be tested as well.	8	Years	Other Canine/dog	Dog	55	Pound

Earlier in 2018, I bought a bag and saw it was more moist than usual. This product never had an odor when I first started buying them. The bag I bought in early 2018, smelled like the chicken was under freeze-dried, and had sat in a bag and gone rancid. I contacted and returned my bag to my local pet shop and they said they would contact the company and let them know my concerns. From what I heard, Vital Essentials simply responded with "they had not adjusted their freeze-drying process". I waited a couple months to buy another bag, to hopefully see that they figured out what had happened. I bought a bag of Freeze-Dried Chicken Breast Dog Treats for my parent's cat, it's one of the few treats he used to like. Needless to say, when I opened the bag at my parents house, everyone would agree they smelled rotten. The treats don't show any mold, discoloration (they're a whitish yellow color), but some pieces are once again, not crispy and crunchy as they used to be, and how I would imagine completely dried breast meat would look like.

EON-376260	1/13/2019 18:00	Halo Grain Free Indoor Cat Healthy Weight	All of the cats were throwing up a lot but it didn't register it was a bad food related issue until I noticed (b) (6) had lost weight. I made an appt to take him to the vet but didn't feel it was critical to get him in immediately so I took the first appt 2 wks out. Knowing what I do now I needed an asap appt, but hindsight is 20/20. In the meantime when I went to fill the food bowl I opened the bag of Spots Stew Grain Free Chicken and started gagging as the smell of the food was very rancid. My husband usually fills the bowls so I asked him how could he have not noticed the smell but he has his own issues and does not smell well so,,,,,. Thats when it started registering that the food could be the reason they were all throwing up and a couple of the foster kittens were having bloody diarrhea. By the time we got (b) (6) in for his appt he had lost another 1 1/2# in 2 wks and now was in kidney failure. The vet started fluids and special diet food but his kidneys were so bad he just kept getting worse. Of course all this bad food had been removed but some of the other cats were starting to exhibit signs illness. Its a very long story but 4 of the cats have been to the vet and we almost lost a 2nd one (b) (6) litter sister (b) (6) but we fortunately got her a little sooner and after 2 days of continuous fluids her kidneys were flushed of the toxins and she is doing okay. Though she will have to be monitored frequently to make sure there is not a recurrence. Their other sister was not as bad but she too has some slightly elevated kidney levels so will have to also be on a special diet from now on. Another cat not litter related ended up with bladder infection. My vet did contact you the FDA but this food needs to be recalled and the public made aware of it before any other animals get sick because my friend who lives across the state and uses a different size bag than we do had her healthy cat get sick all of a sudden too. Since I changed food none of mine are throwing up any longer so there is no doubt the food was bad. Weather it is salmonella ecoli or some other problem I don't know but I sure was hoping the FDA would test the food to find out because Halo said there is no problem in their reports about it.	16	Years	Domestic Mediumhair	Cat	6	Pound

I was standing in line and lady in front me was voicing her concerns that this was the 2nd bag of simply nourish (salmon) that she has returned because of maggots. The cashier told her that this has been a problem. I was very reluctant to purchase but spoke with my nutritionist who recommended this brand that it was probably due to the salmon and she has had her dogs on it for 2 years. She lives in (b) (6) I tried a small bag and a month later went to buy a large bag and they only had 15 pd bags so they gave me two of them. When I was loading into my car I noticed that there were maggots on the outside of the bag. I went back into the store and explained to cashier. She told me that same thing that they were having a problem with this brand and I told her that I remembered her from the month previous telling the lady about it at that time. This was 12/20/2018. She said that she also works in the (b) (6) pet smart and the same complaints about this brand and maggot issues were concerns of many customers. I told the manager that I did not want the bags and was calling the customer service about this issue as it is happening alot. 1-7-2018-spoke to (b) (6) supervisor at Pet smart- 1/888/839/9638 who stated this was the first he was hearing about this which the cashier said he would probably say as she has been telling all customers to contact the headquarters at Pet smart. He said that the manager at pet smart will log in the lot numbers and I was to contact them if I had any concerns. I wanted to have a follow up with what was going to be done and the supervisor at customer service said that they do not have to tell me since there was no bodily harm or death done to my dog..1/8/2019- spoke with (b) (6) at the local pet smart- (b) (6) she said that the morning manager has to follow a protocol and file the lot number to the corporate office and that is all she could say on the issue.

EON-375997	1/10/2019 3:12	Indoor complete dry cat food  several different types of the wet food he never did like any of it I have several unopened wet food containers	I adopted (b) (6) in December of 2014 , his overall health was fine. He was active and had no problems. I started feeding him Rachel Ray's Indoor dry cat food. He got sick one time and I had to take him to the local ER, but there was no way to find out what had made him ill. I changed his food to Friskies wet for a bit and he seemed to get better. I went back to the indoor dry food again, because I thought it would be better for him, because Rachel Ray's food seemed to be highly rated and he was an indoor cat. While at the store, Petsmart, there was a sales person who worked for Rachel Ray's and she told me that (b) (6) should be given additional wet food in his diet. So I started buying different kinds of wet food for him as well. He began to look pale and his coat was no longer shiny, he began to refuse the dry food and the wet foods. By (b) (6) , just before (b) (6) , he refused to eat any food at all, I thought maybe he had a virus, made him chicken and rice but he refused that also. Within three days he was barely walking and was only drinking water and only peeing in his little pan. He no longer defecated and had to be carried to and from the water dish to the litter pan and to his bed. By the time we got him to the vet, his heart was failing. The vet suggested that we have him put down, they suspected he had a tumor, by the buildup of fluid and the size of his abdomen. Had I ever once been notified of a recall or been told that there was a recall of this food or any of the food made by Rachel Ray's I would NEVER have given it to my (b) (6) He was absolutely the best cat I have ever had in my lifetime. He loved to sit on my lap, he got along with three dogs that we had already in the home, he was so calm, playful, and lovable! I was and am very distraught that he is gone and that I may have played a part in the reason he is gone, that I fed him food that had been recalled but was not told by the store or the manufacturer, or even by the sales woman that there was any danger to (b) (6) The sales person for Rachel Ray's actually worked there at Petsmart until it was sold out to Schmucker's and then she told me that her contract had not been renewed. Never once did she tell me that the food was dangerous to feed to (b) (6) Not once were there signs or warnings that indicated that there was a recall on the food I was purchasing for my beautiful cat! 			decorating, walked underneath it and layed down. Within three days he was put down, I had him cremated and his urn is now on the fireplace, next to the cat statue and iron mouse he would push around, with his little collar wrapped around it with the bell (so I could hear him because (b) (6) His basket with his (b) (6) toys, his fur, and his cat paw prints and mold are there also and the dogs take turns walking up and sniffing the basket and the urn, sometimes just sitting in front of it and the (b) (6) , that I have not taken down because I miss (b) (6) so much. He was a huge part of our family and it is very quiet in the house. My oldest dog doesn't pass the basement door without sticking her nose in the pet door we placed in there for (b) (6) use for his litter pan. They don't understand what happened to him. Right now as I am up in the middle of the night writing this, because I have trouble sleeping now and I cry because I miss my cat, my dogs are confused as to why I am up all hours now. I missed days at work because I feel like there was something more I could have done for (b) (6) , he went from being such a healthy cat to not being able to eat, use the litter pan or drink water without assistance. The night before I took him to the vet, he was so cold, I tried to keep him warm but he was looking for a place to crawl and hide, he must have been in so much pain....but he never once ever showed it by being mean....I loved him so much...I am giving approx dates, because even though I have paperwork, I cannot bare to look at it....If you do need documentation, I will submit it, but having to even think about this is creating a terrible effect on my overall health.

Not being a pop top can, I have to use a can opener which normally would not be an issue. However, when opening these cans, I can't seem to get a clean cut of the top lid. Even with multiple passes around the can, the lid is always held on by a small piece of metal which needs to be cut carefully. If I just twist the lid to release it, I run the risk of a small metal shard falling into the food product. I have tried both a manual and electric can opener with the same results. I feel that the cans are manufactured with a defect that does not allow a clean cut of the top which is dangerous as metal shards can fall into the food product. I have read other reviews of the product and it appears other consumers have the same issue. I wrote to the manufacturer, Fruitables Pet Food and received no response.

EON-375731	1/7/2019 17:48	100% Natural Dog Treats Roasted Beef Tips	I purchased Roasted Beef Lung tips as a treat for my dog in early December. My dog had probably 5-10 treats each day between December 7-9. On December 9 she developed bad diarrhea. On December 10th she was vomiting and eating very little and the sever diarrhea continued. She had to go out every hour or so and was going in multiple locations every time. On December 11th I took her to the vet and got her fluids and started her on metronidazole. By the next day, she was started to get better and was fully recovered by December 13th. I had her on a bland diet at that point and stopped giving her the treats but was not suspecting them at that point. Meanwhile, my sister in law brought her two dogs to visit on December 15th. I gave some of the same treats to her mastiff mix and he became ill 2 days later with very similar symptoms to my (b) (6). Her second dog refused those treats and didn't get sick. I still didn't make a connection to the treats. On December 29th I started to watch my friend's golden retriever named (b) (6). She is allergic to chicken so I was giving her the roasted beef tip treats when I would give my dog chicken treats. She probably ate 12 or so a day. By Tuesday January 2nd she became violently ill. She had severe diarrhea and vomiting. She wouldn't eat or drink. The owner picked up (b) (6) and took her to the vet and all tests came up normal. Started (b) (6) on metronidazole and anti-nausea meds and she is finally starting to improve as of today. I was wracking my brain trying to figure out what all of these dogs were exposed to that could be making them sick. I was thinking it was possibly a virus and there were germs in my house. Meanwhile, on Saturday January 5th my husband gave my dog a few more of the suspect treats. Last night, January 6th she started with severe diarrhea again. I immediately started her on the metronidazole and she seems to be getting better. That's when it clicked that every time these treats come out...the dogs are getting sick. I would really appreciate if these could be tested. I think it's too much of a coincidence to have 3 dogs getting sick and 4 separate occasions. Luckily all the dogs are getting better....but we need to know if there is something dangerous in these treats to get them recalled.	10	Years	Retriever - Golden	Dog	72	Pound

We gave him 2 Benadryl before bedtime and weren't sure if he would make it through the night. When we woke, the dog seemed a bit better. The store where we purchase it had been unable to get it in and so we switched to the Evangers Super Premium Chicken Dinner with Spinach and Kale. After eating this food he began having diarrhea. I thought it was perhaps due to changing food, but it never improved. I had a can of the other food he had been eating from Evangers and noticed these were produced in different facilities and the (b) (6) facility has recently had some trouble. Our other dog also had issues with this food resulting in vomiting and diarrhea and now I am very concerned as to the safety of this specific food. EON-375513	1/4/2019 22:16	Old Glory Hearty Turkey and Cheese Flavor	Fed each of my dogs a bowl of Old Glory dog food my son had purchased at the Dollar General Store. One of my dogs didnt eat any of it but the other ate a couple of bowls. On the first day of feeding it to him, he was acting strange and laying around and vomited a couple of times. On the first night he urinated in our bed (has never happened before). On the second day, he was still acting lethargic and not feeling well and late that evening, he had a seizure so bad that I was afraid he was dying. For about 3 minutes, he lost control of his bowels and bladder and couldn't move. The only change had been that my son had bought Old Glory dog food, so I put him back on Bentiful and after about 3 days, he seemed better. I called the vet and they said to keep an eye on him. EON-375466	1/4/2019 14:40	4 Health Untamed	Since my dog was about a year or so old, he has been eating the Tractor Supply Co. brand of Dog Food, 4Health grain-free and Untamed. Starting in December 2018, my dog developed a cough, stopped eating, and experienced difficulty breathing. He was seen by a veterinarian December 20th. He had blood work done which was unremarkable, his radiograph of his chest showed an enlarged heart with pulmonary edema. He was then started on cardiac medications, and sent to a cardiologist for an echocardiogram. The echo confirmed the diagnosis of Dilated Cardiomyopathy. This is when the topic of grain-free diet associated DCM came up. My Vet recommended supplementing Taurine into his diet, switching to a mainstream brand of dog food that has participated in nutritional research, and limiting his physical activity. We are hoping for the best but he is in rough shape. We will recheck the echocardiogram in 3 months to see if there have been any improvements. I hope this will help with any research ongoing with this issue. Please let me know if there is any more info I can provide or any additional research that has been done. Thank you. Vet determined he was not ill (just a little overweight). The coughing got worse and worse - it was almost constant and he was making holes digging up dirt to eat and throwing up grass. eventually, he started having bowel movements in the house - which he never did before. I read a few adverse ratings about Nutro on the internet and changed his dog food immediately to Orijen Regional Red. Within ONE WEEK, the coughing abated. We buy three cases at a time from the local Costco. In November (I think) we purchased cases and they had changed the entire design of the packaging. My cats won't touch the cat food and there was evidence that at least tone of the two cats was sick. They are NOW suffering from complete loss of appetite but appear OK otherwise. I contacted Friskies and they said they may have changed the "ingredient alignment" but it should not have caused the cats to reject the food. I've noticed the texture and color is very different of some of the food. And the food turns quickly into a "concrete" lump. Clearly, Purina has changed either their ingredients or are using a new packaging plant with suspect practices. Others on the Department of Consumer Affairs website are seeing the same thing and many have had sick cats requiring anti-biotics.

Before I popped the tab, the can had expanded in all directions (the pressure inside had caused it to be dented out both top and bottom, not inward as with a normally dented can). Thus, it is my suspicion that during canning it was infested with a pathogen or other element which caused a reaction with the food between canning and delivery, which, upon exploding may be harmful to me, and perhaps a great number of American consumers of this product. By 6 pm she had drunk about 2 quarts of water. I believe this caused "the food" to expand in her gut. Her belly became very distended. She was trying to vomit, but only foam came out. We took her to the Emergency Veterinary Services at about 9 pm. They confirmed that her stomach had twisted. She underwent surgery at about midnight. The surgery was successful in that it un-twisted her stomach, but she was experiencing cardiac arrhythmia commonly associated with twisted stomach, as well as blood chemistry abnormalities. Her lactase levels remained very high, her blood pressure dropped and heart raced despite aggressive medical intervention. We made the difficult decision to put her to sleep about 20 hour post op. I believe her death was directly related to the consumption of the Nature's Animals Big Bite Dog Biscuits. Please warn other pet-parents that these things react like sponge: compact in dry form then growing suddenly large and bulky when exposed to digestive fluids and satiating the intense thirst caused by eating the biscuit. The volume of the bulky mass and the fluid weight in the stomach were beyond the dog's physical tolerance. Please! EON-375017	12/30/2018 13:56	Whole Paws Turkey and Vegetable Stew, Whole Paws Chicken and Vegetable Stew	On October 28, 2018, I purchased 6 cans of Whole Paw canned dog food from Whole Foods on (b) (6). I fed (b) (6), a husky-lab mix canine, the canned dog food with her usual kibble (along with our two other dogs reported elsewhere). The next morning (b) (6) had diarrhea and there was evidence of vomit in the yard that I did not directly observe. The next three days when offered food she refused to eat. Nor did the other dogs. On the evening of the third I noticed a rancid smell such as that of a dead rat and found among the 6 cans of food that the seal for one of the cans had split open and food was oozing from the opening and smelled putrid. By the fourth day after vomiting and diarrhea my partner took all three dogs to the vet who confirmed food poisoning and treated all three dogs for severe dehydration. All three dogs were admitted for rehydration treatment for a 6 hour period; each had lost several pounds. Concurrently, during our dogs' illness, my partner, (b) (6) called Whole Foods when we first noticed the rancid smell. The person with whom she spoke initially acknowledged that another customer complained that the Whole Paws brands had become unsealed. When my partner was transferred to the manager they would not acknowledge the employee's comments and referred us to a third party mediator, and initially would not give us the name of the manufacturer, even though the Whole Foods label was on the brand. The third party mediator, initially said to send copies of the vet report then later said there was no proof of direct causality and refused any liability. I am a public health professional with a specialty in infectious diseases and know that the only variable in their diet or routine was the addition of the canned food from Whole Foods and also know that causality can be determined based on epidemiological factors beyond lab reports. The third party agent offered to compensate us for half of the $1200 vet bill under the condition that we would not file a report with the FDA nor contact the media. We refused.	4	Years	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	55	Pound

EON-375014	12/30/2018 13:28	Whole Paws Turkey and Vegetable Stew, Whole Paws Chicken and Vegetable Stew	On Octover 28, 2018, I purchased 6 cans of Whole Paw canned dog food from Whole Foods on (b) (6). I fed (b) (6) a boxer-mix canine, the canned dog food with his usual kibble (along with our two other dogs reported elsewhere). The next morning (b) (6) had diarrhea and there was evidence of vomit in the yard that I did not directly observe. The next three days when offered food he refused to eat. Nor did the other dogs. On the evening of the third I noticed a rancid smell such as that of a dead rat and found among the 6 cans of food that the seal for one of the cans had split open and food was oozing from the opening and smelled putrid. By the fourth day after vomiting and diarrhea my partner took all three dogs to the vet who confirmed food poisoning and treated all three dogs for severe dehydration. All three dogs were admitted for rehydration treatment for a 6 hour period; each had lost several pounds. Concurrently, during our dogs' illness, my partner, (b) (6), called Whole Foods when we first noticed the rancid smell. The person with whom she spoke initially acknowledged that another customer complained that the Whole Paws brands had become unsealed. When my partner was transferred to the manager they would not acknowledge the employee's comments and referred us to a third party mediator, and initially would not give us the name of the manufacturer, even though the Whole Foods label was on the brand. The third party mediator, initially said to send copies of the vet report then later said their was no proof of direct causality and refused any liability. I am a public health professional with a specialty in infectious diseases and know that the only variable in their diet or routine was the addition of the canned food from Whole Foods and also know that causality can be determined based on epidemiological factors beyond lab reports. The third party agent offered to compensate us for half of the $1200 vet bill under the condition that we would not file a report with the FDA nor contact the media. EON-375012	12/30/2018 13:00	Whole Paws Turkey and Sweet Potato Stew, Whole Paws Chicken and Vegetable Stew	On October 28, 2018, I purchased 6 cans of Whole Paw canned dog food from Whole Foods on (b) (6). The person with whom she spoke initially acknowledged that another customer complained that the Whole Paws brands had become unsealed. When my partner was transferred to the manager they immediately denied any issues with the brand and gave her the name of the distributor, Atlantic Whole Foods who referred her to a resolution agency and the contact Jessica Kennedy whose contact is below. Jessica Kennedy initially asked for vet's report then later required that proof be determined that the cause was indeed the food and later refused any liability. The vet was unable to conduct that analysis and any epidemiologist knows that laboratory work isn't always needed to identify causal agents. I am a public health professional with an infectious disease specialization, and regardless, Jessica refused to acknowledge that the only variable to their feeding routine was the addition of Whole Paws, nor did she agree to have the rancid can or the remaining cans sent to her or Whole Foods. Most alarmingly, Whole Foods did not seem to know, care or share the criteria in which the Whole Foods 360 label can be used by third party vendors. The vet's report is attached. EON-374964	12/29/2018 11:04	Purina Waggin Train Chicken Jerky Tenders	I started giving my dog Purina Waggin Train Chicken Jerky Tenders for her treat once or twice a day a few days ago. Each treat is about 1/3 of a whole treat. She vomited once. One time I wanted to hold her in her stomach to pulled her up to me, she screamed and obviously in pain. I tried one more time and she screamed again. I laid her on her back and touched her in her stomach and she did it again. She has not vomited again and I have not put pressure on her stomach since then so she seemed to be fine at this point. I googled it and found that Waggin Train was recalled a few years ago. EON-374925	12/28/2018 16:12	Nutro Wholesome Essentials healthy weight large breed adult dry food	My dog ate Nutro brand dry food for years without any incident or health problems. In Mid October I purchased a new bag from Pet Smart. Within 48 hours of eating this poison, he became violently ill vomiting stomach bile and the entire contents of his stomach. After he refused to eat or ate very little. I tried to mix in some eggs and rice and he would eat around the dry food and leave it there. After a few more days of this, I got him a new brand of food and he ate immediately and like he normally would. He started losing weight and became very thirsty over the next 3-4 weeks. He got sick two more times over that time frame and I brought him to the vet. He had lost 14 lbs and blood test showed signs of kidney failure. He is now hospitalized and they are still trying to figure out the issue and root of the problem after 2 days of testing and monitoring. I have research Nutro dog food and found multiple people with the same exact story and sympoms in their dogs over the last 6 months on Consumer Affairs as well as Facebook and other areas. This is far too coincidental. If there are this many people complaining about it and multiple people saying they have already reported to the FDA and encouraging others to do so with this experience, then why is this food still allowed on the shelves to make other dogs ill when Nutro/Mars is profiting off of feeding dogs poison? I gave this to my dog on Christmas morning and 30 min after we gave him this treat one of his eyes swelled up and the upper and lower eye lid was very swollen. An hour later we noticed a large pink lump forming under his left armpit and upon further inspection of his body we noticed red dots all over his stomach and thighs that were not there when he woke up. He refused to eat all day and could not poop. He kept dry heaving all day and nothing came out. He was laying in one place only to get up to scratch himself constantly. He was crying and in pain. The next morning he threw up 3 piles of processed chunks of this treat. For something that claims to be "completely edible" gave my dog a severe reaction that lasted 24 hours. He was extremely sick after consuming this chew and until he threw it up. I am sure I am not the first to report this. After his recovery period, he was given a clean bill of health from the surgeon and he seemed fine. About a month later, he began coughing one day and the cough gradually worsened over the next few days. We took him to our regular vet. She put him on a different antibiotic stating the one from surgery may have killed off good bacteria and this one should correct that. Within 10 days, he seemed perfectly normal again. About two weeks later, his cough returned and got really bad quickly. We took him to the emergency vet hospital and they diagnosed him with an enlarged heart. We took him back two days later for an echo cardiogram and it confirmed it. His heart was more than double the normal size. He died three weeks later. Because (b) (6) had always had some apparent allergies, we at the suggestion of our first veterinarian, we put him on grain free dog food when he was about 3 years old. (b) (6) had regular check-ups, lived a great life with great care. Even when they did the leg surgery, they never detected any abnormalities with his heart. When this occurred, we were stunned, as this condition was usually attributed to a birth defect. Yet at no time did he every exhibit any issues that would have led anyone to believe this was congenital. I spent over $80.00 for an approximately 26 lbs bag. I suggested that this 8-12 weeks time frame should be clearly stated on the bag. I believe most pet owners go by the date on the bag and not some non disclosed time frame. When I visited their website to learn more i found gross mislabeling violations with their treat ingredient labels. Given the dangers of feeding dogs CBD treats that might contain THC, the companies willingness to mislabel and deceive consumers makes me concerned and suspect about everything else they might be doing that could cause danger to pets.  The specific problem is they are listing "Full Spectrum CBD Oil" as the number 1 ingredient in their treats. They also state how many mg of CBD oil are in each treat. Based on the weight of the bag and number of treats in the bag, each treat weighs 11,350 mg. They state that each treat has 5mg of CBD oil. CBD appears to be the last ingredient, by weight. The company seems to be listing it first to make their product appear to be superior or to have more CBD oil than other products. I contacted the company to ask them for an explanation and they did not respond to my email.

She has been in excellent health and is happy and eager to take walks, she likes her food, drinks appropriate amounts of water, likes to hang out with us. She has never had a reaction like that which just happened. I purchased a new 26lb bag on 12/15/18 and poured that bag into the large lidded container that I use for dog food, on top of the remaining kibble from a previously purchased bag that she had been eating for several weeks with no problem. I fed her one scoop as usual at 7:00PM on 12/15, at midnight she got up and just stood in the middle of the room not moving. Around 1:00AM she vomited. I thought that was odd but didn't suspect the food. She was subdued in the morning but was eager for a walk. I then fed her one scoop at 8:00AM the next morning and she was again subdued. 3 hrs later around 11:00AM she vomited all of it. I then suspected the food but also wondered if it could be a bowl obstruction. So i fed her a cup of rice with some salmon in it. She kept that down. Buy the afternoon she was brighter and perkier. I again fed her a cup of rice with salmon the evening of 12/16 and she kept that down. I fed her another cup of rice with salmon this morning 12/17 after our regular walk and she is back to normal behavior. After posting my story online I had many people come to me with the same issues after switching to victor. One man even lost both of his dogs and found durring the liver biopsy that high levels of copper had poisoned his dog. He had the food tested with his vet and found extremely high levels of copper. This is one testimony of the many that have lost their dogs to liver failure after switching to victor. Since we've came to US, I can't find german food and kashas and good fish in (b) (6) and at December 2017 I choose Acana Single Protein Diet Mackrel or Orijen "Six Fish" diet. He ate only this food and some vegetables orz fruits. In may 26th Henry has a surgery - we removed small mass from his leg. He has been more letargic, and his belly was biggest than normal, but doctors think it was allergy reactions. at August 15th other doctor diagosed CHF and sent us to (b) (6) to cardiology department. (b) (6) never had taurine blood test but I've been started taurine and L-carnityne suplemantation 5 weeks ago and he feel better and his abnormal heart rate desapidisappeared - our last evaluation in cardiology dept was a very good and give us a little hope for longest life.	11	Years	Bulldog - French	Dog	30	Pound

EON-373632	12/12/2018 12:36	Nutro Dog Food Wholesome Essentials Small bites chicken and brown rice and sweet potato.	I recently bought a bag of Nutro brand dog food for my pet from Pet Supplies Plus. Typically, these store brands are of higher quality. The ingredients sounded good, so I gave it a try. About two months in, I noticed a trail of ants in an open Ziploc I left on the floor the night before... all dead. I repeated the experiment by leaving some in his bowl this time. Again overnight all the ants are dead. I checked online and there are reviews after review about Nutro making dogs sick. Throwing up bile, blood in poop, sick. Some died. There is no corn or corn meal that could've harmed ants listed in the ingredients. The only conclusion I can come to is pesticides, and a lot of them. Looking back after I started (b) (6) on this food, I remember him throwing up on occasion and a couple days he was lethargic. I just thought he was having a bad day at the time.	5	Years	Chow Chow	Dog	50	Pound
EON-373626	12/12/2018 12:08	Zignature Zssential Formula	I was scooping out dry dog food to feed my dogs and I scooped up a broken handle off of what appears to be a box cutter. I contacted Pets Global who makes Zignature Dog food and also took the piece to (b) (6) Specialties in (b) (6) where I buy my food. As I no longer have the bag in which the food came in, I was hoping if I provide the date I bought it, the store could help me with a lot # , but unfortunately they could not. I did obtain the phone number of Pets Global from the store and contacted them directly. They want me to send them the actual piece that I found in the bag (I sent them a picture via e-mail). I hesitate in doing so. I don't care about the replacement bag of food they want to send me as I am switching foods anyway.
EON-373623	12/12/2018 11:44	Purina ProPlan Veterenary Diets UR Urinary Ox/St	I have been purchasing Purina ProPlan Veterinary Diets UR urinary ox/st for about a year now. I have 3 dogs who have a propensity to kidney stones and the veterinary suggested I switch them over to this product. But in the last few weeks I have noticed that my are parched. They are ingesting massive quantities of water, so much so that they even wake me up at night to go to their bowl and drink water after eating their food at night. One of my dogs has also started to act lethargic and it got to the point that he would not eat. His stomach is also making horrible gastrointestinal sounds so loud that I can hear them when I am sitting on the couch and he is on the floor. I stopped giving him them the food and the symptoms stopped. It is an expensive food so I tried giving it to them again and the problems started again so I have stopped feeding them the food for good now. It worries me, because I don't know if it is my dogs being sensitive to this food or if it could be a problem with the food that could be harming other dogs as well. My vet orders the food the moment I request it so I know it is not sitting in his office too long. The numbers under the bar code are D-3810017574-B. EON-373596	12/11/2018 23:36	Rachael Ray Nutrish Super Premium Food for Dogs Real Beef Pea & Brown Rice Recipe	On (b) (6) I lost my sweet dog, (b) (6) a cream-colored, 22lb, poodle/schnauzer mix rescue, to an illness that my vet along with our emergency vet could not specifically or positively identify after two weeks of investigation and treatment. They both thought it looked like rodenticide poisoning, but (b) (6) had no access to such poison. On Thursday, 10/25/18, 6:37 pm purchased 1 bag Rachael Ray Nutrish Food For Dogs, Real Beef, Pea &amp; Brown Rice Recipe, Adult, 6 lbs. bar code #(007119000603 on the online receipt, 071190006035 printed on a product bag) at the Wegman's store in (b) (6). My dog (b) (6) had been super-healthy and very active up until he started this bag of dog food. (He had been eating this brand, various recipes, for quite a while.) I can print out receipts from Wegmans which I viewed on their shoppers club website. (b) (6) symptoms began within next few days. I am not sure exactly what day (b) (6) started the new bag of food - likely the next day or two after purchase, either Friday 10/26 or Saturday 10/27. By Sunday night 10/28/18 Banjo was noticeably drooling, panting, and licking excessively. Very unusual for him. This behavior continued over many days. Monday morning 10/29 I first noticed he was drinking and peeing excessively, and had some diarrhea, including peeing and pooping in the house, even after just relieving himself on a walk outside. Unusual for (b) (6). Some of the poop appeared to contain a fair amount of mucus. The increased peeing continued, and I walked him much more frequently than usual. He also seemed to be licking himself (his abdomen) more, and his muzzle around his mouth was often wet, where it usually was dry. By mid-November, he gradually became more "down" and lethargic and his appetite was severely decreased. On Monday, (b) (6) I first noticed that (b) (6) belly area was dark purple	12.5	Years	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	22	Pound

			under his skin from his chest down to his shaft (I have photos) It looked like he was bleeding internally. I called my vet, (b) (6), who couldn't see him until Friday, and I sent him photos. He too, was alarmed, and asked if (b) (6) had access to rodenticides, which he did not. Because he couldn't see (b) (6) until Friday, I immediately took (b) (6) to the (b) (6). where he saw (b) (6). She worked him up, did bloodwork, coagulation panel etc. She also asked if (b) (6) could have eaten rat or mouse poison, as he had symptoms of that type of poisoning. Again, he had no access to rodenticides. They said his red and white blood cells were normal, but his platelets were low, about 90,000, and he had been bleeding internally. (Platelets should be around 175,000 - 500,000 in dogs.) Both vets had asked if (b) (6) had access to rodenticides (mouse or rat poison) which he did not. (b) (6) was baffled, sent (b) (6) home with us and said to recheck his blood on Friday at his regular vet (b) (6). They said to treat him gently as he was still a bleeding risk. (b) (6) started (b) (6) on Doxycyclene, Pentoxifylline, and Cerenia. Tuesday, (b) (6), (b) (6) was now not interested in his food at all, so the vet's office advised me to mix baby food with it so he would eat, which seemed to help a bit. In reading about rodenticide poisoning both using anticoagulants and vitamin D, I saw that an overdose of vitamin D can produce similar symptoms to (b) (6) the excessive thirst, excessive urination caught my eye. But, again, I thought (b) (6) had no access to those levels of vitamin D, so I put it out of my mind, although I did decide to save his food. Friday, (b) (6), I took (b) (6) examined him) and he repeated the bloodwork. (b) (6) platelets were still low, 130,000, but otherwise, his bloodwork didn't indicate what was causing these symptoms, and (b) (6) know what it could be.

			(b) (6) 7:49 pm we purchased another 6 lb bag of Rachel Ray Nutrish (same recipe) same bar code # 007119000603 at Wegman's store in (b) (6) , MD. I saved the last bit of the bag purchased on 10/25 in a ziplock bag, which I still have. So we began serving the newest bag of food likely on (b) (6) He did not get very far into it, and he wasn't eating much at that point, so I still have the bulk of that bag in a Rubbermaid container. (b) (6) did a workup to try to get to the cause of the symptoms. Chest and abdomen x-rays were clear. There was no mass seen so they didn't think it was a tumor or cancer. (b) (6) had some blood and bilirubin in his urine. (b) (6) and (b) (6) worked very hard to try to identify what was causing (b) (6) mystery illness. (b) (6) (b) (6) Vet did a liver test (Bile Acids). On (b) (6) , the results came back normal, and (b) (6) felt that we should just recheck (b) (6) bloodwork in a few weeks. There was no indication to look for anything via ultrasound, since his liver tests came back normal. He did not know for sure what could be causing the internal bleeding. (b) (6) wouldn't eat, threw up his medicine in the afternoon, and he went down hill rapidly through the evening, becoming more and more weak, he threw up water almost immediately after being given it. He would cough and collapse, his legs gave way and he fell. We took him to the (b) (6) where they did more bloodwork and x-rays. His platelets had dropped to 30,000. He had lost 1/3 of his blood supply to internal hemorrhaging, she suspected he was bleeding from his lungs. The blood filling up in his chest cavity was making it harder for him to breathe. His situation was dire, and we still did not know what had caused it. The vet said that the autoimmune disease, Thrombocytopenia, can cause destruction of platelets, but she thought that was not likely Thrombocytopenia because his platelets had increased from 90 000 to 130 000 on his own before She advised that treating

			had increased from 90,000 to 130,000 on his own before. She advised that treating for that would not likely be successful and she couldn't watch him struggling to breathe as he was. She speculated that cancer could be destroying his platelets, but he had no signs of cancer other than low platelets, and if it was cancer, it would not be treatable. He was going to die very soon regardless of what we did. She advised that we euthanize him right then, to end his extreme discomfort. It was heartwrenching. We miss our dear (b) (6) terribly. I saw the FDA reports on the active investigation into possible high levels of vitamin D in various brands of dog food, and felt I should report (b) (6) case since his symptoms were so similar and a cause was not identified. I imagined there could be many other dogs suffering, and dog owners and veterinarians who may be wondering what is going on with their dogs, not thinking that it could possibly be vitamin D poisoning. Both my regular veterinarian, (b) (6), and the ER vet have said they would be happy to supply any clinical testing or medical records that would be helpful. They are both wonderful, and treated (b) (6) and us with the utmost care and compassion, and we are grateful for all their help.
EON-373581	12/11/2018 21:00	Taste of the Wild Roasted Lamb	A few days after starting a new bag of our usual dog food (Taste of the Wild, Lamb), our dog (b) (6) began to drink to excess and need to urinate frequently, and became unable to get through the night without going outside. She also became incontinent. We took her to the vet and ended up doing multiple tests (urine, blood, x-rays, ultrasound) over a few visits. No clear diagnosis was made. We mentioned starting the new dog food, but clinically it was not clear that this was the problem (b) (6) continued to decline rapidly, lost her appetite and had no quality of life. The vet gave her a steroid injection that improved things. Yet the thirst and urination continued unabated -- up to 28 cups of water per day. The vet says the symptoms were consistent with Vitamin D toxicity, and that the markers may have been "sub-clinical." The last few days (b) (6) has begun to improve and we hope the toxicity -- if that's what it is -- is working itself out of her system. We are tapering her off the steroid pills and using CBD oil, approved by the vet, as an anti-inflammatory.	10	Years	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	35	Pound

I purchased the Jack & Pup shin bones from a TJ Maxx store in (b) (6) on 12/8/18 for my Australian Cattle Dog, (b) (6). She loved these bones and stripped the skin off of one of them, but fortunately did not chew off much of the bone itself. Around 11 pm on 12/10/18, my husband, (b) (6) noticed something was wrong with her. He took her outside and she vomited twice, was unable to stand up or run properly, was generally lethargic, and lost her appetite.  I was immediately suspicious of the bones because it was the only new thing that had been introduced to her. I googled to see if there was a recall on the product to which I was unaware, but found nothing conclusive on Jack & Pup. However, I discovered that United Pet Group, Inc. had issued a voluntary recall of multiple brands of rawhide chews, toys, and treats, all of which coming from Mexico, Columbia, and Brazil. These treats had been contaminated with quaternary ammonium, which is a caustic and potent cleaning agent. I then researched the symptoms of quaternary ammonium toxicity: fever, lethargy, neurological effects, loss of appetite, and death if severe and untreated. (b) (6) was experiencing all of these symptoms, so I was immediately terrified.  We took (b) (6) to a 24-hour vet in (b) (6). I explained the situation to the vet and she concluded that a neurotoxin was the likely culprit, and that the bones were most likely the source. (b) (6) received three rounds of IV fluids and a shot of Cerenia for treatment. She needed inpatient care, but I was unable to afford an overnight stay, so I had to just take her home and monitor the situation. She is recovering and doing much better, but it was a frightening and horrible situation. My dog could have died had I not taken immediate action and continued to let her gnaw on the bones.	3	Years	Cattle Dog - Australian (blue heeler, red heeler, Queensland cattledog)	Dog	30	Pound

The other two dogs that had an issue was an 8 year old teacup Chihuahua, and a 2 year old Husky. Their condition cleared up within a day or two with a bland diet and lots of water. So only one of the 3 needed antibiotics to get well. My 4th dog is a mut. We think he is a Chihuahua and wienie mix. He is 9 years old. He has not had a reaction to the treats. At first I wasn't sure it was the Nudges but our the vet thought it was maybe something (b) (6) ate so I removed them from their diet and did see an improvement. After only having one treat each, the same 3 dogs had diarrhea again. So I wasn't sure about notifying you. However, seeing as they were doing so well and after only one of these they became ill, I think there is a bad batch out there. Half cup in am and half cup in pm. I noticed months ago she was really drinking a lot of water and peeing everywhere. Then a few few months ago she starting drooling. She throws up all the time and has days she won't eat at all. I just assumed this was from her age, since she is 14. She also gets episodes of turning really red in her face ,her eyes get red and blood shot and ears turn red. Shes is a boston terrier with white face and black body. I did see the puppy recall is chicken and rice and this adult food should be checked since its chicken and rice. I am taking her off this today.	14	Years	Terrier - Boston	Dog	20	Pound
EON-373407	12/10/2018 11:40	Purina ONE SmartBlend Natural Lamb & Rice Formula Adult Dry Dog Food	We fed our dog Purina Lamb and Rice (31.1 lb bag). We noticed after the first week or two that it would make him throw up sometimes when he ate it and then we also noticed that he began refusing to eat it. We had just moved, so we assumed that he was stressed from moving and was having food aversions because of it. We switched him to can dog food because he began losing weight from refusing to eat his food. We often mixed the original Purina Lamb and Rice dog food into his canned dog food to try to get him comfortable eating it so that we could get him to eat the normal dog food.  In less than 2 months, he lost 20 pounds. He became very ill (lethargy, weakness, unable to walk at times) and it came to our attention that he was in kidney failure. EON-373367	12/9/2018 19:44	Nutro Wholesome Essentials Lamb/Rice - 30 lb bag	The last week before I had to bring (b) (6) to the vet, she stopped eating all the food that was put in her bowl. I even tried to feed her rice and chicken (something the vet always told us to give her when she was not feeling well), but she wouldn't eat it. The day I brought her to the Animal Hospital she would not eat, she would shake periodically and I noticed her pink skin looked a little yellow. She was drinking a lot of water, but her energy was decreased. I knew something was seriously wrong. When the vet did a blood test they discovered that the "bilirubin" in her blood was extremely high and that she had a severe liver issue. They kept her her for two days giving her an iv of antibiotics. They also did an x-ray of her abdomen and found no abnormalities. And an ultra sound revealed no evidence of bile duct obstruction or dilation of portal vessels. They kept asking me if she could have gotten into any toxins. And, I could not think of any. I brought her home after two days in the hospital and later brought her to our vet. She did more tests. Our vet determined that it was not cancer. But, without a biopsy, we would only be guessing what was causing her issue. Our vet felt like she may have a genetic copper disorder that was causing the liver issue. She has been on antibiotics and other pills for about three weeks. When this first happened we would have to puree all her food and force feed her with a syringe. Now she is eating her food and has most of her energy back. She is an older dog, so energy level is not as high as a puppy. I recently heard about the issues of dog food with too much vitamin D causing liver issues and possibly death in dogs. This sounded so much like the problem our dog had. Unfortunately I do not have the packaging of the food we purchased because we empty the food into an airtight container. But, I purchased it from Pet Supermarket in (b) (6) on Sept. 24, 2018. It was Nutro Wholesome Essentials Lamb/rice 30 lb bag. (They are not one of the brands on the list, but I still feel like there is too much of a coincidence between our dog getting sick and the problems that are arising.) The bag was an older bag of food, either just expired or expiring soon because I received a discount. She ate the food - two cups a day from Sept 24 - November 10. (With and exception of the last week when she was not eating as much due to loss of appetite.)	12	Years	Poodle (unspecified)	Dog	60	Pound

EON-373364	12/9/2018 18:20	Nutri Source Super Premium Pet Foods Pure Vita Holistic Pet Foods. Flavors used: salmon& pea Duck & green lentils Turkey & Sweet potatoes Beef & Red Lentils Venison& red Lentils	On Monday 12/3/18 my dog started having diarrhea for several days and wouldn't eat or drink much water and was very lethargic. I took her to our vet Wednesday afternoon to have her checked. She had a 104 fever and we found out she was anemic. They took a blood sample to run all labs which we would get the next day. We went back the next day to find out her lab work was horrible, low white blood cells and not making new red blood cells. All labs either too high or too low. They did an X-ray and ultrasound and thought she could be bleeding internally. When her liver and spleen and lungs looked fine, they thought had a infection of some kind or possibly thought it could be autoimmune disease in her bones or bone cancer if not an infection because her labs were so bad. Her temperature was now 105. She started antibiotics that day. We took her in the next day to get another temperature check and this time it was down to 98 which is bad because too low for a dog. The low temperature can be indicative of a heart issue. He noticed from the X-ray that her heart was slightly enlarged and felt that her infection could be sepsis because her heart rate was so low and also irregular and that the blood wasn't moving through her body fast enough so could be causing the infection. He started her on heart meds in addition to the antibiotics. She is slowly eating and drinking again and starting to get some energy back. I also called the ER vet the next day because she was so lethargic that morning. Both vets had asked me what her food was. (b) (6) had been on a grain free diet the past 1.5 years containing lentils, sweet potatoes and chickpeas. All of which I am now finding out could be linked to an enlarged heart. She is taking baby steps each day but is still low energy and only eating and drinking some. I feel her dog food caused her to have the enlarged heart and the heart issues. Our vet had diagnosed her with DCM after hearing her very low heart rate and looking at her Xray of the enlarged heart. She now has to take these pills for life. We still plan to have an echo cardiogram done once she is feeling better but that requires going to the ER vet and spending another $700-$1000. She was a very healthy dog prior to Monday. We are happy she is alive but feel this food should be recalled as more cases are sure to come out about how the grain free food is hurting dogs.	9	Years	Terrier - Tibetan	Dog	26	Pound

After starting feeding them from the first bag, my dogs got extremely foul smelling flatulence. After starting the second bag, my chocolate Lab (b) (6), got severe bloody diarrhea. I collected a sample of it for testing and took the dog to our Veterinarian. He sent it out for testing, including a Comprehensive Fecal Panel, along with a PCR (polymerase chain reaction) Assay. The result came back positive for a slight amount of Coccidia, and VERY STRONGLY positive for Clostridium perfringens Type A. The result was 100 times the normal limit. Considering the timing of the use of the two bags, and the sudden onset of gas and diarrhea, with a positive lab test, I believe the Cadet brand duck breast jerky treats are the cause. I am aware they were recalled in the past for contamination, and that Clostridium perfringens was one of the identified contaminants then. I started feeding American Journey Cat food on November 7th, 2018. About 2 week's later I noticed my cat appeared to have lost weight. His back bone, hips and neck looked more prominent. He also had stopped eating as much and seemed more lethargic. I took him to VCA animal hospital on (b) (6) because he had almost no appetite, weight loss, halitosis, and lethargy. He had lost 3 lbs in less then a month. I could not afford the $600 vet bill which would have included bloodwork and urine studies, iv fluids etc. Due to his severe halitosis the veterinarian assumed it was his teeth that was causing him not to eat. I left the vet with antibiotics and oral mouth rinse. Over the next 48 hours (b) (6) started to rapidly decline. I discovered that he had been licking the cat litter which what was causing the halitosis, suggesting some mineral imbalance in his body. He refused to eat the American Journey cat food and even gagged at it, he was very lethargic but was very thirsty and continued to drink water. He began having difficulty walking due to weakness, he would urinate a large amount when I took him to the litter box. He started vomiting dark looking liquid. On (b) (6) about 3 am I rushed him to (b) (6). He was actively dying, he was crying out in pain, weak and vomiting. He had to be euthanized. Sadly, I have lost my friend of 10 years young. I'm not sure how long prior he had it because there was so much diarrhea everywhere. I couldn't be certain how much came from each dog. On the 16th and part of the 17th I thought (b) (6) anti diarrheal medicine was not working, but it turns out it was (b) (6) having diarrhea. The 18th I took him to the vet for medical treatment. They ran blood work and he does not have Pancreatitis but extreme diarrhea. The only change in both their diet was the Abound dry dog food. They have not eaten trash or table scraps or gotten into anything. On Oct 17 I contacted Kroger's and alerted them to (b) (6) being sick from their food. They assigned me a claim number and a representative. They are trying to claim that their illness is from changing their diet from grain free to a grain diet. EON-373213	12/7/2018 14:00	Blue Ridge Beef Natural Mix	Became lethargic, short of breath, wouldn't eat, all very sudden. In a matter of 24 hours she was at the emergency vet being treated for congestive heart failure and atrial fibrillation. We pursued further testing to find the cause of these diagnosis..since previous echocardiograms have been normal along with annual physicals and blood work. One test came back positive. Neospora Caninum. After investigating further, Neospora is found in cattle, aborted cattle fetus and placenta. We feed our dogs as one of the components of their food, Blue Ridge Beef Natural Mix, which upon further investigation was found to have been the subject of either recall or warning, admitted they were using some diseased, dying or dead cattle, calves and other pieces and parts of such dead or dying animals when making their Natural mix. We have subsequently had all of our dogs tested for Neospora and are awaiting those results. The reasoning behind the testing of all of our animals is because 1) year previous to this one of our female great danes exhibited a sudden, acute onset of low WBC and had to be treated emergently. 2) 4 bred bitches have had uncharacteristically poor outcomes with pregnancy. One lost a littler in utero, one gave birth to one deformed puppy that died immediately, one delivered 2 puppies who were both experiencing extreme neurological deficits and after several weeks of care were subsequently euthanized,and the third aborted her litter. We also have a male that has some sudden and acute neurological issues in his hind legs. Upon reading the materials available through the College of Epidemiology, the AMA and through consultation with specialty veterinarians in our area, it is found that Neospora Caninum causes all of the above issues with dogs. If in fact, the other dogs test positive, it would have devastating results in our kennel. This particular kennel is of very high standards, breeder is recognized by the AKC as a Breeder of Merit, many awarded Great Danes over almost 30 years. All dogs are fully health tested with echocardiogram, hips, elbows, thyroid and eye certification and have received recognition from the (b) (6) numbers. There has never been any health issues associated with this kennel until now.	5	Years	Great Dane	Dog	130	Pound

EON-373021	12/6/2018 8:16	Purina Friskies Shreds With Whitefish & Sardines in Sauce, Purina Friskies Flaked With Tuna & Egg	My wife and I purchased 12 cans of Purina cat food from Walmart a couple months ago. Our cat consumes wet food (can) 1/3 a can each day and the remaining of her diet is dry food from a reputable brand purchased at Costco. Walmart sells each can individually for $.48 (tax not included). A variety of can flavors were selected even though I don't think a cat cares about variety as much as humans do. However, our cat will not eat Pate style cat food. I'm not sure what is in Pate but from a human smell it smells like rotten food whereas the flaked, shreds or filet style smells and looks almost edible for a human. Henceforth, for the past two years we consistently purchase Purina's Friskies flaked, shreds or filet style canned cat food. Last week I opened a can of "Purina's Friskies Shreds with Whitefish & Sardines in Sauce". It's consistency was not flaked but rather Pate. I served 1/3 of its contents to our cat and she smelled it and walked away. It sat there all day and was not ate. Our cat is part Siamese and Snowshoe. She is an intelligent cat. The following day I opened another can its label read "Purina's Friskies Flaked with Tuna & Egg". It also had Pate consistency. As a human, I tried again, the cat knew she didn't like Pate and honestly it smelled bad. She smelled it and it remained uneaten the rest of the day. I looked at the remaining cans and their locater/manufacturer number was different than these two cans and the contents of the next opened can matched the description of the can, which was "Purina's Prime Filets with Chicken in gravy".

EON-372992	12/5/2018 19:20	PEDIGREE RETRIEVER IAMS EUKANNBA BLUE BUFFALO DOG FOOD PRODUCTS PRODUCED BY MARS INC.	Near the end of July 2018 our pet (b) (6) began to show signs of a lost in his appetite and started to eat much less and refusing to eat his most frequent dog food , dry and /or canned/wet Pedigree. Shortly afterward our other dog, (b) (6) a Staffordshire Bull Terrier, started to refuse her Pedigree dog food unless it was tainted with other flavoring. That only lasted a short time before they refused to eat Pedigree all together. We started to feed them other brands such as Blue Buffalo, Optimum, Iams, Eukanuba, Retriever , Alpo and some others with some better success. (b) (6) was eating well and (b) (6) was starting to lose weight and refusing to eat anything but always wanted water. The colder the better he liked it.. As well he was starting to walk with a wobble, acting odd with a lost look in his eyes. At this point we took (b) (6) to the Vet. We were asked by the Vet what we were feeding the dog, when informed of the above dog foods we asked if there was any known issues with the food we were using and they said “no” not to there knowledge. However, blood work that was done on that date indicated that (b) (6) was having an abnormal increase in his calcium level which would be caused by a high level of Vitamin D. We were asked if we were giving (b) (6) any kind of vitamin D supplements because the foods we had mentioned should not have caused the problem. We have the Vet stated that although there were no obvious signs of it, that there was a good chance that perhaps (b) (6) had some underlying cancer that just hasn’t surfaced yet. We were informed that certain cancers have a reaction on the gland that produces the calcium. For years of feeding the dogs the same diet which consisted mostly of Pedigree Brands of dog food without issues our Vet felt that perhaps some sort of cancer was the problem, but to try a bland diet of chicken, rice and/or hamburg for a while and see what happens.. It should be noted that we have had (b) (6) since January, 2014. He was regularly seen by our Vet and was up to date on all his shots, hotworms and tic treatment and blood work. He was last seen prior to July on May 5, 2018 with no obvious problems with his physical actions with his blood work coming back within normal range	4.5	Years	Retriever - Labrador	Dog	60	Pound

			although his calcium level was a little higher than normal. For a while it seemed to work. (b) (6) was eating the bland diet, (b) (6) was starting to eat Pedigree and other above named dog foods. (b) (6) was starting to walk and act normal. We took him back to the Vet who was happy with (b) (6) recovery and were allowed to start giving him regular food. (b) (6) started to eat his regular main diet of Pedigree dog and others. This was short lived, within a week and a half (b) (6) was back to showing his ill signs this time totally refusing to eat anything. He would only eat when we forced fed with pureed chicken, rice and or beef through a plastic water container and was always in search of water. We took him to several other Vets trying to find the problem causing his high levels of calcium. However, the results were the same, no obvious reasons for his high calcium there must be some sort of undetected underlying cancer that has not shown itself. On August 9, 2018 (b) (6) condition had worsened and started walking and acting in a manner as if he were drunk. With this we took him to (b) (6) Veterinary Emergency Treatment Specialist, (b) (6) . We went through the same routine of questions about the dog food, again not being suspicious about the dog food because of the long history of feeding him the same stuff and concerned that perhaps he had gotten either into some vitamin D supplements some how or even maybe antifreeze. He had not gotten into either because the dog was always around us. We asked this new Vet if she or anyone at Tufts had heard of any problems with the dog food we were feeding our dogs, and she replied that she had not and did not believe the dog food was the problem. (b) (6) was left a (b) (6) that night for observation and test.

			Blood work again showed the high calcium levels but this time signs that his kidneys were failing as well. We were informed that the constant high calcium levels had taken its toll on (b) (6) and that his kidneys were failing and that he could pass at any time. (b) (6) recommended that we consider euthanasia for (b) (6) because his death was eminent. (b) (6) did show some signs of improvement when given Prednisolone (steroid). He would eat and do much better physically than he had in the past, however again we were informed that the steroids were working for reasons unknown, is calcium levels had lowered and that the steroids would only be a temporary fix and that his death was still eminent and that there was too much internal organ damage caused by the high calcium Level hat could not be repaired. We decided to let fate take it's course. We agreed to continue giving (b) (6) the steroids, knowing that he could still pass at any time. It was agreed that we would have (b) (6) euthanized if his condition worsened or showed signs of pain. We were informed that (b) (6) was starting to eat regular but that we should try Royal Canine which was a medicated type of dog food that might help keep his calcium down. We were given a prescription for the Royal Canine dog food and we were to keep using the steroids and if his calcium level got too low to give him small amounts of tums as a calcium supplement. I informed (b) (6) that I had contacted a company that manufactured urine test strips that I could use at home to monitor his calcium levels. (b) (6) agreed to give it a try . We took (b) (6) home and went to the Petsmart and picked up the prescribed dog food by (b) (6) Looking at the Label I noticed that there was vitamin D in the prescribed dog

			food. The placement on the Label indicated there were possible large amounts of it In the dog food itself. I spoke with the Barnfield Hospital Veterinarian on duty about the dog food and my concerns about the possible large the amounts of vitamin D in the food when I was to try and reduce the calcium intake (b) (6). She had no answer other than she was a Veterinarian not a manufacturer of the dog food. It really did not matter because when I got home neither dog would eat the dog food. They only sniffed it and quickly walked away from it. For several weeks it was up and down with (b) (6). Some good days and more and more bad days, with many visits to (b) (6) for blood work and to get fluids although he was again in the constant need of drinking water. But still eating regular dog (Pedigree and other Mars brand of dog foods) until the evening of 10/8/2018 when he refused to eat again and was loosing his mobility and strength. On (b) (6) (b) (6) high calcium level took it's final toll. He would not get up, when he did get up he had no mobility control, would not eat nor drink any water. A glaze had come over his eyes and was not responding to verbal talk. As well he had lost his control over his bodily fluids. I contacted our regular (b) (6) and informed her that the time has come to euthanize (b) (6) At around 5:00 pm (b) (6) was put to sleep. Be advised that all the different Veterinarians that came in contact with (b) (6) were advised about each other were keeping in touch with each other and sharing any and all information concerning (b) (6) in hopes of saving him some how. GOD BLESS THEM ALL. Several month's go by and we are thinking of (b) (6)s death as a poor dog who had gotten a bad call in life.....Than on the Eve of 12/4/2018 It was found that the FDA had put a recall on a number of dog food companies for producing doing food with TOXIC LEVELS of vitamin D some exceeding 70% over what was labeled resulting in

We take her to the Vet on Thursday the 29th of November for an examination. The vet concludes she has some sort of infection and prescribes medication which should relieve the symptoms. Go home administer the medications first time she took all meds. From there the decline was rapid!!! She wouldn't eat , she would drink fluids and we attempted multiple combinations of food to administer her meds and get her to ingest food all to no avail. Went back to the Vet on Monday the 2nd of December for a more various examination. After multiple tests including Exrays hr Vet said he did not know what was wrong and suggested we take her to a specialist. (b) (6) started having frequent urination and increase water consumption around November 11, 2018 but was eating and acting normal.. On (b) (6) I took the dog to the (b) (6) to be examined because he was starting to not eat alot. They did urine test and fecal test which came up with blood in the urine and high protein. They gave him Amoxicillin in case it was a UTI. He progressively declined in health by becoming lethargic, stopped eating completely and stopped drinking water. On (b) (6) he was rushed to (b) (6). They did blood work and x-rays to try and figure out cause. His x-rays were normal but his bloodwork showed extremely high levels of Calcium (Vit D) and we were asked by vet if he ingested rat poison or swallowed Vit D supplements. He had not. She said the dog was having kidney issues supportive of ingesting toxic supplements or possible Addisons disease. The testing and hospitalization that the dog would need run into over $4600 for 4 days and if he made it he need meds and monthly bloodwork for the rest of his life. Dr, was uncertain if his kidneys failing would even be fixable. We had to make the heart wrenching decision to euthanize the dog because he was suffering. Now I'm seeing the several dog food brands are being recalled due to high Vit D levels that are causing some dogs lethal symptoms just like my dog. My dog had been eating Open Nature Chicken and Brown Rice Puppy food for about 3 months prior to his death. He went from 17.6 pounds to 15.2 less then a week later. I am very concerned about the food being the cause. His calcium level was 15.2 at time of death and toxic levels are 11.2 to be critical. I have all lab results and notes from the doctors at both clinics.	1	Years	Terrier - West Highland White	Dog	15	Pound

The Chicken and Salmon flavors have their respective favors as the primary ingredient - eg Chicken is the main ingredient for the "Chicken No-Hide", Salmon is the main ingredient in the "salmon no-hide". However, in discussion with the manufacturer, I was told the base (rawhide like bone) is the same for each and a slurry of either chicken or salmon is put on top. Since the base (rawhide like bone) is 99% of what the product is comprised of, and if the base (bone) is the same for both flavors, then the primary ingredient for both should be the same. I question the ingredient(s) of the rawhide-like bone material. 2. My dog unrolled the No-Hide bone after several minutes of chewing and several loose pieces of "no-hide" fell out. EON-372872	12/4/2018 21:56	Kirkland adult dog	I was wondering why such a sudden decline in (b) (6). She was an 8 year old healthy, and energetic dog. She was happy this summer. The only thing I can look back at was a change in food. I'm a Costco member, and I have always been intrigued with their dog food. The ingredients were appealing, made with real meats, and so on. So, I switched her gradually. She seemed to like it. She started itching around September. I took her to the vet as I always do every September like allergy season clockwork. The vet and I both thought it's seasonal, since we have to go in at the same time every year. Then, after a month she's just looking sad and not herself. Allergies are okay, little itching, but her eyes started to water a lot. I thought maybe it could be the food. Her meds always helped before, and this time they didn't. I switched her back. Within the past two months (b) (6) has become blind. Her liver enzymes showed beginning stages of liver failure. Her gait and her coordination was off. She would try to exit behind my door, she would stop in the middle of my stairs because she couldn't see going down. She fell numerous times. She lost control of her bladder and was always thirsty. It wasn't until I came home and found piles of heavy vomit that it hit me. ?? My poor girl. I googled reviews of Kirkland dog food and felt as someone punch my gut. Pages on pages of 1 star reviews. 300 PLUS OF THE SAME SYMPTOMS, and recent Reviews about how it made dogs blind, sick and many complained about liver failure! So many DOGS HAVE DIED AFTER EATING THIS FOOD! I'm distraught and I can't help but blame myself. I heading to Costco to speak with management. Diamond Foods then got ahold of me and denied that there is a problem. Mind you, a direct friend and her friend also had the same symptoms within the same exact time frame. So, 3 people in my direct life plus 300 reviews. EON-372868	12/4/2018 21:12	dog for dog duck and brown rice	I bought dog for dog around beginning of month of april 2017 . Intregrated it with dog food I had used for 2 years prior because I wanted to pay it forward as well as feed what was supposed to be quality dog food. 3 weeks lter all 4 dogs were sickened and my purebred husky died. She got diabetes and pancreatitis and went down so horribly fast. The dog for dog food at this time was being taken off the shelf and revamped. i wrote to their facebook page and my review is still there nbut rocky Kanaka never responded or even apologized for my loss. Pet Smart had the decency to reach out and the ceo in Arizona called me personally. Kanaka blocked me from being able to further comment. I also tried contacting the distributor and manufacturer only to find their websites shut down and phone number to answer machines that never merited response. The dog for dog duck recipe had only duck fat and duck meal for meat and so many rice products. Rice is a grain no matter and this had bran , brewers yeast rice this and rice that. No real nutrition. If you go to their facebook page you will see other people had some similar oucomes but fortunately no deaths as they read my steatement . some decided to stop after my comments because of hi, Rocky Kanakas, lack of compassion and decency by not even reaching out to me. Lack of integrity. They pulled it for some legitimate reason and i think this is some of what other pet owners were experiencing. I under stand that pet smart doesn't even carry this pet food line of products as of last year. I hope to have someone look at this company and dog barkery too as it is also Rocky kanakas business. My other 3 dogs took a while but finally got back on track. My poor (b) (6) . She suffered awfully and he is an awful person with an awful product. She died on (b) (6) so i can never forget. EON-372866	12/4/2018 20:52	Instinct® Original Grain-Free Recipe with Real Chicken	In September, I received an order of the Instinct brand 'Instinct® Original Grain-Free Recipe with Real Chicken' with an expiration date of 3/28/2021. This food initially made my cat nauseous, and he threw up a few times. I wrote this off as being related to his kidney issues. Over the course of the next month and a half as I fed him food from this shipment I noticed he had bad gas. I reported this to the manufacturer at this point. When I received my next shipment, those symptoms went away.  Fast-forward to December. I received a new shipment with an expiration date of 9/20/2021 (239CCM4 1308 11). After feeding my pet 3 cans of this food (which had a much stronger, and slightly unpleasant smell (for cat food), he vomited up the food, and had bad gas again. At this point I immediately stopped giving him this food, reported to the manufacturer (still waiting for a follow-up), and requested a refund. I have all of the remaining food from this batch if samples are needed.	15	Years	Domestic Shorthair	Cat	7.25	Pound

EON-372860	12/4/2018 20:20	Royal Canin Satiety Support Weight Management  This is a prescription food	We have had two separate occasions where (b) (6) has gotten sick with vomiting and loss of appetite. The first time it happened he refused to eat any of his food and if he did he threw it right up and would continue vomiting until nothing was left but yellow liquid coming out. He would not eat anything including the food and if you fed him the food again he would throw it right up. He is a great eater so we knew there was an issue. We took him to the vet and they ran blood work up, ultrasound, and xray and found nothing wrong but gave him fluids for dehydration. He eventually was able to go back on to that food since we were not thinking the food had anything to do with it. Then we had the issue again where he starting vomiting and appetite loss. We took him too a different vet for another opinion and they ran blood work up and gave him fluids, but again found nothing wrong in the tests that they ran. They put him on a wet food to get him eating and we then switched his dry food to a different food and he has not had an issue since. We did ask Petsmart, where we purchased his food, if they knew any issues related to the food, they replied they did not know of any issues.	10	Years	Shepherd Dog - Australian	Dog	21	Pound

She normally devours it, looking for more. Over the next few days, she wasn't finishing her food. Then she started to throw up what she ate. She lost some weight (was approximately 40-45 pounds). By Tuesday, 11/20/2018, she had lost a significant amount of weight and wasn't eating. We brought her to the vet. She was down to 31 pounds. They took x-rays and blood work. Labs indicated she was having kidney failure. She was only 5. She was given anti nausea meds, and fluids to administer at home. She would eat sporadically, but not her dry food. She lost even more weight, and on Tuesday, 11/27/2018 we brought her back to the vet, where she stayed overnight until Friday, 11/30/2018. She was not only weighing 25 pounds. She received iv fluids for 4 days, appetite stimulants, etc., but her labs remained dismal. We brought her home for the weekend, with an appointment to end her suffering for Monday. She did no make it to that point. On Sunday, her breathing was labored, and we had to rush her to the emergency vet to have her humanely put to sleep. We have another dog who eats the same brand food, and now she won't eat it either. For the last 5 years my dog has been eating various flavors of Nutro dog food. On Thursday, he struggled to eat his food for breakfast. Around 2:30pm he had a severe episode of vomiting and lethargy. On Saturday he was admitted to the hospital and stayed 2 nights because he still would not eat. Tests revealed nothing immediately wrong with him. He is now home from the hospital, but still refusing to eat as usual. Not sure if this is related, but he has all the symptoms of the Vitamin D overdose.	9	Years	Bichon Frise	Dog	15	Pound
EON-372734	12/4/2018 11:40	Wysong Adult Dry Food	My dog died of suspected kidney failure in (b) (6). His diet consisted of Wysong dry food Maintenance type (now categorized as Adult). He began exhibiting symptoms in the summer/fall of 2014. He lost weight, began to vomit, have accidents, excessive thirst. The vet did blood work and suspected kidney failure. He had no known exposure to anything that would have explained what happened to him. He lost a significant amount of weight and in the end couldn't keep food down/wouldn't eat and ultimately he was suffering so much we had to put him down. Hearing about the recent Vitamin D recall, it makes sense that this may be what he was suffering from. Looking at the Wysong website they advocate adding Vitamin D to their food products, so I suspect they may have a high level as well.	7	Years	Beagle	Dog	20	Pound

I got up and looked out the same window to see who it was because we weren't expecting anyone. I didnt know who it was so I did not answer the door. As soon as I said to (b) (6) it's okay...he instantly fell to the ground and had a heart attack. Died in mid air. He was dead before he hit the ground. Devasted, screaming etc. It was horrible. I called 911, called the emergency vet hospital etc. The family came over to say their good byes. When he was taken to the Vet by our town dog service, the director told us she believes this is due to feeding him GF food. Apparently GF food is fatal to Golden retrievers. It causes widow makers. There is research done on this - not really advertised like it should be and it needs to be on the labels of GF dry dog food that this is potentially harmful to feed golden retrievers. Can be fatal. In our case it was. A perfectly healthy dog. Dead. Our family will never be the same. He was the best dog in the world and he is gone. BECAUSE of GF Food. If it cannot be taken off the shelf then it needs to be on the labels that it can be harmful to golden retrievers and other breeds. It causes dilated cardiomyopathy. It lowers certain levels in the dog and causes heart attacks.	4	Years	Retriever - Golden	Dog	108	Pound

EON-372707	12/4/2018 9:04	Abound salmon	My dog was healthy and always eating Rachael Ray dog food. Our neighbor gave us a brand new bag of Abound salmon dog food that was unopened. We started gradually giving this to our dog making sure he could handle the change in his food. He ate this food for a couple of weeks. On the morning of his death, he had his first seizure. He then had another. I called the vet but they could not see him until the next morning. My dog then had a couple more. I kept trying to figure out how I could carry him to a car without him biting me because he never wanted to be lifted. I was going to try to figure out a way to drive him a half hour to an emergency vet. I called my husband to leave work to help me and my dog had a couple more seizures in the hour it took him to get home. We decided to put our dog to sleep because it was the saddest thing we've ever been through. He had at least 10 seizures on the day he died. We found a vet that could put him to sleep at the end of the day. It was so difficult watching my dog go through this. In the month prior to this we had notice that he was shaking a little bit very rarely. We were watching it as old dog syndrome and we were waiting to see if he ever had anything like a seizure and was going to talk about it at our next vet check up. I am concerned that the dog food contributed to his death. Maybe you need to check and see if the salmon one has the elevated level of Vitamin D like the chicken one.	12	Years	Terrier - Jack Russell	Dog	22	Pound

At first I thought it was due to a hairball but it was the food that she had just ate previously. She continued to eat a little less than normal until she couldn't eat at all for one whole day and she was meowing like she was in pain. Projectile diarrhea that was as runny as water. The last night I was unsure if she was going to live through the night but the last morning she had a little food to eat (Rachel Rae). She had eaten from 4 different cans so I am unsure of which one or one's is the culprit. After I open a can I cover it and refrigerate it only for 3 days at the most, otherwise I throw it out. She did a echocardiogram and determined he had DCM which she believes because of the sudden onset and no family history of cardiac issue.. she determined it was due to eating a exotic grain free diet. EON-372463	11/30/2018 19:48	Earthborn Holistic Grain-Free Meadow Feast with Lamb Meal	When we returned from vacation on Nov. 17, our dog sitter informed my wife that (b) (6) may have an ear infection because he was scratching his ear. We scheduled an appt. with his vet the next day they were open (Mon. Nov. 19). Leading up to that appt. we noticed (b) (6) wasn't looking well and wasn't acting like himself. At the appt. the vet confirmed he had an ear infection but also noted his heart rate was elevated. Vet thought potentially a case of pneumonia. We left to visit my wife's family for Thanksgiving for Thur - Sat (with the dogs coming with us). (b) (6) was lethargic and not eating during the trip and generally looked sick most of the time. Brought him to a vet near my wife's family in (b) (6) where they took x-rays and blood work. Blood work was fine but xrays showed an enlarged heart and fluid around the abdominal area. Since we were leaving to go home the vet in NY recommended that we bring him in to a vet around our area for further evaluation. On Monday 11/26 (b) (6) was losing his balance while trying to stand so I rushed him to the nearest emergency vet hospital. He was diagnosed with congestive heart failure. The hospital ran a number of tests on him including check for lyme disease - all negative. Their conclusion is that it was probably his grain free diet - more specifically a lack of the taurine amino acid which based on studies they said there has found to be a lack of in the grain free diets. (b) (6) was released the following day by the cardiologist but will be on heavy heart medications for the foreseeable future. Below we're using 11/17 as a start date but realistically we think this may be something that has been happening for a while as some of our family members commented over the past few months that (b) (6) looked skinnier than normal. In this PDF, under "Handling Raw Food," they've included a paragraph stating "The Food and Drug Administration recently released an article informing the public that "salmonella is not harmful to dogs." The acidity level in the canine stomach is very high, creating a very inhospitable environment for bacteria." From my research, I'm not convinced said article exists and from what I have found, FDA's stance is as listed here: https://www.fda.gov/ForConsumers/ConsumerUpdates/ucm403350.htm -- "The agency therefore recommends cooking of raw meat and poultry to kill harmful bacteria like Salmonella and Listeria monocytogenes before you give the food to your pets." We Feed Raw responded to one of my many concerns relating to their unproven raw food feeding claims, yet did not address my request for a source to support the alleged "salmonella is not harmful to dogs" article. If FDA did in fact inform the public that salmonella is not harmful to dogs, I would love to see the source--if not, I would urge FDA take action against We Feed Raw to correct the discrepancy and remove it from their document. For a company that sells raw food to potentially thousands of people for pet consumption, as a dog lover and science driven individual, I find this extremely reckless and dangerous and would hope FDA agrees.

EON-372395	11/30/2018 9:52	Purina Pro Plan Savor shredded lamb & rice	This is related to Purina Pro Plan Savor Shredded Lamb & Rice food. We had the food for a couple of weeks, and we had been feeding it to our dog, (b) (6). We keep the food in a plastic bin designed to hold dog food inside the home. Last night I saw a particularly large piece of shredded lamb in the food so I broke it in half so (b) (6) wouldn't inhale it too fast and choke himself. Upon breaking it open, I saw what looked like a tiny worm or maybe some kind of adolescent maggot. It was alive. I called my partner into the room, and we broke open several other pieces of shredded lamb and found the insects in them, too. There were no holes in any of these pieces. The only indicator that a worm would be inside was some kind of white paste looking stuff. It's like the worms/maggots were formed inside the lamb pieces during production.

Was diagnosed with congestive heart failure secondary to dilated cardiomyopathy at that time. She had been fed Zignature Kangaroo and Lentil diet for food sensitivity. At the time of discharge, she was switched from Zignature kangaroo diet to Royal Canin HP. She was started on lasix, pimobendan, benazepril and spironolactone (heart failure therapy) at that time. She was also started on taurine supplementation (though her plasma levels were normal). Most recent recheck was in September 2018. Recheck echo showed improving systolic function and left-sided cardiomegaly. Her heart failure was clinically well controlled at that time, so her lasix dose was decreased.	4	Years	Shepherd Dog - German	Dog	33.8	Kilogram

I advised Purina and, per their request, sent a couple photos of the packaging and contaminant, while I waited for Purina to send me a container and label to return the can and contaminant. Note, the can had only minimal damage, so I do not believe it was tamped with. I was not originally not going to report this to the FDA because I didn't want to damage Purina's reputation. However, I had to contact Purina 3 times to try to get an address to return the can and contaminant to them. This may be early dilated cardiomyopathy, but he is unlikely to be symptomatic from this mild change. Dilated cardiomyopathy is a disease characterized by weakening of the heart muscle and dilation of the heart chambers. As the disease progresses, it can lead to congestive heart failure (fluid in the lungs causing shortness of breath and cough). Abnormal heart rhythms are common and can result in sudden death. Most commonly this is an inherited disease (this would be very uncommon in a Cavalier), though it can occur secondary to a deficiency in an amino acid called taurine. Recently, a connection between certain diets usually marketed as "grain free" and dilated cardiomyopathy has been established. Since (b) (6) has been fed one of the diets in question, this is a consideration in him.	1	Years	Spaniel - King Charles Cavalier	Dog	8.2	Kilogram
EON-371904	11/26/2018 10:24	Acana Pork and Squash	Patient was seen by primary vet on 11/2/18 after owners friend's pet was diagnosed with taurine deficient dilated cardiomyopathy and owner believed that (b) (6) had been breathing similarly to the friends dog for several months. Thoracic radiographs were taken at that time and then a thoracic ultrasound on 11/6/18 showed mediastinal fat, small amount of pleural effusion, and heart enlargement. Patient was then referred to our clinic for an echocardiogram which showed dilated cardiomyopathy and congestive heart failure. Since patient was on a grain free diet it was recommended that he have taurine levels checked so the blood work was sent off to (b) (6) Amino Acids Lab. Results came back on 11/16/18 low with a plasma taurine level of 9 and whole blood level of 82. At recheck with the cardiology team the congestive heart failure had resolved but the patient hasn't been on taurine supplementation and new diet long enough to confirm if the DCM is reversing since starting supplementation.	3	Years	Retriever - Golden	Dog	32	Kilogram

EON-371872	11/25/2018 21:52	Taste of the Wild Sierra Mountain Canine Recipe Roasted Lamb	We switched our dog's food to Taste of the Wild a couple of months ago. On the first bag she did fine so we bought a second bag. After being on the second bag of food she started having diarrhea with extreme urgency. I assumed she had gotten into something and so we took her to the vet, got her a special GI diet sprinkled with probiotics for 3 days, and antibiotics for a couple of weeks. While on the antibiotics she still had soft stool, but was overall much better. A couple days of being done with the antibiotics the diarrhea and urgency returned. There is no doubt in my mind that the food is causing it because we have been watching her closely and she has not gotten into anything. This new food is the only change in her diet.	6	Years	Shepherd Dog - German	Dog	90	Pound

He has been on grain free food most of his life and had full body radiographs before switching to Acana brand and his heart and lungs were normal. 3 view chest radiographs were performed and seen was an enlarged heart with fluid build up in the lungs. I assisted with the echocardiogram with the cardiologist, that is used in at several different practices all over the (b) (6) , and (b) (6) was diagnosed with moderate dilated cardiomyopathy and mild mitral valve regurgitation. During the echocardiogram I was asked what food (b) (6) was on. I told him he had been on Acana grain free for about a year. He said he has recently seen multiple cases of taurine deficient DCM in not breed or age exclusive, and almost all the cases were on Acana brand food. Once switch to new food and taurine supplements all showed significant, if not complete, improvement. After a few days of being on Purina Proplan and taurine supplements he was showing great improvement. He has now been on it for 2 weeks and has more energy than he has in a long time and acts more like a puppy. The taurine test that was sent to (b) (6) came back as being low and an echocardiogram will be repeated in 3-6 months. EON-371674	11/21/2018 17:56	Blue Buffalo Life Protection Formula Adult Chicken with Brown Rice	I purchased Blue Buffalo Adult Chicken and Rice 30 pound bag at Petsmart in (b) (6) on 10-10-2018. It's the exact same food we've been feeding our dog for 5 years. On Tuesday, 10-16-2018 we opened the new bag and began feeding it to our dog. By Wednesday evening, 10-17-2018, our dog began experiencing diarrhea. We thought she had just eaten something that didn't agree with her. The diarrhea continued into Wednesday night but she seemed better by Thursday morning. Thursday morning, 10-18-2018, she was acting normally so we gave her a reduced portion of the Blue Buffalo food. By Thursday evening the diarrhea restarted. We took her off of her food for 24 hours in hopes of giving her tummy time to calm down. Friday night, 10-19-2018, after not experiencing any more diarrhea, we again gave her a reduced portion of the new bag of Blue Buffalo. By Saturday morning, 10-20-2018, the diarrhea had restarted with a vengeance and she was now vomiting. We took her straight to our vet, who diagnosed her with food poisoning from the bag of Blue Buffalo dog food. We were advised to throw away the bag of food immediately. We did not throw away the bag of food and do still, in fact, have it in our possession, but have not fed her another morsel from it. While the vet was examining our dog on the initial visit on 10-20-2018, the vet noted that due to the amount of diarrhea and intestinal upset our sweet dog experienced, her anal glands had become very full. The vet was concerned about infection setting in from the bacteria associated with the food poisoning and ordered antibiotics in an effort to stop any infection that may have started as a result. In addition, our dog was dehydrated from the vomiting and diarrhea and required two subcutaneous IVs of fluids. To give our dog's intestines time to heal, the vet also prescribed Hills Prescription ID wet dog food. It took several weeks of having our dog, (b) (6), on the prescription Hill's ID dog food before her intestines settled down enough for us to try to restart food. Unfortunately, her system was still not ready for regular dog food and she began experiencing diarrhea again. The vet determined her intestines weren't quite ready for full fat dog food and it would be necessary to ease her back onto dry dog food. The vet prescribed Hill's Prescription W/D food (a food with more fat than Hill's ID but less	6	Years	Terrier (unspecified)	Dog	29	Pound

			prescribed Hill s Prescription W/D food (a food with more fat than Hill s ID but less than regular dry dog food) to give her system time to build back into a regular fatty dog food diet. Unfortunately, despite the vet's attempt to prevent infection from developing in her anal glands from the severe diarrhea from the tainted Blue Buffalo dog food, a pretty severe infection has developed. (b) (6) vet, after expressing her glands a couple of times and giving her a course of antibiotics over the past month, determined that her anal gland infection has progressed to such a degree that our best option was to manually clear the infection. A procedure was performed on 11-21-2018 to irrigate her anal glands and inject them directly with antibiotics. While performing the procedure, the vet found her anal glands were full of infection along with blood clots. Due to the level of infection present, the vet also put her on another 7 day course of antibiotics. She will be rechecked in 3 weeks to see if the infection has finally cleared. While our dog has had some issues with full anal glands in the past, she did not have a current, visible issue with her glands until after she ingested the tainted dog food and the severe diarrhea and vomiting began.

			edema. Within the right ventricle, there are few foci of adipocyte deposition, however these areas lack associated myofiber degeneration. The left and right ventricular myocardium is rarely infiltrated by low numbers of lymphocytes and histiocytes. The endocardium is diffusely expanded by some degree of fibrosis; the left atrium most severely affected with spicules of mineral enmeshed in bundles of fibrous collagen. Given the clinical findings and histologic features, the cardiac changes are most compatible with attenuated wavy fiber type dilated cardiomyopathy (DCM). The cause of sudden death in this patient may be attributed to a fatal arrhythmia. Taurine deficiency has linked to DCM in golden retrievers. While the exact etiology is unclear, one study postulated that both genetics and nutrition are contributing factors. [Belanger MC, et al. EON-371481	11/19/2018 18:28	Simply Nourish Grain Free Dog Food, Rachel Ray Grain Free Dog Food	My dog was a rescue. He was given up, not a stray & perfect health. Since he is a mixed breed & our knowledge of mixed we were confident we wouldn't have any health issues & didn't for 2 1/2 years. He was always very active & friendly. About 6 months ago he started to act tired alot, hack & cough. Just not himself. About 3 months ago I took him into the vet where they thought it may be bronchitis, but over night he couldn't stop coughing & foaming at the mouth. I rushed him back to the vet where they said he was in heart failure. I remember seeing a news story of the correlation of grain free dog food & DCM in dogs that would never get it. Bottom line I thought I was being a good pet owner by giving him this from the day we adopted him with was exactly 3 years ago. Instead of the spunky active dog he was hes more like an old man & on 2 heart meds for the rest of his life.	6	Years	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	14	Pound

On April 6, 2018, I brought him to my primary vet, Countryside Veterinary Clinic for a check up. The vet examined him and ran a blood test. He said he was anaplasmosis positive and his platelets were very low (b) (6) had been treated for anaplasmosis the previous year). The vet was concerned about his platelet level and he suggested I bring him immediately to Tufts (b) (6). (b) (6) was examined by 2 additional vets at Tufts (b) (6) and they thought the platelet levels were due to the anaplasmosis and put him on a course of Doxycyclene and discharged him. Late the night of the 7th he seemed worse and I thought he had blood on his penis. Early on the morning of April 8th, I took him to Tufts (b) (6). He was examined and I was asked if anyone had noted a heart issue. I said no and stated 4 other vets had listened to his heart in the previous 2 days. The vet took him for further tests and came back and said she suspected he had DCM. A cardiologist was called in and he diagnosed (b) (6) with DCM, congestive heart failure and atrial fibrillation. He was admitted to the hospital and he was set up with a holter. He was put on many cardiac meds and discharged 2 days later. After 5 days of no appetite even when given anti nausea meds, the doxy was discontinued. A taurine test was requested and came back as 114 plasma. The cardiologist asked which food we had been feeding and I told him Natural Balance Limited Ingredient Grain Free dry food, 3 different flavors...Sweet Potato &amp; Venison, Sweet Potato &amp; Buffalo and Sweet Potato &amp; Fish. I was told to immediately stop the grain free foods and to start supplementing him with 1,000 mg of taurine twice a day. In addition, he takes diltazem, enalapril, vetmedin, digoxin, furosamide and spironolactone. The cardiologist thought we would have 6 months with (b) (6) The congestive heart failure resolved by the next visit I believe 2 weeks later. In July he had a recheck and the doctor was surprised his heart had decreased in size and his contractility had improved. The cardiologist was sure if this was due to the diet change, taurine supplements or the cardiac meds...or a combo of the 3. Yesterday, November 13th, (b) (6) had another checkup with the cardiologist. He has remained consistent with his July echo. We are continuing with the 20 pill per day regiment and a grain inclusive diet.	3	Years	Irish Wolfhound	Dog	175	Pound

EON-371266	11/16/2018 14:00	Purina Alpo Chop House Rotisserie Chicken in Gourmet Gravy with stamped on bottom of the can (she ate from) Best By: Aug 2020 82211157 L6CW31310	About 3 to 4 hours after feeding <sup>(b) (6)</sup> my dog Purina Alpo Chop House Canned Rotisserie Chicken in Gourmet Gravy she had an episode of panting/breathing very heavily with her tongue hanging out the longest I'd ever seen it & drooling, and her eyes very squinty looking like someone drugged up after surgery with them watering, and her nose draining/dripping like clear water faucet and running a fever and very disoriented walking in circles & standing in corners & staring at walls & doors in a confused manor. I asked my son and his wife what was wrong with her and they said we don't know we just thought she looked like she was having a panic/anxiety attack or something and we thought it might have been due to you and Dad being gone at the same time and her not used to that or something. They tried to get her to drink some water but she wouldn't drink. I said no she's Never been this way when we were gone at the same time. Later that night she was being very lethargic in my lap. She Couldn't drink through the night as I sat up with her so I had to sorta force water with a medicine syringe to try to keep her hydrated & hoping & praying ALL night my poor baby girl didn't die. I stayed up with her from 7 p.m. to 6:30 a.m. until I couldn't stay awake any longer. Then after a few hours sleep I made calls until I found a vet that could fit her in on Saturday for an evaluation. It didn't click that it was the food for certain at first & I didn't mention the food to the vet as an issue initially because I checked the can and it was in date so I thought it was okay. After vet visit <sup>(b) (6)</sup> got hungry & she licked gravy a little from the Alpo can food & got squinty eyes again with some panting for a little while but I thought could be medicine vet gave her cause they said it could make her sedated. She eventually slept a lot after medicines (Antibiotic, Pain med, Inflammation med). Then Sunday 11-11-18 she ate a few bites with gravy again from Alpo can food & her eyes were messed up again as well as breathing. Then I researched internet and OH MY MY MY the consumer affairs complaints on Alpo then I Definitely thought it's this food and my baby will Never, Never Never have this again. I can Absolutely say the day <sup>(b) (6)</sup> started exhibiting these symptoms I stated previously she was FINE from about 9 a.m until about 3 p.m. before I gave her a couple ounces or so of that darn Alpo I left her eating and ran out for about 4 hours and came back home to find her in that Horrible, Pitiful Condition. Monday I called the	10	Years	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	22	Pound vet again & informed that I had narrowed down to the Alpo can food as a problem. Late that evening the vet called me back & she said they had no capability to test the food there and that I could report to FDA or call the company on the can. We discussed problems I had discovered with others using Alpo can food I had found researching on internet & how I saw it with my own eyes the problems that arose in my dog after eating or licking the food in a very, very small proportioned amount over the weekend twice. The Doctor then mentioned the problems arising recently this year with the euthanasia drug being found in some foods and I mentioned that this food also has Wheat Gluten which has had problems as well for other pet owner's pets as I had found researching. Tuesday I called FDA at 888-463-6332 and told gentleman issue & he told me to call 404-253-1169. I then called & spoke to (b) (6) informing her of problems and she said someone would call me back. Later a (b) (6) (not sure if spelled right) called me from 404-790-4456 and took information & said someone would probably call me back and that she would do a report too. I told her I would do a report on your website as well. I will call number on the can to report next when I get a chance.

EON-371201	11/15/2018 17:16	Earthborn Holistic Meadow Feast with Lamb Meal Grain Free	I have been feeding my Basenji, (b) (6) Earthborn Dog Food for 4-5 years. On the evening of Tuesday 11/13/18 she began exhibiting extremely concerning symptoms such as heavy and labored breathing, mental disorientation, weakness to the point of not being able to stand, and refused all treats/dry food/wet food. After monitor these symptoms for approximately 1 hour I took her to a local emergency vet (as it was 8pm and my regular vet was closed). Upon arrival I was told that my dog was hypothermic and xrays were performed. The vet performed a physical exam and found that my dog had a new heart murmur, this murmur is believed to be new onset as it has never been heard previously and my dog had her yearly check up 5 months ago. Xrays showed an enlarged heart. The vet said that a normal heart can get to 10.7, my dog was at 11.5. The vet also diagnosed her with pulmonary edema and possible pleural effusion. She was placed on 2 heart medications and Lasix. Before I took her home that night they gave her a large shot of Lasix to start getting the fluid off of her. When I went to my regular vet first thing the next morning, they called in a cardiac specialist who performed an ECHO of her heart. As a result of the findings on this test, the vet diagnosed my dog with Dilated Cardiomyopathy. After discussing my dog's health history and diet, the cardiac vet determined that the DCM was caused by the grain free diet I have fed my dogs for 4-5 years. The vet reported that this condition usually only effects large breed dogs and especially is rare for Basenjjs. We immediately switched my dog's diet and also pulled a Taurine lab because we are concerned that her levels may be too low due to her diet. The vet also stated that my dog's new heart murmur has been caused by the DCM, so it is also due to the food she has been on. I would love to be contacted if there is any additional information I can provide that would assist in helping inform the public that this dog food can be life threatening. My dog has never had any major health issues in her life and I almost lost her the other day due to a food that was promoted to be healthy. My order contained 3 cases, one of which I used before I noticed in case 2 that there was mold growing on the plastic tray holding the tins. Looking very closely at the tins, I noticed multiple lids are punctured - some of the punctures are VERY hard to see with the naked eye and I wouldn't have noticed them at all had I not seen the mold in the box. Last night, we fed our cats from the mold containing case before noticing the mold. Today, one of my cats is very obviously not well as she is refusing food. We are watching her closely today and will bring her to our vet today/tomorrow if she doesn't start eating again today. My husband theorized that there must have been an accident in packing which caused the tins in that case to become damaged. To be sure, I opened the last case we have from this order. There is no mold inside that box, BUT, upon very close inspection, there are tiny puncture holes in the tin lids in this case as well. I would NEVER have noticed these holes had I not been looking for them with my magnifying glasses. I called the RAYNE customer service line right away and a helpful representative happily offered to replace the damaged cases with a new 24-CAN case of the diet. She told me the company is transitioning to cans for all Rayne wet food. This tells me the company is aware of an issue with the current packaging... which lead me to ask: why is RAYNE clinical nutrition still selling the defective product in tins/trays? Likely, they have old product left in stock, but I have GRAVE CONCERN with a decision to keep selling product could make customers' pets very sick or even kill	5	Years	Abyssinian cat	Cat	10	Pound

She started to vomit after her meals (mostly bile, sometimes food) and had bouts of diarrhea. We had a radiologist ultrasound her on 11/12 and he noted that there is evidence of gastrointestinal paralytic ileus, a coarse liver suggesting hepatopathy and bilateral low normal adrenal volume. He recommended lab work to further evaluate, which was performed. The results that came back showed very high liver values. All reports can be submitted as proof if needed. The last year of his life after his heart failure diagnosis he was given FreshPet refrigerated dog food because I wanted him to be happy.	After the thyroid medicine didn't help his hair grow back, I decided to put (b) (6) on a grain free diet, thinking maybe he had an allergy of some kind to grains? And to just ensure his overall health was the best it could be (or so I assumed based on advertising etc, that grain free is healthiest for dogs). My dog very (seemingly) rapidly developed heart problems within a couple years of being grain free. He was seen regularly and the vet never mentioned any signs of heart murmur. He developed a cough all of a sudden and was taken to a different vet after the cough didn't go away over time (about a month). The new vet immediately recognized a heart murmur and suggested a chest x-ray. Once the x-ray was completed it showed he had a very enlarged heart and was in congestive heart failure. He was given a very short time to live initially, but managed to pull through and make it a year almost to the day. I read an article that the FDA was currently investigating a link between grain free dog food and DCM so that is why I figured I would submit this...just to contribute information in case there is a link. I just don't want any one else to have to lose a pet like I did if it can be avoided.	11	Years	Spitz - German Pomeranian	Dog	12	Pound

It showed a subjective increase in sphericity of his heart, as well as mild systolic dysfunction compared with last year. ACK!!! His whole blood taurine level at U.C. Davis was 226 in September 2018. I had scheduled echocardiograms for (b) (6) and my other two Goldens out of an abundance of caution after two (b) (6) and his littermate brother) tested below 250 nmol/ml for taurine in whole blood). I'm glad I did. My veterinary cardiologist is (b) (6) (Cardiology) of (b) (6) At last week's echocardiogram, he drew blood for CBC, chemistry, a repeat of the taurine test with paired samples, a full tick-borne disease panel, and thyroid tests. That test will be repeated this week. I never purposely fed a "grain-free" food or an "exotic protein" food. I'm a (b) (6) and I believe in science and common sense. HOWEVER, after FDA's investigation was announced, I noted that some of the commercial food I was feeding (b) (6) (which I thought was perfectly conventional) met the FDA's description of "suspect diets". In addition, I had been giving my three Goldens a probiotic from Purina -- their Fortiflora product -- as a routine part of feeding after a period in which all three dogs had loose stool and diarrhea. I added the Fortiflora to their food for a period of over a year. I think the current thinking on this issue is that it's multifactorial, I wanted to mention first that I had added the Fortiflora and that while I didn't purposely choose a grain-free food (high in legumes), I've also found that the food itself has added "probiotics". I was surprised to see that. Now, I wonder if my accidental food choice for him, plus my "probiotic" supplement, changed something in how his body processed the taurine precursors and dietary taurine. In addition, he's definitely an "easy-keeper", eating nowhere near the amount of food advised on the bag. After his "equivocal" taurine level in mid-September 2018, I stopped feeding Fortiflora to all three Goldens. Their stool is perfectly fine, perhaps even better. I changed (b) (6) diet from Fromm to Purina ProPlan Sport 30/20 at the same time. Please do get in touch if there's any further information you require or that you might provide me. Obviously, I hope this is diet-related and can be reversed.	3	Years	Retriever - Golden	Dog	80	Pound

In September, it was noted that (b) (6) was not eating all of her food and was acting more lethargic. She was also drinking more water and urinating more frequently. Bloodwork showed hypercalcemia. A parathyroid panel was sent out on 9/21 with the following results: PTH was 0 and iCa 1.75 (1.25-1.45). Her primary veterinarian recommended that she discontinue all treats and feed exclusively her dog dry food diet in case the hypercalcemia was due to Vitamin D in the treats. They rechecked her bloodwork on 10/31 which showed little change - Ca 12.5 (8.4-11.8) iCa 1.61 (1.07-1.4). The owner got an email from Chewy on Saturday (11/3) about a recall for the Nutrisca Chicken and Chickpea due to Vitamin D toxicity. My next dog was pregnant and kept throwing up. In a week her puppies were born. She got a temperature and vomited all her food and had severe water diarrhea. She had to be on an iv then Metronidazole. I have four others that I treated myself for diarrhea and also two others were vomiting off and on. Had another with an irritable colon that we brought in to our vet for blood work and ultrasounds. All they found was a thickened small intestine from irritation. We had an extra bag of Victor food that my friend picked up and fed it to her Boxer. Her Boxer then began vomiting. She took her off the bag of food i gave her and it took two days to stop vomiting. There seems to be something wrong with the food, it appears to be the common denominator. Our golden Retrievers affected range in age 5 months to 8 years. Dating back last year we had one with a severe uterus infection and irritable colon. She had ten puppies and only one survived. EON-370318	11/5/2018 22:16	Nutrisca Grain Free Chicken and Chickpea Recipe	On Oct 12, 2018 I received a new bag of Nutrisca Chicken and Chickpea dog food with a best buy date of 8/20. I began to feed this new bag on or after 10/15/2018. I noticed my dogs drinking more over the next few days. On 10/21/2018, my smallest dog began to reluctantly eat his food. On 10/22/2018, he ate and vomited the food and refused to eat. I allowed his stomach to rest, thinking he was associating the food with being sick, and started him on a diet of chicken, rice, and pumpkin, which he ate but still not with enthusiasm. I continued to try reintroducing his food, but he would not eat and by 10/24/2018 evening, he appeared to be losing weight and began to stop drinking. On 10/25/2018, he was taken to the vet found to be dehydrated, and was given sub-q fluids throughout the day to rehydrate him. His calcium levels were also increased from his previously well within normal values, but this was attributed to the dehydration and he was sent home. He appeared to improve with a diet of food designed for sensitive stomach and was reintroduced to his normal food on 10/31/2018. By 11/3/2018, he was again becoming less active and lethargic. On 11/3/2018 at midnight, I received the email from Chewy that the food he was eating on a regular basis for the last year had been recalled. The food was immediately stopped, and he was taken to the vet again today 11/5/2018 with lethargy, decreased appetite. The vet has recommended he be monitored at home while off the tainted food for any returning sign of clinical symptoms of Vitamin D toxicity from being reintroduced to it two days ago.	22	Months	Dachshund - Miniature	Dog	10.9	Pound

He was lethargic , he was shedding, he was dehydrated. His small intestine was irritated along with the portion of his pancreas that connects to the small intestine. I have vet reports and lab reports for this. Both my cats seemed to start getting better. I started to feed them their normal diet. They eat Nine Lives super supper. I have different expiration dates on several different cans because I always buy the whole lot of super supper flavor. They had began to show symptoms again. My one cat started salivating and didn't want to eat. His sugar was again high after it had been lowering. My other cat had started to have a smell on his breath and was lethargic again. Then they seem to start to get better again. So then this morning I tried to give them a can of 9 Lives super supper with the expiration date of September 5th 2020. My cat's smelled it and walked away and would not eat it. So then I dump the food out of their bowls into a separate tupperware container, I cleaned their bowls and proceeded to give them nine lives super supper with the expiration date of July 7th 2020 which they both immediately started eating after smelling. The oldest dog in our home vomitted his entire morning meal a few hours after eating yesterday. The food wasn't digested and the kibbles were soft but very much intact. One day later, today, while scooping the food I noticed the bugs. Upon having bought the food I saw one live worm but assumed the small mealworm looking worm had come from the outside of the bag. By 1000, (b) (6) had thrown up and was defecating all over the place. He started breathing hard and his abdomen was distended. At approx. 1100, cinch was no longer able to stand or drink water. He collapsed in front of his water bowl and my husband took him to the emergency vet clinic. They ran blood tests and x-rays and found that his liver was enlarged, he had high red blood cells, and he was developing free fluid in the abdomen. The vet was thinking that he may be having a severe reaction to the new food since there was nothing else new for him and it came on so quickly after eating the new food. By approx. 1830, his condition was deteriorating and the vet called to ask if we wanted a specialist to come in and take a look. We agreed and the specialist came in and ultrasounded his liver which showed severe inflammation and fluid in the abdomen. They were attempting to obtain samples of the fluid when his heart stopped. EON-369518	10/27/2018 16:44	Pet Pride Everyday Essentials for Happy Pets Chicken Jerky Treats fro Dogs	I purchased the dog treats October 15, 2018. On the 17th the dogs began throwing up (Both on the same day) and that Friday, the 19th, I took them to the vet for IV fluids. At the time they tested blood, stools, and temperature. Dogs were slightly dehydrated so they stayed the night and were given fluids. I picked them up the next day, they still did not eat. They were both lathargic and I called the vet again on (b) (6) from work and came home to one of them dead and the other convulsing. I took both to the vet. They sent off dead body to be tested and kept the the other on IVs. They sent the dead body to the lab in (b) (6) In the meantime (b) (6) (the alive one) stayed at the vet on antibiotics and IV fluids. They checked her white blood cell count and kidneys daily. Both seemed to get better with meds, then started to get worse. Results came back from the lab on the dead dog. Acute kidney failure from toxins in digestive system. The only thing NEW and something they BOTH had was this dog treat which has much research shown that it's harmful to dogs. We still have the treats and are having them tested. We were told today that (b) (6) would not get better. We brought her home with an IV at home and antibiotics to inject. She has been at the vet since the (b) (6), today is the 27th of October. We are extremely upset. We have contacted kroger.com, they are the only company listed on the dog treats. After 5 days, we have not heard anything after the message said we'd be contacted in 48 hours. My dog is allergic to grains and when feed grains, does have issues including those listed above when she eats grain. She has been on a no grain diet for years, eating primarily raw or cooked meat. I got the Din-O-Vite to supplement her food. Prior to using Din O Vite, she was in good health, little shedding, bad breath, but no other issues. They have very precise measuring and feeding directions for the first two weeks or so. Right away, I noticed that she was shedding more, her eyes were watery, and the skin on her legs was red and inflamed. Our thought was that she was just getting used to the product, nothing major, just some superficial issues. Her breath did improve. By day 8, she had lost nearly all the fur on the rear half of her body, her ears were leaking, her eyes were leaking, and on that afternoon, I came in to the house and she was laying on the floor panting, completely lethargic. I immediately rushed her to the vet where they did blood test and x-rays. She did show signs of kidney and liver issues. When discussing what had changed in her environment with the vet, I mentioned Dinovite, she said "Get her off that crap immediately, that's the problem". I took her home, she wasn't eating, we had to feed her pedalyte by eye dropper. I would have to carry her to take her outside. After about a day and a half, she began to get batter-- least walking around and going outside on her own. Today, she is about 90% of what she was before we started Dinovite.	14	Years	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	80	Pound

EON-369261	10/24/2018 16:32	Sweet Potato & Venison Formula / Natural Balance/ LIS /	As a puppy, (b) (6) had itchy skin. We gave him the Natural Venison Dry and Can and he was great. This year, he started vomiting large amounts with foam. It was often undigested, but not each time. We believe that the canned food is causing the problem. He is only on dry. We did take him to the vet and the only thing he has been treated for is a UTI. His blood tests were all within normal range. He is an indoor dog and I mean all the time. He uses a potty pad in a section of a garage for him, always supervised. I am an RVT and have ruled out anything else that may have contributed to the vomiting. He has been to the vet too. He does not vomit when we stop feeding canned food. I went online to research recalls. I found that many people have had problems with the dog food, including the Venison formula. That is why I am contacting you. I really think there is something wrong or different with the Natural Balance food. Sidenote: My cats have had Natural Balance for over ten years. Over the last year, I had to stop feeding some flavors due to their vomiting and diarrhea. One fo the cats had itchy skin and licked her fur off. She was better after I stopped feeding the dry and also stopped the Ultra flavor. The only safe flavors are chicken and turkey canned. If problems occur for two species and multiple pets after ten years, it is time for the FDA to look into this. All my pets are seen by the vet regularly, indoor only and parasite-free.	11	Years	Chihuahua	Dog	19	Pound

His cough worsened on September 25, 2018, and he was diagnosed with possible pneumonia and started on Clavamox. After 1.5 days, his appetite declined, he became lethargic, he began losing weight, and his cough showed no improvement. On October 7, 2018, he was referred to an ER hospital in congestive heart failure with ascites. He was started on Pimobendan and a furosemide. He then presented to our ER on October 10, 2018 for continued congestive heart failure and ascites; an abdominocentesis was performed, his Pimobendan and furosemide were increased, and he was started on spironolactone and enalapril. EON-369259	10/24/2018 16:31	Purina One Smart blend chicken and rice formula	I purchased a 14kg bag of Purina One Smart Blend Chicken and Rice Dry dog food from Walmart. (b) (6) and fed it to my dog for over a week before noticing that the bag of food was infested with some form of worms or maggots. The worms were very camouflage to the color of the food and my dog had been eating it for over a week. During that time I noticed that my dog had been vomiting off and on and I wasn't sure what was wrong with him. But after looking at his food more carefully I noticed the worms and a white substance throughout his food. I now have him switched to another food and so far he's been fine. I emailed Purina and they wanted some more information and haven't got back to me yet. I also messaged Walmart. (b) (6) and they have applied a 10.00 evoucher to my account. I will no longer be feeding my dog that food and I will have to contact his vet to see if he should be on treatment. The best before date on bag was November 2019..I'm very concerned that there could be more dogs eating contaminated food and I think the product should be recalled.	2	Years	Boxer (German Boxer)	Dog	76	Pound

There was no other food in the bin, we rinse it between refills and it was dry before filling. Woke on Saturday morning to find many meal worms crawling up the kitchen wall, traced it back to the food that was left in the bowl from night before and the food in the bin was all completely speckled with meal worms and casings. I contacted 800# on bag, turns out it is a Pet Smart brand and it was their customer service number, they initiated gift card to be sent to me for inconvenience, but asked for no product info - I insisted they take lot code information. I contacted store and they said food had to be in the bag to return, so we took from bin and replaced, brought bag back and received a refund. They did not examine nor remove other product from the shelves or match for same lot codes. My dog only ate a small portion and had no adverse effects. After he developed some severe itching, the store recommended we switch to the GO dog food brand since it's a limited diet. Our dog was on this for about 2.5 years. Mid (b) (6) he developed a bad cough. We brought him in to see the vet and they found that he had severe DCM in addition to sever mitral valve disease. He had x rays, ECGs, blood tests, and was prescribed 30 pills per day to try and get it under control. The fluid in his lungs was increasing, he stopped eating, his organs began shutting down, and 10 days later we had to put him down because he was drowning on the inside and all his organs were failing. The vet mentioned it was likely the Taurine deficiency due to the dog food he was being fed. This was very upsetting since the local specialty pet food store had told us to feed him this food. I noticed through the summer that she did not tolerate exercise well. When we adopted her, she was eating Farmina N&D pumpkin for onemeal and raw for the other. We transitioned her to Kirkland Nature's Domain Salmon and Sweet Potato. She was quite itchy on this, so we put her on Kirkland Organic Chicken and Pea. Her exercise intolerance became increasingly apparent. A ECG was run and came back as tall R waves. Radiographs came back with mildly enlarged heart. At this time, I began supplementing with 250mg taurine supplement BID. An echocardiogram was scheduled, the results of which was moderate to marked left ventricular dilation with mild mitral regurgitation and mild right ventricular dilation with no tricuspid regurgitation. EON-368351	10/14/2018 4:24	Nutro Feed Clean	I have contacted Nutro and filed a report against the company and the grocery store. I am requesting a recall of the dog food. I purchased Nutro Chicken Brown Rice from (b) (6) on 10/4/2018. After eating Nutro food for approximately three days my dog began to lose interest in the food. On Wednesday 10/10 she vomited twice, stopped eating and produced loose stools. She now has lackluster energy and sleeps most of the day. I missed time from work, and took her to her vet for an examination and testing. She was provided with medication and after I prepared a soft meal for her she ate sparingly on 10/11. Today is 10/13 and she has not eaten since, even though I have prepared her normal bland soft diet, she barely drinks water and has no energy. As of this writing at 11:20PM she has resumed vomiting. My primary concern is my precious dog (b) (6) and I will pursue each and every avenue to make her whole from this alarming experience. I selected Nutro food after working late and rushing home from work and I am so sorry that I did. I did not see the food on the recall list but after she became ill and I was looking into the reviews, I was distraught at finding so many other reports have been recently filed under the same conditions. I am requesting a full refund on the food, and the full cost for treatment and medication to restore my 2 year old Whoodle who is otherwise in perfect health. In addition to this complaint, I have filed a complaint with Nutro and contacted Pavilions. I will contact each and every agency required investigate this food, remove it from the shelves and take care of the damage to my dog, I am enraged that my dog has experienced a health emergency as a diet result of the poor quality of Nutro food	2.5	Years		Other	13	Pound
EON-368349	10/14/2018 2:12	Canine Carryouts Beef and Cheese Flavor	Approximately 4pm, I gave (b) (6) a canine carry out treat, beef and cheese flavor. I had given this type a treat today because he was out of all of the other type of treats. Around 9:30 I left to go pickup my dinner and when I got back around 10 (b) (6) was legarthic, completely off balance, unable to use his back legs, blank stare, still, mouth open, and head bobbing. I found vomit on the floor and he is still recovering now 3 hours later. The same incident happened in Jan. of 2017 after eating the same treat. He was taken to the vet and had elevated kidney and thyroid enzymes. They were fine a week later, and he recovered at home with pain and nausea medication. I considered the treats as being a factor due to the vet saying he could possible have consumed toxins, but I was not sure and did not buy the treats until a week ago. Seeing my dope confused, disoriented and i. pain on a Saturday night has been the most agonizing thing I've dealt with. I felt as this could have been prevented had I not given him the treat. They diagnosed her with heart disease. She is now on heart medicine twice a day which seems to be helping her. EON-367812	10/8/2018 1:16	TEMPTATIONS Classic Treats for Cats- Catnip Treats	My cat is active, healthy, overly friendly, and energetic. He loves his wet food and eats every last morsel at mealtime. A few months ago I bought Temptations Treats Catnip flavor for him. After just a few treats over the course of a couple days he began to show obsessive compulsive behavior. His personality changed from social and happy to aloof and disengaged. His entire existence focused on the treats, alternating between isolating himself and meowing at the drawer the treats were in. It got to the point where he refused to eat his regular food. He was lethargic, non social, and started drinking water which he rarely ever did. His health rapidly declined. It was extreme enough for me to google temptation treat addiction (which I felt crazy doing) until I came across 800 comments of similar stories on consumer affairs. Nothing else was changed in my cats daily life. No schedule change, no litter change, no house changes, nothing. The temptation treats catnip have something addicting and toxic added to them. Temptation treats catnip need to be recalled and investigated. My vet confirmed and said she has heard of temptation treat addiction leading to crystals in urine and renal failure. If I had not googled it out of curiosity my cat would probably be dead. Too many similar experiences for this not to be checked out. Thank you for reading	3	Years	Domestic Shorthair	Cat	15	Pound
EON-367810	10/7/2018 23:48	Fromm Four Star Salmon a la Veg dog food	After fetching tennis balls at the park, (b) (6) had a big drink of water at home and then collapsed. He had difficulty standing and his back legs seemed to not support him. His breathing was labored and we took him to the emergency vet. He was found to have fluid around his heart. The vet drained it but the blood continued to immediately fill again and his breathing was very labored. The recommendation was to euthanize him at that time, about 4 hours from the time that he initially collapsed. We have read articles about Dilated Cardiomyopathy (DCM) in dogs related to diet. We don't know that (b) (6) had DCM but wanted to report his sudden death. At his annual vet checkup in April 2018, he was found to be an extremely fit and healthy dog with no known health issues or concerns. We were feeding him Fromm 4 Star Salmon a la Veg food two times per day since he was about a year old.	7	Years	Retriever - Golden	Dog	57	Pound

I only switched one of my cats back to the food that they had had before the new food that was purchased three days prior. The other two cats started to vomit the new few on the third day. They are all currently recovering from the new food that I had purchased three days ago. The cat that had shown signs earliest, is now almost back to his normal healthy self. EON-367778	10/6/2018 22:36	Pork Chomps Large Bacon Flavored Rawhide-Free Bone Treats	I believe you received am email from a (b) (6) maybe a week ago discussing an issue with a product of yours? I am the friend with the friendly dogs but I'm not here to discuss what she was talking about. I believe the treats were some kind of bacon flavored rawhide free chew. I liked that they weren't rawhide but I was curious on how the treats were supposed to break down if swallowed? How long do they keep that wet leathery texture? Do they eventually dissolve of sorts and pieces begin to break away? I only ask because I believe my Rottweiler is having issues passing a piece she swallowed. I noticed she hasn't been herself the passed few days and I've yet to see her pass her usual piles that she tends to produce. She still has gas and I see tiny amounts still coming out so I know there isn't a complete blockage. I had to resort to getting a glove to go in to investigate and I felt something that was definitely foreign roughly 4 inches in that I believe could possibly be a piece of the treat stuck in there. I'm not pointing fingers or placing any kind of blame because I am not positive that it is the treat. That's just my best guess. Besides it's almost to the end and she isn't in any life threatening danger. Since the treats were rawhide free I believe you guys do make them with the animal's wellbeing in mind. How they break down is my only question and concern? Thank you for your time, (b) (6)

Once the cat had been switched to a renal diet the creatinine levels decreased but are still abnormal. The concern with the food is that it has a false claim for a complete and balanced diet as cats are obligate carnivores and there is no data on feeding trials to indicate levels of protein, calcium and phosphorous are appropriate to maintain a healthy adult cat. The concern is that the food might have led to renal failure.	5	Years	Domestic Longhair	Cat

EON-367621	10/4/2018 14:28	Orijen Regional Red 25lb bag	We moved and couldnt find a store in our new city/state that sold our brand of food for our Dog by the Brand Orijen style Regional Red. So we were ordering bags of Amazon . The 1st 3 Bags were fine then the 4th bag we only fed our dog 2 cups staring 9-25-18 1 cup for dinner 1 for morning meal 9-26-18 and he got violently sick with severe vomiting. We contacted Amazon and made a full report with them . Then called the company Orejin. They told us a 3rd party seller from Amazon cant offer a proper storage of their product and to find a supplier under their knowledge . We took our dog to the vet on 9-26-18and he was given a shot to control the vomiting and medication for that to take home. We were only feeding our dog Chicken and rice for the next few days . We found a supplier near our home an purchased a new bag with them of the exact same food. Waited a couple more days and gave him the food 1 cup for dinner 10-1-18 and one cup in the morning 10-2-18 and again he got sick throwing up and this time urinating blood. We took him to the vet again . They did full blood work X-Rays. No cancer , no tumors no issues with his Bladder. The Vet suspects it was the food from the timing of both illnesses were right after consumption . We are instructed to not use it anymore and to remain on chicken and rice with broth for meals for a while . Our dog is not eating at all as of 10-4-18 but is at least drinking water still urinating blood and has had only one bowl movement in past 2 days , very bad diarrhea at the vet . He's pretty weak not very stable walking and sleeping a lot. I just want to leave a documented report thats separate from the Seller from Amazon and the main company .This company use to be out of Canada then moved to the US. There product has had some differences in it since the change. EON-367607	10/4/2018 12:40	California Natural Grain-free Limited Ingredient Diet Lamb Meal Recipe	My dog was diagnosed with dilated cardiomyopathy in June 9th of this year, which I found out after he suddenly developed shortness of breath, bilateral lung crackles and was in severe distress. I took him to the nearest ED, an Xray of the chest showed pulmonary edema, dilated heart and my dog was tachypneic, tachycardic and hypoxemic ~83% O2 saturation. They provided immediate attention, received diuretics, and was started on medications for DCM. He was not on any medications prior to this events, and had all his routine vet check ups including labs and vaccines up to date. Since then there have been at least 4-5 episodes of decompensation, it has been so quickly and unexpected given his excellent state of health prior to all these events. The reason why I am submitting this report is because I was looking for information about a heart disease special diet for him, I found a report about the ongoing investigation about possible grain free dog food associated with DCM. My pet has been on grain free diet for a couple of years after he had bad allergies with other dog foods. After switching him to grain free-lamb diet his allergy completely disappear. For the past 4 years I used the California Natural grain-free lamb dry dog food, which went out of the market around April this year. I still had food until June, and then the event happened. After the event I switch to the Wellness Core RawRev grain-free wild game recipe dry dog food. I am concerned if all of this was related to the grain free diet, given the information I found about prior reports similar to my case. I am also concerned because I still have my pet on grain free food and I would like at least to give him the best at this time to see if there is any improvement and to prevent rapid progression of the DCM as much as I can. I would be glad to provide any further information, and I would like to know if there is any website or vet (specialist) I could get in contact with that could provide any advise at this time.	9	Years	Terrier - Yorkshire	Dog	8.5	Pound

I purchased containers of the blue divine delights at target and a local supermarket, I had no issue with the product and became familiar with it. Recently a pet store opened up near my home, I decided to shop local and purchase my food their. I noticed that the food quality is drastically different than containers purchased prior at different location. Once i opened the tub it looked as if it had mold inside and the food appeared grossly discolored and inconsistent texture. The first 2 times it happened I thought it may have been a fluke but I opened a 3rd tub from the last purchase and the quality was off. My dog was given one tub to eat which he had very little of, he refused to eat it. He did have a loose stool and don't think there was any other effects. EON-367489	10/3/2018 11:40	Tuffy's Gold Lamb and Rice Dog Food	Client had just opened a new bag of Tuffy's Gold Lamb and Rice dog food. She noted after a few days that the dogs did not seem to be eating as much food as normal, and the cats that normally eat some of the dog food were not interested. She took another look at the food and the food reportedly smelled like chemicals. More specifically, a paint chemical smell was described. They then removed the food and replaced with a new brand. At the time of pulling the questionable dog food, the patient started having bloody saliva. The clients thought this was because he had a minor fight with their other small dog over the new dog food and possibly the mouth had been injured. The seemingly mild bleeding continued for about 1 week and seemed to be on and off. The patient presented on 9/19/18 when he could only walk a few feet at a time and was severely anemic. He required a blood transfusion, and bloodwork revealed a severe liver insult with liver values, ALP-1179 and ALT-964. He had been bleeding into his GI tract and lung field and had black, tarry stool on presentation. He had bloody saliva with no visible injury or source of bleeding in his mouth. The bleeding resolved after his blood transfusion on 9/19/18. He remained in the veterinary clinic for 2 more days for care. He improved significantly and has been recovering at home. He continues to improve at this time. A food sample was sent to (b) (6) for GC Mass Spec Screen on 9/24/18. Those results came back negative and further toxin screenings are currently being performed. The client reports that the patient was in good health until the sudden onset of bleeding.	5	Years	Mountain Dog - Bernese	Dog

We were worried and called an emergency vet clinic in order for him to be checked since he was in pain and distress. The dog then vomitted the pet jerky treat he was given and began having seizures. The episode last for about four minutes and he was unresponsive and had difficulty breathing. We had the emergency clinic check on him and they were unable to determine a cause since a full blood panel did not indicate bacterial/viral infection and he was an otherwise healthy dog. Based on the ProCyte Dx Hematology Analyzer the following measurements were highlighted: Platelets were 72 K/μL, Plateletcrit 0.07 %, Phosphorus 2.3 mg/dL, and Amylase 443 U/L. EON-366940	9/26/2018 17:08	Hill's Prescription Diet W/D	For the last few years, I have purchased both dry and canned Hill's Prescription Diet W/D dog food as well as Hill's prescription diet treats. Princess has, up until approximately the last week and half, eagerly ate this food and did not present with any digestive issues after consuming it. On August 21, 2018, I purchased a large bag of W/D food from PetSmart and ordered a case of W/D from Chewy. I always buy these products a few weeks before my supply is all gone, and I store the food in a tightly sealed dog food container that is kept in my pantry. When I presented these foods to her for the first time, about two weeks ago, (b) (6) went to her dish and smelled the food and walked away. I tried presenting these foods separately – she still did not want to eat them. (b) (6) ate very little of these foods for days and I ended up throwing most of it out each day. I became concerned that something was wrong with either (or both) of the recently purchased dry and canned W/D foods. Looking back, I do remember that the bag of W/D had a peculiar smell, like a pesticide odor, when I placed it in my car. Also, the cans of W/D appeared different in that there looks like a lot of white grease or some substance when I opened the can. (b) (6) got very sick within days of eating these foods. I took her to the veterinarian on September 20, 2018 , conveying my concern that maybe her colon bacteria was out of balance or the possibility that something could be wrong with the recently purchased W/D foods. (b) (6) was checked for various parasites and bacteria levels in her stool and the results were normal. (b) (6) was prescribed Metronizole. The diarrhea continued after three doses of this medicine and then she vomited two times last Friday night. I took her back to the veterinarian on September 22, and had her blood tested. All values were normal. Repeat tests for stool parasite screening was also negative (submitted for external testing on September 24, 2018). I believe something was wrong with one or both of these batches of W/D dog food. Perhaps there was a production concern or spoilage concern during transport or some chemical/substance exposure while the dry dog food was stored on the shelf at PetSmart. (b) (6) was perfectly fine before I forced her to eat a little of these foods, never knowing the end result would be her getting ill.	11	Years	Pit Bull	Dog	49	Pound

			significant gastro upset that the dog had been continuously experiencing from eating poisonous food. The vet and I tried everything to figure out his colitis issue. The dog was tested, placed on the medications listed above, and continued to suffer from GI issues. The vet and I exhausted nearly all explanations and feared that the symptoms may have been be a side effect of his heart condition or heart medication. We would never expect a food to cause colonic bleeding and so that was the last thing that we finally examined. The vet and I reviewed the food ingredients to try to see what could have been the culprit and almost simultaneously, we both gasped at the sight of “grape pomace” in your dog food. The vet immediately instructed me to “get him off this food and onto one that won’t kill him.” Please note, that a 5 pound dog, with prior health conditions, could easily be killed by grape pomace. The grapes in your Hills Science Diet undoubtedly made my dog experience Gastrointestinal trauma as it contributed to a depletion of health pertaining to his GI track and more seriously, could have contributed to a more rapid decrease of his heart health. This was proven by veterinary examination. This dog food catastrophe burned a hole in my pocket with vet bills, medications, supplements, potty pads for the diarrhea, it caused my poor dog to suffer, and in addition, it caused me a great deal of stress caring for an already-sick 5 pound animal who suffered from colitis for over a year. Imagine washing sheets, scrubbing carpets smeared with bloody stool from when he couldn’t make it to the potty pads, waking up to a dog crying to go outside due to perpetual diarrhea, and my least favorite, aiding the struggling pooper by gently coaxing intestinal encasement out of his anus along with bloodied stool. Do you realize now just how devastating this was? To say that I am livid with your company’s negligence is an understatement. You inadvertently were participating in inhumane animal cruelty. Although I do question if it was inadvertent. I am lead to believe that this matter is actually intentional because you didn’t want to have to stop production. It is public knowledge that your company was made aware of this concern earlier this year, but you chose to not stop production, because there had been no cases of dogs being sick. Well, here is your case, and it comes from an irately tenacious dog Mom with a very ill dog. A year later, in August of 2018, the dogs food was changed, and within a week he

			was having normal bowels, which he hadn't had all year, he was drinking more water, he had an increased appetite, he was more energetic, and his packed cell volume ( PCV ) count had decreased to a less toxic amount. The PCV is impacted by his heart medication. This of course makes sense, because his organs are now able to properly metabolize the heart medication, now that his little body can process his new "grape-less" food. This biological diagnostic assessment proof, his normalized metabolic state since the day he stopped Hills Science Diet, and the process of deduction provide sufficient evidence that his GI issues were a direct result of consuming the Hills Science Diet food, and were not caused by prior health or poor heart conditions. He has remained healthy and has increased in heart health ( as made evident by his most recent PCV blood draw ) while being on a food without poison in it. I want to know: What your company is currently doing to rectify this egregious situation? Why hasn't this food been recalled? What are the qualifications of the personnel on your science research team?

EON-366208	9/20/2018 8:08	Golden Rewards Duck Jerky Recipe	I am writing to you regarding your dog treats: "Golden Rewards, Duck Jerky Recipe" and an issue with my 6 year old female Labrador, (b) (6). I have always purchased this product as my dog has always loved them however up until last night, (b) (6) continuously begged me to go outside within a few hours of eating 1 strip of your Duck Jerky Recipe. This went on all night between 8pm and 5am. I had to let her out for her to do her business which was diarrhea many times throughout the night. This was the first and only Jerky strip I gave her from the recently purchased closed package I opened on Tuesday night (09/18/2018) after she came in for the night as regular. I understand there are a multitude of variables in this circumstance however, I am convinced that there may be something either off or wrong with this bag of treats as it has happened in the past with my other dog, a Great Pyrenese who also fell ill overnight after the same brand of strips but a few months back. Upon ceasing to feed her a strip before bed during that week, the diarrhea stopped. I have done the same with (b) (6) and her diarrhea has also stopped. I am sure there are contaminants in this bag and so my plan was to return it to the store with my reason why. If you would like me to hold off on it please let me know ASAP. Sometimes he would just pass out. It got progressively worse over the next several months into summer. He started to become more tired and was sleeping more. His difficulty with breathing began near the end of June beginning of July. Seizures and/or passing out became more frequent and breathing a little worse. Near the end of (b) (6) (b) (6) breathing was getting noticeably worse. I bring him into his vet several times regarding his breathing issues. The vet does an X-ray and sees that his heart is enlarged. Tells me he should see a cardiologist. At that point I asked her if he needed to be euthanized would she tell me. She said yes. His stomach was swollen and he could barely walk. Could barely breath. Two days later, on (b) (6) he passed away at home. I was extremely upset.  I am looking through his file and a specialist that I had sent him to for his skin issues said that he should see a cardiologist due to his heart murmur. I didn't see that in the report. Our primary vet could hear a murmur, see her heart was enlarged and had fluid around it. she immediately got us an appt with a cardiologist. It was discovered that (b) (6) had DCM and was in CHF. The cardiologist vet tested her Taurine Levels and they came back extremely low (52) and we looked at the ingredients on the bag to find that Taurine was not in the list of ingredients. (b) (6) started Taurine supplement and was switched to a different food. At her 3 month check up (b) (6) had improved significantly and is no longer in CHF but looks to have possible irreversible damage to the left side of her heart. (b) (6) was then switched to a low sodium grain free food and is supplemented with taurine and at her next 6 month follow up (in Sept 2018), her heart size has slightly increased and this is when the cardiologist asked us if we had heard about the reports about a possible link to grain free foods and DCM. And recommended maybe to stop feeding a grain free food.	8	Years	Samoyed	Dog	50	Pound
EON-365613	9/16/2018 12:32	Natural Balance Limited Ingredient Chicken and Sweet Potato	Our dog passed away last week unexpectedly. She was walked that morning and seemed to be feeling fine. Played a little bit with a neighbor's dog and then came home. I left the house for approx. 4 hours and she was fine when I left. Came home and she was dead by the front door. Appeared to have been dead for a couple of hours. She had a vet checkup this past April and was given a clean bill of health. Up to date on all her shots. I had noticed in the last 3 to 4 months that she was having a difficult time keeping up in her walks. She was walked at least 3 times every day but now she walked very slow and stopped to rest occasionally even though we only walked around 3 to 4 blocks. She recently seemed to pant more often than usual but it has been a hot summer. She did have a sensitive stomach, occasionally throwing up mostly bile, so we switched her food to Natural Balance Limited Ingredients Chicken and Sweet Potato. She ate that exclusively for the past 2 years or so. I do not know if that had anything to do with her death but she had been a seemingly very healthy dog up until her death. People often commented how lively she was for a dog her age. We do not know her cause of death but I suspect it was either a heart attack or stroke. Only this morning did I hear about CDM and I wonder if her diet could have been a factor.	11	Years	Retriever - Golden	Dog	60	Pound

EON-365526	9/14/2018 13:32	Zignature Kangaroo Formula "limited ingredient formula"	In short: otherwise pretty healthy-for-age, 13-year-old goldendoodle develops moderate-severe DCM with outrageously low taurine levels 5 months after switching to Zignature Kangaroo. (b) (6) results--Plasma: 7 Whole blood: 52. Long version: In March 2018, (b) (6) began eating Zignature Kangaroo to have a novel protein that would manage his IBD. At last checkup in March his heart sounded good, his regular blood work was good, declared basically healthy for age. The ultrasound that dx IBD didn't include a formal echo, but they gave his heart a listen as long as they had the wand out, and didn't see/hear anything out of the ordinary. In August 2018, (b) (6) developed an occasional hacking cough, so on August 29, I took him to the vet, who heard a heart murmur. Same day X-ray found slightly enlarged heart, so we scheduled a cardiac study (echo/EKG) for Sept 6. After Aug 29 appointment, a friend pointed me to info about grain free diets, and I saw a list of foods and associated taurine levels. Zig Kangaroo had almost entirely low taurine levels, so I called my vet on Aug 30 and requested blood draw to send to (b) (6). After reviewing info from (b) (6) lab, my vet agreed that it would be worth following up, so on Sept 4 we drew blood and sent to (b) (6). On Sept 6, the echo/EKG study diagnosed moderate-severe DCM with "impending congestive heart failure." The doctor suspected taurine-deficient DCM because of kangaroo diet and prescribed several supportive meds. Following recommendations from (b) (6) we also began taurine and l-carn supplements, and I began transitioning to Nutro Ultra food. On Sept 10, we received the (b) (6) taurine blood results, which were extremely low. Whole blood taurine: 52 (normal = 200 - 350); plasma 7 (normal = 60-120). I am filing this report Sept 14. The dates in this report are a little artificial due to the built-in restrictions on this form. For example, we started the food in March 2018, and his symptoms began early August 2018, but the most recent bag purchased was in mid-August 2018, so symptoms began before the most recent bag was purchased, but the problem is tied to many bags purchased since early March. I've done my best to complete this with dates the form will accept, but I hope this description will help account for discrepancies, and I'm happy to communicate with someone from FDA to clarify anything.	13	Years	Retriever - Golden	Dog	86	Pound

(b) (6) Vet Hospital, on 07/30/2018. He mis-diagnosed her with Kennel Cough. On 08/21/2018, I had to take her into another veterinary establishment. We were out of town visiting family, and I had (b) (6) with me. Her symptoms included: shallow breathing, coughing, loss of appetite, one eye dilated more than the other, and lethargy. The coughing did not go away, and her overall health declined rapidly. I had x-rays and blood work performed at (b) (6) Veterinary Hospital, and the results of the x-rays determined she had an enlarged heart, and water build-up in her lungs. During the same day, she was referred to (b) (6) Veterinary Emergency Center to have an echocardiogram performed. They also performed a Taurine test during this time. The Taurine test shown her to be taurine deficient. They had prescribed her various medications and was diagnosed with Congestive Heart Failure DCM. She is continuing her follow-up visits & tests with her primary vet for DCM, and also has an appointment with (b) (6) Veterinary 09/20/2018 to visit an optometrist for her eye dilation issue. Her echocardiogram report states the grain free diet is quite suspect, and recommended changing her diet immediately.	11	Years	Pit Bull	Dog	64.5	Pound

EON-364395	9/6/2018 8:28	Purina One Smartblend Chicken & Rice Formula Adult Dog Food	I own a Jack Russell Terrier mix. Since his weaning, I have fed him Purina One Smartblend food. My mother will often care for my dog when I am out of town, so I leave a bag of his food at my mother's home, sealed in an airtight container. On my dogs' last visit, my mother informed me that the food was contaminated with bugs. It was a fairly new bag, but i assumed it had sit for too long and purchased another bag to leave at her home. Fast forward about 45 days, and I need to go out of town. I take my dog to my mothers and she calls me that night to tell me that the NEW dog food also was contaminated with these bugs. The bag was BRAND NEW. This obviously is a manufacturing issue, as the dog food contains either insect larvae or eggs that are viable. This is not a 'cheap' dog food, by any stretch. I am concerned for the safety of my pet and the pets of others who use this 'premium' pet food.

EON-364376	9/5/2018 19:16	Whole Earth Farms Chicken and Turkey Recipe Grain Free	3 years ago 2015 I switched both my miniature schnauzers to Whole Earth Farms grain free dog food Chicken and Turkey recipe. last year in 2017 at (b) (6) annual check up the doctor told me that she heard a heart murmur. The Vet wanted to keep an eye on it and see where we were a year later. On (b) (6) (b) (6) had her yearly exam, there was no noted difference in her murmur. On (b) (6) after giving (b) (6) a bath at 5pm she started acting funny. She normally runs around like a mad dog after a bath and this time she just stood there. When she walked away she was walking like she was unsure of herself. I thought maybe she had hurt her back because she does have spinal stenosis of her spinal cord between her shoulder blades. I thought maybe during the bath I may have moved her wrong. So I gave her Medacam 15lb does that the vet had given me to use when her back acts up. Between 5 and 5:30pm I fed the dogs as always but (b) (6) would not eat, this is not unusual for her, she only eats if she wants to so this didn't set off any alarms. After the other dogs ate, she went outside with them like normal and was eating some grass, again not unusual she and the other dog do this from time to time. After being outside she came in and laid on the sofa till 10 when it was bed time. I called her to come to bed and when she stood up she puked. At this time I was concerned but not worried to the point I need to rush her to the emergency vet. Around 1130p or so I woke up with her vomiting and starting to cough. She vomited again around 1230am and started having some funny breathing but I thought she was trying to clear her throat because of her vomiting. I laid down and went back to sleep and round 3:30am I woke up with her coughing uncontrollably and gasping for air. I immediately took her to (b) (6) Animal Hospital in (b) (6) and we checked in at 4:44am. They immediately took her back checked her sats and put her in an O2 tank and hooked her up to an EKG. She was sinus tack with a heart rate of 174. Labs and films were obtained and I was told she had CHF with pulmonary adema. She had right sided heart enlargement and blood was backing up into her lungs. Staff started her on IV Lasix and heart meds and put in ICU. By 1130am on (b) (6) (b) (6) was much worse then she was when I brought her in. She was now coughing up red frothy sputum and lots of it. After spending time with her and talking with the Vet Doctor and the techs Euthanasia was opted for. With (b) (6) grim prognosis and zero improvement I thought this was the best option. (b) (6) was euthanized at 1153am. I was unaware of the grain free dog foods maybe being related to CHF until after this happened. As of (b) (6) I have switched my other schnauzer over to Hills Science Diet as well as my puppy of 11weeks (Chihuahua). I am hoping to meet with my Vet to have my other schnauzer looked at and have a possible cardiac work up. I hope that switching the food at this time will help reverse any affects he may have suffered.(b) (6) was adopted 5/6 years ago at the age of 5 and she had a clean bill of health until her murmur diagnosed in 2017.	11	Years	Schnauzer - Miniature	Dog	15	Pound

I decided to not to give him any more meds for the next two days since he throw up the food. He was fine the rest of the day and ate the dog food at night time again and the next morning he throw up all of his food again. after about hour after throwing up he was outside and started to cry and throw up clear/yellow mucus (meaning nothing was left in his stomach). I took him to the vet office where they stated something was stuck in his small intestines and he needed surgery immediately. After xrays, test, and surgery they didn't find anything in my dog or wrong with him. I was advised the the problem could've been the food and to return it and report the lot number as something could've been wrong with this batch. I noticed that when I opened the can it didn't look right (very soupy, very little meat or rice or veg). I called Hills BEFORE I gave it to the dog and asked if there were recalls or if it was safe, and they said no recalls and their food may have different consistencies due to a different source of their rice flour. I then drained some of the liquid out and gave the solid portions to my dog. About 4-5 hours later, my dog became ill with fever, shivers and nausea. I took him to the Vet, however since my dog has a tendency to have UTI, they thought it was (elevated white and red cells in, fever) that and gave me antibiotics. I did not feed him anymore of the food but made him Chicken and Rice. After a grueling week, full of blood tests and ultrasounds, my dog is finally recovering. I'm not saying that it was the dog food, however there are already a few online complaints regarding consistency of this food. If it was the food, I would not want any other dogs to become ill. I have notified both Hills and Chewy.com (where I received the food by mail) of my concerns. They have been very cooperative and they said they will investigate. I still noticed the smell, but pushed thoughts aside figuring his nose was better than mine and could notice a bad food choice. Last night I went to give him this treat and giggled the bag for him to come to me. This is when I noticed white,green and yellow mold all over the ones on the bottom (b) (6) has had diarrhea for the past 7 days. It immediately started to bubble/percolate in the can. It had a distinct smell, even worse than the normal wet dog food smell. I DID NOT feed it to the dogs - I threw it out, but recorded the information from the can and plan to notify Wal*Mart that sold the food. The canned food was not past its expiration (May, 2021) and was purchased in the last two weeks at a Wal*Mart in (b) (6) (because my friend shops weekly and purchases his groceries from one of two locations). I shared a video and photos on my social media accounts (FB and Twitter) as well as shared to a lost and found area group to get the word out so that no one makes the mistake of feeding the putrid mess to their beloved dogs.

She was on multiple grain free foods but the longest she was on was Zignature Dog Food for over 4 years. I recently read an article that the FDA asked people who have dogs that were on a grain free diet to report any issues to the FDA so I making this report. She passed away in (b) (6) from an enlarged heart. A month before her passing she had gone to the vet for a check up and to have a tooth pulled out. The vet had stated that she seem to be in great health. And that she would live for years to come. I took her to the vet after the new year in (b) (6) because she was having problems going up and down the stairs and her breathing seemed forced. The veterinarian took blood samples and asked me to come back the next day for an x-ray. I scheduled an appointment for the next day to come back and review the results. I dropped her off at the vet it around noon and was told to pick her up at 4 o'clock. They did the x-rays. But before I made it back to pick her up she had passed away. The veterinarian had showed me her x-rays that she had an enlarged heart. And that was most likely the cause of her death. You can contact (b) (6) Veterinary hospital in (b) (6) (b) (6) for further confirmation on her passing and the cause. I am not sure if this is linked to her diet of the grain free dog food. I looked at my finger and I had a pinprick type puncture wound on my finger. I then poured contents of bag out on my kitchen table. It looked to be small copper type threading sticking out of about 6 or 7 dog biscuits. I became very concerned as I had just given my dogs 2 or 3 treats each. I have contacted Pedigree who makes the dogs treats. I was told that animal hairs do get into the mix and become very hard a brittle, but they should not be harmful to my dog. These threads or whatever did not seem like animal hairs and whatever they are broke the skin of my finger. I think a dog ingesting this could cause harm!

As of our 8/17/18 Diet and Taurine Table which tracks the dogs which have had blood taurine tested or diagnosed as DCM we have 24 sick dogs (1 died) which have low taurine or DCM which were fed Champion Pet Foods Acana Singles like Lamb and Apple, Pork and Squash. I believe based on posts to the FB page there are probably others that have not made a formal report. Champion appears to be changing their formulas for the Acana Singles once again lowering the protein and changing ingredients. Has the FDA reached any conclusions as to what in the foods is causing DCM? Champion's Acana has the most sick dogs on the table of any pet food. Please note that judging by what is on their web site, they have probably gone through 3 formula changes in the last few months both in ingredients, analysis. Yesterday, we had yet another upset Golden owner alarmed over the illness of their dog reporting that they fed Acana and others who feed Acana that have not yet had their dogs tested. I understand that the FDA VM has access to the Diet and Taurine Table. This has become frightening. Best way to reach me is email.	1	Years	Retriever - Golden	Dog	60	Pound

EON-362796	8/19/2018 19:12	Fromm Grain Free Beef Fritata	My sweet dog (b) (6) passed away last month from CHF. She had been diagnosed with a heart murmur several years ago and monitored. She had an episode where she fainted in (b) (6). At that time I was told she had an enlarged heart and was in CHF. She was treated with a prescription diet and medications for her final months of life. She passed away (b) (6). She was healthy the majority of her life up to the last year when she slipped a disc, had a couple UTIs, then developed CHF. She had eaten Fromms grain free food most of her life. After hearing the potential link between grain free foods and CHF, I looked at her label and peas and potatoes were indeed listed as main ingredients. I am already so grief stricken over her death and now I am tormented by the fact that I may have been feeding her heart disease. I am angry that I cannot trust people who should be more knowledgeable than myself in these areas. Fromm is not a cheap food and I felt I was feeding a quality food to my sweet pup. My other shih tzu is now 8 and a slight heart murmur was recently detected. Please keep us informed of the outcomes of these findings. I would also like someone to be accountable for this. EON-362549	8/16/2018 17:40	Purina Bella pampered meals inspired by small dogs	I feed my dog Purina (b) (6) dog food. The last time I fed my dog I noticed a clump of something dark in the food. I could not get to my dog and ate the food. I noticed she swallowed the food with difficulty. That same night my dog vomited some of the dog food that she ate. The next day, my dog was vomiting and having bloody diarrhea. Her condition kept getting worse. She would not eat so I took her to the vet. After running several tests the vet determined that it was something my dog ate that was contaminated. I only feed my dog Purina (b) (6) dog food and she is always in an area where she cannot eat anything else. (b) (6) is 5 (neutered boy) and (b) (6)2 (spayed girl). After our vet diagnosed (b) (6) with D.C.M and told us he had a severely enlarged heart, we went to the VCA to confirm diagnosis with a canine cardiologist. Confirmed D.C.M and congestive heart failure with 25% of his heart was working with a year to live on medication. He was put on diuretics (Furosemide) and Pimobendan. We did the blood test for taurine deficiency related D.C.M. with the wildcard hope that it was reversible since (b) (6) was so young, not a breed that is predisposed to D.C.M. and has been an active, happy dog. While we waited for the results, we started Taurine and L-Carnitine supplements twice daily. After 1 week, his heart reduced in size by 15%, our vet sent us the NY Times article about D.C.M. and grain-free food. We switched (b) (6) and (b) (6) from Kirkland Nature's Domain Organic Chicken and Peas dry food to Hill's Science Diet Adult 1-5 years Chicken and Barley. We received (b) (6)' plasma taurine results, 23. We immediately tested and x-rayed (b) (6), her plasma taurine level as 42 and her heart was slightly enlarged. We started supplementing her with Taurine upon vet confirmation. We love our dogs and are so sad that the "good" food we bought them potentially caused all this. We have one more week before the next milestone follow-up of x-rays and blood work at 1 month post diagnosis but (b) (6) is up to 91lb from 78lbs.	5	Years	Coonhound - Bluetick	Dog	78.4	Pound

Limited ingredients diets sweet potato and fish dry dog formula	Very slow heart rate and lethargy getting worse over the course of several months. Her slow heart rate was initially noticed in April of 2018 at a vet visit for a cut on her foot. At the time in the vet's office it was in the mid 70s. It was attributed to her being fit. In July of 2018 we noticed she was very lethargic and tired. Her heart rate at home was in the upper 30s to low 40s. When she went to the vet it was only in the low 60s. An ACTH test was done to look for Addison's. In addition a sonogram of her heart was done. A DCM was suspected and she was sent to a cardiologist. At the same time we began moving her to a dog food with grains in it. I have left you a voicemail, contacted the pet store (Treates Unleashed in (b) (6) and gotten a refund for the food. There is NO DOUBT your dog food is infested with these gnats. EON-361876	8/10/2018 21:28	Nature's Domain Puppy Chicken and Pea Formula	Regarding Nature's Domain Puppy Chicken and Pea Formula dog food. I have been breeding (b) (6) / International Champion Labrador Retrievers for (b) (6) years now. I have been in the veterinary field for 22 years (b) (6) In November 2016 I started feeding Costco's Nature's Domain Puppy Chicken and Pea Formula dog food to my whelping bitches and their puppies. I only changed to this puppy food after Costco quit carrying another brand I had used for over 20 years without issue. I recommended this Nature's Domain Puppy Chicken and Pea Formula dog food to my puppy's new owners. In March of this year a 10 ½ month old client's puppy died from congestive heart failure. In July of this year a puppy from the same litter, different owner, also died from congestive heart failure, this one at 14 ½ months old. I own both the sire and dam to this litter. They both have their (b) (6) heart clearances done by a canine cardiac specialist. The dam to this litter has previously produced 28 healthy puppies for me and the sire has produced 88 healthy puppies for me, none with any sort of heart issue. The only thing that had changed for this litter was the puppy food! I also personally kept three young females that were on the Nature's Domain Puppy Chicken and Pea Formula dog food out of three different dams, three different litters, to hopefully add to my future breeding program. All three females that I have kept, one the full sister to the two that died from the aforementioned litter (she is now 15 months old), one that is 19 months old, and the other that is now 21 months old, are all ten pounds under the AKC breed standard size for being an adult Labrador Retriever show dog. Once again the only difference in raising these girls is that they were fed the Nature's Domain Puppy Chicken and Pea Formula dog food! I had suspected the Nature's Domain Puppy Chicken and Pea Formula dog food after	1	Years	Retriever - Labrador	Dog	55	Pound

			reading several articles about dangers of peas in dog food and the fact that peas are high in lectins. Apparently, lectins line the intestine as well as stomach and interfere with the absorption of nutrients. The Nature's Domain Puppy Chicken and Pea Formula dog food's main ingredients are listed in this order: Chicken, chicken meal, peas, garbanzo beans, lentils, fava beans, sweet potatoes. Five of the seven main ingredients high in lectins. I then promptly contacted all of my clients and recommended they change puppy food immediately, attaching articles to validate my concerns. I was able to go back to my original puppy food in April of this year when I discovered that I could order it from Costco online. In May I contacted Costco Customer Service who then contacted A. Bradley, DVM, Kirkland Signature Pet Foods Customer Support Team, with no acknowledgment of my concerns. I have spoken to my veterinarian and he agrees with my assessment and the correlation between the Costco's Nature's Domain Puppy Chicken and Pea Formula, the heart issues and deaths of my client's puppies, as well as the three small undersized adult dogs that I now have. I have asked him to write a letter for Dr. Bradley. I was very pleased to see the July 12 statement of the “FDA Investigating Potential Connection Between Diet and Cases of Canine Heart Disease.” It brought credibility to my concerns. I have copies of veterinary records for my client's deceased puppies. I currently still have my three young adult females. I also have a client that recently lost their unrelated almost eight year dog from DCM out of a different OFA heart cleared sire, that was feed the grain free Taste of the Wild for the past six years. I'd certainly appreciate continued research into this matter as we are doing a great disservice to the public letting them believe they are loving their beloved pets while they are unknowingly actually killing them with grain free foods.

This product is extremely dangerous for dogs and I have emailed both the manufacturer and PetValu where I purchased it that it must be removed from shelves immediately. The vet expense is already more than I was anticipating and the surgery will be beyond what we are ready to handle at this time. She had no health problems before she started with a cough and ended up in ICU for days but after spending many $$$ on her care over the course of a couple weeks her lungs continued to fill up and we had to put her down or watch her continue to struggle to breath. Since this was my second dog diagnosed with DCM, which is usually unheard of, I started doing my own research on DCM. I read that DCM might be linked to grain free dog food. This made sense to me since both of my dogs were fed a grain free diet and now both were diagnosed with DCM. I asked my veterinarian if we could check his Taurine level and that was submitted on 4/21/18. His level was 27 (normal range is 60-120), so significantly low. Taurine supplementation was started. EON-361623	8/7/2018 20:24	Canidae (Pet Food made by Pet People) Grain Free PURE Land Limited Ingredient Diet made with Fresh Bison Adult	My boxer has IBD (Irritable Bowel Disease), she's been diagnosed with it several years ago and has been on a variety of foods and due to her IBD I've had to try different kinds of protein (beef, fish, etc..). Beginning of last year 2017 I came across pet food with limited ingredients, the protein being Bison meat. At that time I wasn't really paying attention to any other ingredients (weather it's grain free or not). The bison seemed to sit well with her IBD. However, a few months late, early summer of 2017 she developed exercise intolerance and difficulty breathing. At first I attributed it to her getting older and the hot weather. However, in September 2017 I took her to see a vet and she was diagnosed with DCM and was in heart failure and had to be hospitalized. She was started on Lasix, Pimobendan, Benazapril, and Taurine supplement. She started looking better. On her first recheck a couple months ago, her heart disease was pretty much gone. On her next recheck it was even better. The vet attributed it to the likely Taurine deficiency, since that is the only instance when DCM reverses itself. She asked me if my pet was on grain free food. At that time I didn't really understand how that was related, neither was she, but she advised me that there have been more and more instances across the country. Sure enough, I got home and checked the bag and it is indeed a grain free diet that I've been feeding my dog since the beginning of last year (the one with bison meat). The vet, and myself, now after reading all the research, are pretty certain her heart disease was caused by taurine deficiency which was brought on by feeding grain free diet.	9	Years	Boxer (German Boxer)	Dog	58	Pound

EON-361601	8/7/2018 16:28	Zignature Kangaroo Formula Limited Ingredient Formula	Since (b) (6) was a puppy, he's had skin allergies likely related to a poultry allergy. Since he was 9 months old, he's been on Zignature kangaroo dry food in order to give him an exotic protein he and his ancestors had not been exposed to. So (b) (6) has been on Zignature kangaroo for a little over 3 years, he's fed very few other treats (only bully sticks and bits of cheese for medicine), so Zignature kangaroo dry food is his main nutrition source. On Sunday 7/29/2018, (b) (6) woke up incredibly lethargic, somewhat able to move around but totally exhausted and disinterested in food, which was very unlike him. I took him to the emergency clinic and he was diagnosed with dilated cardiomyopathy either related to a taurine deficiency in conjunction with grain free food or a possible genetic/ideopathic link. The emergency clinic took a blood sample to be sent off for taurine analysis. Yesterday, I saw a veterinary cardiologist who confirmed the dilated cardiomyopathy (DCM) diagnosis, noting that his left chamber was very enlarged but his left atrium was still normal, very in line with DCM. She suspected a link to taurine deficiency but the lab had not yet returned. Last night (8/6/2018), the emergency clinic called and said (b) (6) blood test confirmed his taurine levels are EXTREMELY low and would absolutely be enough to cause taurine deficiency DCM. (b) (6) now needs to take 6000 mg of a taurine supplement per day (2000mg 3x a day). He will also need to be moved to a dog food WITH grain because it's not yet understood if the grain free food itself is taurine deficient or something about the ingredients causes taurine deficiency. As per the FDA press release, I'm writing in to let you know about another case of grain free food and dilated cardiomyopathy in my 4 year old Golden Retriever. Both (b) (6) parents (and their parents) were certified by a veterinary cardiologist prior to being bred and both passed with no signs of genetic DCM. I won't know 100% until I follow-up with the cardiologist in 6 months after he's gotten his taurine supplement, but at this point, it's very likely related to this food.	4	Years	Retriever - Golden	Dog	86	Pound

EON-361577	8/7/2018 13:44	Acana Singles Limited Ingredient Diet Lamb and Okanagan Apple Dry Dog Food	I actually had two dogs involved. My ten year old male dog had slight heart murmur but his breathing was labored. I became aware of the taurine issue and was concerned he might have DCM. As a precaution, I also had the 6 year old female tested. Both came back considerably below the "normal" standard. The male was at 61 and the female was at 142. Both had been eating Acana Lamb/Apple Singles for the past 1.5 - 2.0 years. I did take them for Echos and neither showed DCM at that point. However, the cardiologist recommending a change of food and supplementing with taurine to avoid DCM.	6	Years	Retriever - Golden	Dog

She explained that they retain samples from each batch, that she had asked the Quality Control Manager to pull the sample and put it through a battery of tests and that they should have the results on June 18th. I returned Dr. Heldman's call and explained that I highly doubted that the testing would show any issue with the food or else it wouldn't have been released for sale in the first place. (b) (6) also sent me a follow up email regarding the diagnosis and stated that she suspected that it, along with his vomiting on 06/16/18 and (b) (6) vomiting on 06/13/18, were all caused by the questionable bag of the TOTW Pacific Steam dog food (see uploaded email). On Tuesday, 06/19/18, (b) (6) began having diarrhea and a Vet from (b) (6) Pet Hospital prescribed Metronidazole. On Monday, 07/02/18, (b) (6) had problems with his stool again. 			Dr. Heldman and I spoke a couple of times between 06/18/18 and 06/20/18. During one of the conversations, I told Dr. Heldman that my Stepdad feeds his Silky Terrier, (b) (6) two formulas of TOTW dog food and that (b) (6) was refusing to eat it. Dr. Heldman asked me to send her pictures of the production codes from the two 5 lb. bags of dog food, which I emailed to her on Thursday, 06/21/18. I also explained that my Stepdad purchased the food from (b) (6) and that it was the same store where I purchased the 30 lb. bag of TOTW Pacific Stream dry dog food. Dr. Heldman also asked me to forward the email (b) (6) sent to me regarding (b) (6) Clostridium perfringens diagnosis in which (b) (6) stated: “I just wanted to clarify on the Clostridium perfringens infection we found in (b) (6) stool today. This is something that is accompanying a bacterial imbalance in his stool sample. I suspect that the questionable bag of food that was started last week may have lead to the bacterial imbalance and then the clostridium (which can be found in normal dog stool in low numbers) started to multiply, thus causing the diarrhea. The diarrhea generally really improves after just the first dose or two, even so, it's important to give the metronidazole until it's gone.” I sent another email to Dr. Heldman on 06/24/18 with the receipts for the Vet bills, the medication and the bag of food I purchased from (b) (6) attached and asked if she had received the results from the testing that she requested the Quality Control Manager at the Meta, MO plant to conduct on the sample from the 40,000 lb. patch of food that the bag that I purchased came from. I also requested that if their test result didn't show any issue, that an independent test be conducted on a sample from the bag of food that I currently possess and that TOTW cover the expense of the test. I received an email from Dr. Heldman on Tuesday, 07/03/18 in which she stated: “Sorry for the delay in getting back to you. I know you were interested in testing yours.” I replied to Dr. Heldman’s email on Friday, 07/06/18 and stated: “In looking at the Vet bill receipts I scanned and emailed to you, I didn't see anything called a PCR listed. I called the Vet's office on Wednesday and left a message asking if that particular test was conducted. Unfortunately, she is out of the office until Monday. What is a PCR test and what does it look for? Did you reach out to the store where I purchased the bag of food? Have you looked into possible distribution or warehousing issues? Are there any other documents I need to submit to be reimbursed for the Vet bills? I noticed a reply you posted to several comments on the ConsumerAffairs.com website in reply to consumers posting about their dogs getting sick (vomiting, bloody diarrhea, lethargy) soon after eating a new bag of Taste Of The Wild dog food in which you state: "We sell over 60,000 bags of TOTW a day. If there was an issue there would likely be hundreds, if not thousands, of new posts here daily." In addition to ConsumerAffairs.com, do a Google search on Taste Of The Wild complaints and you will see that there are hundreds, probably thousands, of similar complaints. As I told you during one of our phone conversations, there were 75 posts on Amazon.com alone from April through June 15th. There have been 12 more complaints since June 15th through July 6th on Amazon. I know that TOTW is aware of the complaints as individuals from TOTW Customer Service usually replies to the posts. You will also find similar complaints on the Amazon.com, Chewy.com, dogfoodadvisor.com, truthaboutpetfood.com, reddit.com, pawster.com, etc. websites.

			I'm sure there are additional websites that I haven't yet come across. While I understand it can be common for dogs to develop vomiting or diarrhea for a variety of reasons, the particular complaints I referenced above are very similar in that they are dogs who have been on TOTW for a long time suddenly getting sick with identical symptoms that my dogs experienced after their owners opening a new bag of TOTW food. This cannot be a coincidence and I would hate to think that TOTW would try to downplay all the complaints by issuing a statement that there isn't an issue because there aren't hundreds or thousands of complaints appearing on the ConsumerAffairs.com website. There is absolutely no way my dogs could have gotten into some other food or the garbage. They also could not have gotten into anything in the yard as I am always with them in their fenced backyard when they go out to potty. The ONLY thing that changed or was introduced to them was the bag of food I purchased on June 10th, fed to them twice on June 13th and then the vomiting started. I apologize if I am coming across as irritated, but I've been reading too many responses from TOTW today in which they are blaming the illnesses on something other than an issue with their dog food. I've heard horror stories in the past of other dog food companies placing blame elsewhere, deny again and again and or even try to hide an issue until they are forced by the FDA to issue a recall. I cannot imagine that TOTW would do any of the same actions. I would expect TOTW to do just the opposite." As I had explained to Dr. Heldman, on Amazon.com alone, I found 75 posts on from April through June 15th from pet owners complaining about their dogs getting sick after eating TOTW dog food; there were 12 more complaints between June 15th through July 6th and 33 more complaints since then. I just checked the ConsumerAffairs.com site again and I counted 163 posts since the beginning of January, 2018 of people complaining about their dogs getting sick after eating TOTW dog food. Most of the complaints are similar....dogs refusing to eat the food and dogs

			eating the food and experiencing vomiting, diarrhea, bloody diarrhea, gas, lethargy. There were some complaints that were slightly different in that the pet owners reported that their dogs died after eating TOTW dog food. With all the similarities in the complaints, this cannot be a coincidence! Some additional notes, even though I have a fenced back yard, my dogs are never outside alone. I work from home and there is no way they could have gotten into anything without my knowledge. They do not receive any table scraps. The only treats they receive are little pieces of cheese (I cut a slice of cheese into eight pieces and they receive one piece once they come in after going outside to potty and when I wrap their medicine inside one piece). They were occasionally receiving a beef flavored DentaStix. Nothing about their diet had changed other than the newly opened bag of Taste Of The Wild dog food. I still have most of the Taste Of The Wild dog food in the original bag. If you need it for testing, I would be more than happy to send it to you. Thank you for looking into this matter! She thought it was because her dog was 13 years old and it was his time to pass on. So she put him to sleep. She then gave me the dog food. After a few weeks my dog got real sick, vomiting n then not eating. I took my dog to the vet and she had to stay for 2 days due to pancreatitis. I have spoken to get about this but they have no way of knowing if it was the dog food or not. They did however write down the name of it so if any other dogs have problems in our small area they can keep track of it.

Limited Ingredient Diets Sweet Potato & Fish Formula Small Breed Bites Grain-Free Dry Dog Food	I just watched a story on NBC news about heart problems with dogs on a potato based diet. My dog has been on a limited ingredient diet for years at the suggestions of a prior vet. I put her on the Natural Balance L.I.D. This is a grain-free diet and based on potatoes. A few years ago, I noticed a cough so I took her to the vet. She was diagnosed with a heart ailment and put on Medvetin. This seems to have helped with the cough and while she was still active, I could tell something was off. The Medvetin made her feel better. While I am not a vet and can't say if her diet is the cause of her heart issues, it seems very plausible given the news story sounds just like hers. Purina Beyond Simple Origins Farm-Raised Chicken Wild-Caught Shrimp & Carrot R	Last week I gave (b) (6) half a can of Purina Beyond Simple Origins cat food, the chicken and shrimp wet food, and she ate about 2/3 of the food and was fine for about an hour and then began vomiting at total of seven times. After the first four times she started to meow pitifully before continuing to vomit. She only ever throws up if she has a hairball or if she eats dry food too fast without chewing it up. She has never ever in 8 years thrown up wet cat food. After giving her a crunched up saltine cracker, she was fine. I wrote it off as maybe the shrimp was bad because I've never had bad experiences with Purina before, and threw out the can. Earlier in the week she had a regular Purina Beyond cat food 2 nights (she eats half a can at time so each can is 2 meals for her) and had no adverse reactions Everything was fine. Tonight, a week later, I tried a different can of the Beyond Simple Origins, this one being the Pacific Cod, New England Herring, and Spinach. Again she ate 2/3 of half a can, and again about an hour later she vomited multiple times. This time it was 5 times total, and again was able to calm it down with a saltine cracker and water. I am not sure what is causing it. If something has gone bad or if there is an ingredient in it that she can't handle. She has had this brand of food before, multiple times. I can't remember the location or date they were purchased, though I do know it was either Walmart or Publix in mid-July. I don't have the chicken and shrimp can, but I have the Cod and Herring one. Expiration date is June 2019. The number under that is: 71771162 L1NB61820 I have a couple other cans from this brand purchased at the same time that I will not be giving the cat. She has a very clean health history, aside from one instance with struvite crystals about 4-5 years ago, she hasn't had any other illness or problem. So I am very alarmed that a brand of food she has had no issues with has caused her to become so ill twice within 2 weeks.	8	Years	Domestic Shorthair	Cat	10	Pound

On 2/16/18 the new vet saw him for an irritated eye and also noticed the heart murmur. When I took him back on 6/23/18 for a hematoma on his ear we saw another vet at that clinic who heard the murmur very loudly and concluded after talking with the other vet at this clinic that it had gotten much worse in four months. I agreed to a chest x-ray which showed a slightly enlarged heart. We started him on Vetmedin and Enalapril. A few weeks later I saw the FDA report about certain types of "designer" or grain free dog food possibly causing this heart problem in dogs that normally wouldn't get it. I have been feeding him various Rachael Ray dog chows over the past 4 years, from Zero Grain to the current one which is Rachael Ray Nutrish with Turkey, Brown Rice & Venison. Today I started to train the puppy and broke a treat in half to discover it had a slithering black worm inside! My husband also broke open a treat to discover the same thing. My puppy has not been her usual rambunctious self and her stools are loose and the young adult just had a loose stool as I type this. No other change has been made in their feeding regimen. EON-361228	8/2/2018 20:36	Taste of the Wild grain free: Wetlands	I switched my dog to food on April 18th 2018. My dog was completely healthy before we switched him. After my dog had been on this food for a few weeks he started to have diarrhea for 2 weeks and was throwing up for that 2 weeks. I brought him into his vet and got him on antibiotics. Shortly after this my dog became anemic. I have been bringing him to the vet with them taking a lot of tests on him with his blood work and multiple ultrasounds. This has cost me over $2000 in vet bills. The vets could not figure out what is wrong with my dog. I decided to switch him to a different brand of food, since I read online the brand my dog was on while he was sick had multiple recalls on it. Shortly after I switched brands of food, he started to improve and get better. He is currently still a little anemic, but still improving since I switched his food. I only have the vet bills, when I bought the food. I do not have the bag, or the food. I had the food April 18th. EON-361227	8/2/2018 20:24	Blue Wilderness Rocky Mountain Recipe Red Meat Dinner Adult	I have used this canned food for about a year. I buy 3 cases at a time from the distributor. I opened a can from another case to find the same thing, the third case as well. This product prompted me to mix it within the dry kibble because of the loose consistency. The feeding of the product resulted in the animal developing diarrhea. I emailed the manufacturer to see if they had changed the formula. They stated that they had not and to contact the distributor and request a different best by date. The distributor suggested that I donate the product and they would ship out another 3 cases. The only problem is that they sent product still with the same best by date (July 13, 2020). I feel that something is wrong with the food and I would never donate something like that. Learned of recent cases of Taurine deficiency/DCM as so sent whole blood test to (b) (6) on 4/25/18 which came in below normal range at 135. Immediately changed her food to a diet including grain, Fromm Salmon A La Veg and took her to cardiologist for Echo at earliest appointment, 5/15/18. The results were as follows: Mild mitral valve thickening with associated mitral regurgitation was identified, representative of degenerative mitral valve disease (independent of the patient's taurine status). Left ventricular end-diastolic and end -systolic dimensions are mildly increased compared to normal range for a patient of this size but in the presence of normal fractional shortening an normal ejection fraction, it was difficult to conclude that over left ventricular systolic dysfunction is present and the left ventricular dimensions may simply be variant of normal. No commentary could be made on what (b) (6) cardiac function was at the time the initial taurine deficiency was detected but said it was unlikely that any potential dysfunction would have normalized in 2 weeks (if taurine level had normalized following a diet change). He prescribed Taurine and L-Carnitine supplements and also took another Taurine blood test to see if change in food made a difference in the short period of time. She is also scheduled for a follow-up Echo in 6 months. Taurine results from 5/15/18 came in normal range 260. Also retested on 6/26/18 and taurine level came in at 300.	6	Years	Retriever - Golden	Dog	61	Pound

I had seen him minutes earlier and he was fine and happy. We brought the body to our vet, who said it looked like he had suffered from some form of heart incident. We didn't do a necropsy, but the vet guessed that there might have been a genetic or congenital component. That was in (b) (6). We were asked to bring (b) (6) back the following day to see cardiologist (b) (6) and (b) (6) underwent a number of tests. (b) (6) was diagnosed with dilated cardiomyopathy, right sided. They were only 109 in the first analysis on 6/30. The average range is 200-350, with a target goal of 250. EON-361093	8/1/2018 16:52	Orijen Six Fish, Orijen Cat & Kitten	After the first meal from this bag the male only at a few of the kibbles and turned his nose up at it and wouldn't eat much of it. The female became very lethargic and didn't eat for two days. We made an appointment with the vet but she seemed to be getting better so we cancelled our first vet appointment. A few days later, she started vomiting quite frequently, then stopped eating or drinking. We took her to the vet who did labs and xrays. Though her stomach was empty as she hadn't eaten anything, the vets were concerned as her stomach was enlarged and there appeared to be a mass. After discussions with the vet, I opted for surgery thinking it was matted cat hair that was trapped in her stomach but once she was opened up there was nothing in there but a thick saliva and a gritty substance. A biopsy of the stomach was done and came back negative. After we brought her home she was on wet food for sensitive stomach for approximately 10 days. When we started her again on the Orijen she threw all the food back up about 90 minutes later. I knew at this point it must be the food as the same symptoms re-occurred immediately. When we figured out it was the food, we took both cats off the Orijen and started them on a different brand of food. The female has been doing great but now the male has been diagnosed with CKD and is on prescription food.	7.5	Years	Maine Coon	Cat	16.8	Pound

After another week, all began showing lethargy, hiding, at this point about 6-7 weeks, all were removed from the American Journey food, weight loss was about 20%, (b) (6) was 19 lbs and went to 15lbs he was the most lethargic and began vomiting frequently and not eating much, I took him to the vet, which resulted in no answers, normal blood work, mamushka ate the most of this food as he preferred dry, now being off the suspected food, (b) (6) continued to get worse and died within about 1 week. The other two cats improved and began gaining weight over the next several weeks. Now 4 weeks off the "bad" food, the two remaining cats are at 90%+ of their normal weight, not showing any more lethargy, acting normal, not hiding. I waited to see the improvement to confirm the American Journey food was the culprit. For dry, they ate mostly the salmon flavor, but did have some duck flavor(very little, like a treat). Thankfully, though L-Carnatine and Vetmedin, she is stable. However, upon reading the FDA report where peas, legumes dog food diets were linked to DCM, I wanted to report our case. I am more than willing to provide whatever vet reports, food records, detailed health records to help link grain free diets to DCM. Please do not hesitate to contact me. Note ---- we have 2 dogs ((b) (6) is 2 years old and to the best of my knowledge healthy and on the same food). EON-360699	7/27/2018 19:04	Charlee Bear Dog Treats with Cheese & Egg	My wife recently had a very traumatic experience when she pulled a dead cooked whole mouse from our dogs pet treats. It was obvious the mouse was “cooked” and packaged in with the treats, a popular brand that we’ve purchased for our pet for the past seven years. I called the company to complain and they wanted me to return the mouse and packaging, both of which I still have, but refused to return as this is my only evidence of what occurred. I did send pictures and they called me daily for a week or so, however we could not work out an acceptable arrangement for return of the mouse, remaining treats and packaging. My dog seems okay, but will no longer eat this brand of treats. My wife is still traumatized over this whole experience, and so far no known health problems. We kept the treats in a sealed lock-n-lock container in our kitchen cabinet along with our food, occasionally pulling one out of the container for our dog. When we purchase these treats in 1lb bags we dump the contents into a lock-n-lock container immediately upon opening so there is zero chance the mouse came from my house, rather it was mixed in with the treats. Plus, we’ve never seen a mouse in our house anyway, and the subject mouse (head, body, eyeballs, whiskers, et al) was cooked. Fyi, the treats are egg/cheese flavor crunchy treats about the size of a nickel. I don’t think my wife will ever get over this and I’m not too fond of the situation either, not knowing what poison this rat may have been exposed to. The brand of treats is Charlee Bears Products. The main office is in Madison WI. The company representative I communicated with on several phone calls is Charlee Bear’s Brand Manager, Ava Olsen. Following is her contact information: Phone: 608-238-5252; Email: ava_olsen@wixon.com Their address is Charlee Bear Products, POB 5174, Madison WI 53705. The vet noticed that he had a heart murmur. On April 13, 2018 we made a cardiologist appointment for (b) (6). At the appointment he was diagnosed with Dilated Cardiomyopathy via an Echocardiogram. The Dr. Suggested a blood test for Taurine due to that with new found research a deficiency in Taurine can cause DCM. The Dr. also suggested that we switch foods since there was recent research also showing that possible Kangaroo diet, lentils, peas, and "grain free" food where possible causing DCM. (b) (6) was on Zigniture Kangaroo Dry food from about 12 weeks old. In the meantime (b) (6) was placed on Benazipril, Vetmedin, Fish Oil, and Taurine Supplement. His food was also switched to Earthbound Ventures Rabbit and Pumpkin because I noticed it did not contain Lentils and had Taurine in it as a supplement. About a week or two later the Taurine result came back normal. We continued with his medications and his food. On July 18th (b) (6) went back to the Cardiologist for a follow up visit. His heart function had actually increased a little bit and his heart walls had thickened a little bit as well. We opted to continue on his program and reassess in about 6 months unless anything changed for the worse before then. I then saw the FDA warning about "grain free" food and DCM. The new food we put (b) (6) on was still "grain free" and I noticed it had peas. I consulted the Cardiologist and we decided to play it safe and change his food again to one that was not "grain free" and did not contain any kind of legumes, lentils and such.	35	Months	Berger Picard or Sheepdog - Picardy	Dog	56	Pound

At 1 pm he vomited up all his breakfast which had not passed into the small intestinal tract. Immediately took (b) (6) to the weekend animal ER clinic & he was diagnosed with gastritis & treated with injection of anti-emetic & oral Rx for diarrhea. At 7 pm (b) (6) ate 3 tbsp of bland diet mixture & took first oral Rx for diarrhea. (b) (6) was acting woozy, slightly unsteady on his feet, but could walk slowly. (b) (6) went to bed but woke up at 2 am on (b) (6) coughing, so we immediately took him back to weekend animal ER & was given an injection to help stop the coughing. At 7 am notified regular vet of last 24-hr. events. By 11:30 am when we got (b) (6) to his regular vet, (b) (6) was drooling foam profusely & panting. (b) (6) vet looks at xrays taken by ER clinic & notes, takes another chest xray which shows lots of air in the stomach & esophagus, slightly enlarged heart, enlargement in the mediastinal area. No fever & very minute elevated white count. His vet put him on Lasix IV & broad spectrum antibiotics IV to combat any possibility of pneumonia. By 6 pm (b) (6) is stable, responding well to Lasix IV, but we had to return him to ER clinic because his vet wanted him to continue on administration of Lasix & antibiotics at 8 hr. intervals instead of waiting 12 hrs. until his vet was open. 12 hrs. later while at ER clinic, (b) (6) spiked a 106 temp., collapses in oxygen chamber, passes out in oxygen chamber & was placed on a ventilator to help him breathe. (b) (6) vet was contacted & agreed with ER vet that he could not be taken off the ventilator to be returned to his regular vet's clinic at 7 am on (b) (6) (b) (6). We had to have (b) (6) euthanized. 48 hrs. from healthy dog to dead dog. ER vet's diagnosis of cause of death was pneumonia.	10	Years	Spaniel - Cocker American	Dog	35	Pound

EON-360192	7/24/2018 14:08	Blue Buffalo Life Protection Adult Lamb & Brown Rice Dry Food	Dog began vomiting Saturday morning. Started as clear slimy vomit with a few chunks in it. She ate her morning food a few hours later and then proceeded to vomit that up and continue vomiting throughout the day. The vomit progressively darkened and became dark yellow bile colored. In the afternoon, around 2pm, she was let out and strained hard. Her bowel movement looked like watery strawberry jam. Took her to a local emergency vet hospital where they gave her a shot for the nausea and prescribed antibiotics for the diarrhea. She did stop vomiting but the bloody diarrhea got worse through the night and she became more lethargic. Took her back to the ER around 3am and she was admitted around 6am. They took radiographs to rule out any obstruction. There was no obstruction. She was given meds, i.v. fluids, bloodwork was taken. Diagnosis was hemorrhagic gastroenteritis with no specific cause determined. She has been on meds and sick since then and as of today prognosis is still guarded. When I call my mother, in (b) (6), her small mixed breed dog was experiencing the same symptoms (and I live in (b) (6)). We discussed their food and they are both eating Blue Buffalo and were both healthy prior to this incident. Not certain, but want to report this in case the food is making dogs sick. I reported to Chewy.com where we order the food and to Blue Buffalo. Food she was eating was ordered/shipped on 05/26 and is the Blue Buffalo Life Protection Lamb and Brown Rice 30lb bag. Because we open and store the food in an airtight container I cannot provide an exact lot/bag number. I did ask Chewy if they keep any records of this information and they are getting back to me. We were seen at (b) (6) Emergency Hospital over the weekend but I am providing my primary vet information as a contact as they have been sent the records. While (b) (6) has had other treats, these have also been eaten by our other dog who has no symptoms. Our other dog is on different food as of mid June and he is not ill.	2	Years	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	51	Pound

EON-360190	7/24/2018 13:32	Pedigree Chopped Ground Dinner with Chicken	(b) (6) is a tiny Pekingese/Poodle mix, less than 10 lb. He has eaten Pedigree canned food, only Chicken or Chicken & Rice flavors, for years, mixed with a little Iams Toy & Small Breed Proactive Health dry food. He gets 3 heaping teaspoons of meat with a sprinkling of the Iams (less than 1/4 cup) twice a day. I opened a new can last Friday evening and he ate the first serving; on Saturday morning he nibbled at it; but after that, he did not seem interested in eating it. I tried just the Pedigree without the dry food Sat. evening and Sun. morning. He ate a few bites, then walked away. He almost cowed down when I tried to get him to eat more. He became lethargic, and had diarrhea for 3 days. He woke me up twice in the middle of the night to go out with diarrhea. He did not make it outside first 3 times. He just laid next to me most of the weekend, wouldn't play, uncharacteristically ignored the squirrels in the yard. He would sniff the dog food, but would not eat it. I bought a can of Iams on Sunday afternoon and he ate it as if he was starving. He would not touch the Pedigree. The diarrhea subsided, and yesterday he seemed much more active. I read on Consumer Affairs that there had been several other reports concerning the Pedigree canned food in the past 2 months with very similar symptoms.	11	Years	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	9.5	Pound

This is a case we saw in June of 2018 for a cardiac workup including an echocardiogram. The 1 year old puppy has a heart murmur, and we diagnosed her with Dilated Cardiomyopathy on echocardiogram. She was being fed grain-free food since she was adopted by her family, and they actually signed a contract with the dog breeder stating that they would feed grain free. Chronic history of PU PD. At the time was eating a limited ingredient diet Acana (either duck or pork). Whole blood taurine level result was 56 (low). No known familial history of heart disease. Began medical management w/furosemide, enalapril, pimobendan, and l-carnitine and taurine supplementation.  Subsequent rechecks showed improvement in overall heart size as well as contractility. Switched from Acana diet to Fromm - variety of flavors. (b) (6) was presented to the Pet+ER early 10/18/17 after experiencing an episode of collapse. The owners report that he was looking spacey when he was laying down. He stood up and fainted and then vomited his food and cardiac medications. Prior to this episode there had been no increase in his respiratory rate or effort and there was no noted trigger (i.e. excitement, activity) prior to the episode. No additional episodes have been reported. At this time, the Lasix has been discontinued. Prior to that he was on a raw diet but started having some type of allergy reaction so was put on this grain free food. During the week of May 14, 2018, (b) (6) started to develop a cough which we didn't give much thought to at the time. It was also about this time that he started to not eat as he normally did. During the week of May 27, my family and I were on vacation in (b) (6) and my parents were watching (b) (6) which they did often so (b) (6) was a comfortable at their home as he was at our's. My mom noticed that (b) (6) did not have any energy and was not eating. She took him to our local vet (b) (6), where (b) (6) saw (b) (6). (b) (6) does not like the vet and the first thing she noticed was that he let her touch him. She thought that was strange and listened to his heart at which time she said it did not sound right. They took an x-ray and determined that his heart was enlarged and that there was fluid around his heart and lungs. She referred (b) (6) to the (b) (6) of (b) (6) Vet Hospital where they were more equipped to handle problems of this nature. The (b) (6) wanted to see (b) (6) immediately. They ran several tests and kept (b) (6) overnight to give him an IV and other meds hoping to get this under control. My parents were advised that (b) (6) was in congestive heart failure and had Dilated Cardio Myopathy. He was sent home the next day with pills in hopes that he would get better (b) (6) continued to get weaker and when we returned home on Friday, we could not believe it was the same dog as he was weak, had lost weight and literally did not move. He could not get up to greet us as he was too weak and now he had diarrhea. On Saturday morning, June 2, I again called our local vet and (b) (6) advised that we should get some Pepto Bismal and some baby sweet potatoes and get that into him. We did that but he still did not get better. On Monday morning, (b) (6), the decision was made to euthanize him. He was such a good dog and excellent with our 1 year old baby. The veterinarian said that the food had to be contaminated because the fact all of the cats were reacting the same. I did this, and all was good for most; the exception was for 3, 2 of which did not make it. The third recovered a few days later and had an ongoing fever for weeks.  However, over the rest of that night and day, one cat would vomit, followed by another and so on. One hearing another vomit would trigger another to start. Upwards of 100 times before said and done. EON-360008	7/22/2018 16:20	Wellness Pate Turkey Dinner Smooth Loaf Grain Free  Information on bottom of can: Best by 17 Jan 21 7HTKS4 (or 7WTKS4) 18:57	For the last 4-6 weeks (estimated) I have noticed that all four of my cats, began having some mild periodic GI upset. I was not concerned because it was periodic. They have been fed the very same food, the Wellness Turkey Pate. The last delivery of food I received from my local pet food store on June 29th resulted in all four cats coming down with diarrhea with blood in the stool after feeding it to them. I do not remember the exact date I discontinued the food, or exactly when the diarrhea began, but can estimate. I took (b) (6) who was the worst off, first, to see the vet. Along with him, I brought stool samples from all four cats to be examined, since I could not bring four at one time. The doctor they saw knows all four cats since adopted as kittens. My doctor gave me Metronidazole pills to treat the kitties. I sought another prescription for liquid Metronidazole from the Pet Emergency and Specialty Center the following Saturday, since my vet was closed, and I needed to try the liquid for the two who couldn't be pillled. All cats are now without symptoms except (b) (6) who continues to have some solid stools and less formed stools with some intermittent diarrhea but no blood in the stool. I fed them a bland diet for several days and then bought a new batch of Wellness Turkey from a different Pet Food Store, Pet Express in (b) (6), to see if they had issues with it. They are so far doing well on a new batch.	8	Years	Manx	Cat	12.88	Pound

Pet dealt with a chronic cough for appx 2 years, owners had previously declined all workup. Pet presented to me early in (b) (6) for an annual exam, but reported that as of that morning she was having trouble breathing and was wheezing a lot. On exam the pet's signs were consistent with potential laryngeal paralysis, and we discussed possible causes with owner. Due to her history of chronic cough we suspected pathology in the thoracic cavity affecting the recurrent laryngeal nerve and took thoracic radiographs. Her heart was notably enlarged in all chambers, and she had signs of widespread alveolar patterns and edema. Suspected dilated cardiomyopathy vs possible metastatic neoplasia, O declined workup. Was started on a trial of furosemide and pet improved drastically, and was then started on long term furosemide and enalapril. Pet's disease progressed over the next few months and she was euthanized. I was going to have his teeth cleaned so I called the vet to see if they would do a heart test before they put him under. They thought I was nuts but low and behold he had an elevated ProBNP. He also showed enlarged heart upon X-ray. My vet asked about his diet because she had just heard about grain free foods causing DCM in dogs. I began consistently feed both dogs "Castor &amp; Pollux Small Breed Grain Free dog food". This is the only food I fed them for around 9-10 months. In April 2018, my dog (b) (6) seemed ill and very bloated. She had been coughing/choking on and off. We immediately took her to the vet once we realized the issue was becoming worse. This time we took her to our family full service vet instead of the vet that we felt should have noticed her condition in July 2017. The vet performed x-rays and diagnosed her with SEVERE DCM. In the x-ray, her heart is so huge that it takes up her ENTIRE rib cage and was starting to choke her. Her stomach was full of fluid. She is currently on diuretics and Vetmedin, but her condition is serious. My husband and I do not have children, so to us, our dogs are our "babies". We have been providing her with the best care possible but her condition came on so suddenly that we were not able to catch it sooner. As soon as she was diagnosed, I also contacted the vet that told me she was perfectly healthy in July 2017, they seemed extremely confused as to how they could have not noticed. The second she was diagnosed in April, I immediately suspected their food because my other dog seemed to be experiencing subtle issues. At that time, everyone treated me like I was crazy. I have copies of all medical records for both of my dogs along with x-rays. I have receipts for some of my dog food purchases. At the suggestion of our local pet food store about 2 years ago, I started giving him Candia's Under the Sun Grain Free with Lamb to see if that might help his symptoms. At some point during this time frame, we noticed our Spinone having an occasional cough, as if he had something in his throat he was trying to get out. The cough was very sporadic, so didn't concern us too much, and when we asked vet, she didn't express great concern. We had him in at the vet 5 months ago as he had developed arthritis and was having difficulty getting up and down, and his pace had slowed. We began giving him medication for that. 3 months ago, the coughing became persistent. An examination showed his chest was full of fluid and there was likely little we could do for him. We were advised to keep an eye on his breathing and see vet for euthanization when we felt it was time. Within a couple days, his behavior showed us it was time to say good-bye. We have no way of knowing for sure if the grain-free dog food he was eating led to his condition, but after seeing this FDA report, I felt it was important to report our experience.	11	Years	Pointing Dog - Italian	Dog	90	Pound

After he was diagnosed I did hours of research trying to find out more about the disease and it led me to two facts: 1. DCM is believe to be passed genetically through some breed, Great Danes being one of those breeds and 2. Recently more and more studies have linked grain free diets to Taurine deficiency and the development of DCM. Unfortunately in his case both things were working against him. While there is really no way of knowing if it was something that was passed to him genetically, a result of his diet, or a combination of the two I feel it needed to be reported.	3	Years	Great Dane	Dog	145	Pound

Although I have fed them multiple brands throughout their lives, the following food brands/formulas were each fed to them for at least 1-2 years, over a total span of 6-9 years: California Naturals Kangaroo and Red Lentils Formula, Zignature Kangaroo Formula (contains peas, chickpeas, red lentils, and green lentils), Pure Vita Venison and Red Lentil Entree, and Fromm Lamb and Lentil. Note the overwhelming trend of lentils. Basset hounds are not genetically prone to heart issues. What are the odds that I have 2 genetically unrelated basset hounds that both ate lentils their entire lives and both ended up dilated cardiomyopathy? I am not able to submit this report unless I name a specific product, so I am naming the brand of food they both ate last before I became aware of the potential dangers of lentils.	9	Years	Hound - Basset	Dog	65	Pound

EON-359268	7/15/2018 14:16	Fromm Chicken a la Veg	Hello, I have been feeding Fromm to my pugs for about 2 years. I most frequently purchase Fromm Gold in the black and gold bag, but occasionally I will buy a bag of Chicken a la Veg, which I did on 7/2 at Pet Me Scratch Me in (b) (6). Coinciding with the time I started this bag of food, two of my dogs became ill with vomiting incidents. Although this does not prove causation, I wanted to file a report in case other pet owners have the same experience. Two days after the first vomiting incident, one of my dogs stopped eating and in the course of one day became severely dehydrated and listless. Blood test results indicated elevated liver enzymes off the charts. He is currently on day 3 hospitalization with IV fluid treatment and antibiotics, and despite this, his liver values have worsened upon retesting and things are not looking good. When I initially took him in, my vet had advised me to retire the bag of food, so immediately we returned it to the store 7/13 and got a bag of Fromm Gold to replace it. Meanwhile, my other dog at home has vomited each of the last 3 days. I sent a message to Fromm today, 7/15, since it is the only way to contact them on a Sunday. I kept a baggie of the food so that I can have it tested if necessary. Where do you recommend sending the food to be tested? To my disappointment, my vet indicated they don't really do that for clients, but I will ask again. I am heartbroken that I may likely lose at least one dog and desperately seeking answers in the event that the food is implicated in these incidents. The UPC on the bag of Chicken a la Veg is 072705116102, with a best by date of 10/20/2019 and numbers behind it, which hopefully identify the batch, are B18 1555.	11	Years	Pug	Dog	17.3	Pound

(vet is even amazed) I switched his kibble when my Chihuahua started gaining weight as she aged as he seemed to like it,(she has reacted as well) a few months ago. I went ahead and also switched to a different kibble for my larger dog, a mixed breed, from the same company. The small ones get FROMM Grain-Free Weight Mgt and the bigger dog gets FROMM Adult Grain-Free. NONE of these dogs ever had health issues. The Miniature Pinscher, Vincent & the Chihuahua, (b) (6) were both diagnosed with CVM recently after being on this food for 5-6 months. My mixed breed 55# (now only 48#) dog (b) (6) is lethargic, weak, has collapsed a few times and is also now coughing but haven't got him in to see the Vet yet as this just started the previous week. This is WAY too coincidental. After reading the article from the FDA stating CVM probs with grain free dog food containing legumes (lentils, peas, etc) and potatoes as their main ingredients, as my new food indeed has, I am immediately discontinuing use. The Min Pin is just finishing up a medication regimine which has not made one difference and he is not improving at all. The Chihuahua has been on meds since May 1, 2018, "stable" and the Mixed Breed is also deteriorating. Vet thinks just "old age" but they have never been unhealthy dogs. He even stated my 15 year old Min Pin, half blind, arthritic, etc., really IS quite healthy. Until now. Same symptoms as the Chi. EON-359192	7/14/2018 9:04	Merrick Grain-free Real Chicken and Sweet Potatoes	(b) (6) had been on vet prescribed diet for many years due to a urinary crystals episode early in life. I had been reading about the potential negative effects of long term use of these prescription diets which it turned out have very little actual nutrition - hair loss, skin issues etc. He was also starting to have some elevated levels in blood work indicative of Cushing a. I kept coming back to the prescription diet. So did a little digging and started giving him a supplement to keep the crystals issue under control and switched him to Merrick dog food in May of 2016 - all recognizable ingredients including sweet potatoes and potatoes within top 5 ingredients. In Nov of 2016, he was diagnosed with coronary heart failure. The vet was shocked and said usually there is a heart murmur that would have been detected prior to this condition but in his case it seems to have come out of nowhere/quickly. He was prescribed 4 drugs he would have to be on for the remainder of his life - it was indicated most dogs diagnosed have a life expectancy of 12-24 months after diagnosis. (b) (6) had been on a low sodium diet since the diagnosis and as Merrock was not listed as low sodium we switched him. This morning I read an FDA report indicating a possible connection between diet and heart disease in dogs. Specifically it listed potatoes as a main ingredient. And indicated the time of use could be as short as a few months. It is possible it is a coincidence that he was on a diet with potatoes and peas for several months before a sudden onset of heart disease but, in case there is any link at all, I'm filing this report to help save other well meaning pet owners and their pups from this horrible disease.	13	Years	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	23	Pound

EON-359181	7/14/2018 0:48	No longer have access to the package it was called venison and potato	I just read an article about potato as a main ingredient causing cardiomyopathy in dogs who are not prone to this condition. I had a Yorkie who died in 2005 at the age of 10. For a few years prior he had developed a very itchy allergic skin condition that caused him to scratch constantly until his skin was raw and covered with tiny blisters. Up until this he was in excellent health. The vet recommended a potato and venison diet which he was given exclusively for a few years and the condition cleared up. However in the late fall of 2004 I noticed he was coughing and brought him to the vet who told me his heart was enlarged and put him on a blood pressure pill. Sadly in early 2005 he developed congestive heart failure and it was necessary to emergently euthanize him within 24 hours after the symptoms began, as his heart failure could not be brought under control and he was suffering. He was only 10 1/2. I had no idea this condition could have been caused by the food the vet recommended and that we bought through the vet. When I read about it this evening I thought I should submit a report even though my dog died in 2005. And when we went to the vet I realized she had gone from almost 15 lbs to 12 lbs. My family told me it was nothing, and they didn't notice any difference. For the next few months, I was paranoid of his breathing and constantly monitoring him. In early February 2018, my worry reached a peak when he was visibly losing weight and his ribs were beginning to show through significantly. I set up an appointment with my regular vet, and an x-ray was conducted that revealed possible fluid build up in the abdomen. I was referred to a specialist in (b) (6). Many tests were conducted there, and the vets initially thought he had a hernia. He went into surgery and was fully opened only to discover that he did not have a hernia. After further tests and additional vet involvement (a cardiologist was added to the team), it was discovered that (b) (6) has chyle build up in his chest cavity due to his heart working improperly. This lead to a diagnosis of Dilated Cardiomyopathy. She was vomiting within an hour after eating. On the 4th day of vomiting, it was time to take her to the vet because she was getting very weak. I was concerned about dehydration at this point. In addition to the profuse vomiting, she became very lethargic, was hiding from everyone (anti-social), and had stopped eating and drinking water altogether. Blood tests were taken at the vet. Some of her numbers were off, but nothing alarming. The vet then decided to do an X-ray to check for any blockages. With the x-ray, the vet found that her stomach was very enlarged and very inflamed. They then decided to do another x-ray with oral barium contrast this time. The contrast flowed through with no issues, she had no blockages. They had no explanation for why her stomach was so enlarged and so inflamed and gave her an anti-nausea injection at the clinic and also sent us home with oral anti-nausea tablets. It was then that I noticed my 2 year old male cat is also vomiting after he eats. I finally put it together that it had to be their food which I promptly threw away Wednesday night (7/11/2018). EON-359101	7/13/2018 11:48	California Natural Kangaroo and Red Lentils	Another dog in the household (b) (6) has food allergies. California Naturals, Kangaroo and Lentils was suggested as a hypoallergenic food option. I fed this food to both dogs ( (b) (6) ) for approximately 6 years. In September 2016, (b) (6) had an episode where she was in distress, and i took her to an emergency veterinarian. by the time he saw her, she seemed fine to him. i followed up with her regular vet same day, and they ran bloodwork and took an x-ray of her abdomen (not chest). neither vet thought there was anything wrong with her. the bloodwork did not lead to a diagnosis. On January 27, 2017, my Portuguese Water Dog was having trouble breathing. Her regular vet took an s-ray, saw an enlarged heart and referred her to a cardiologist who performed an echocardiogram. She was diagnosed with Dilated Cardiomyopathy on January 27, 2017. She stayed on the kangaroo/lentil diet until May 2018 when I ran out of the dog food and could no longer purchase it. I transitioned both dogs to Addiction Kangaroo and apples (it has peas). (b) (6) has been taking pimobendin, furosimide, benazapril, and spiranolactone as well as taurine and l-carnatine supplements since her diagnosis (January 2017). I took in my third dog in July 2016. he has also been eating this food.	8.5	Years	Portuguese Water Dog	Dog	40	Pound

EON-359094	7/13/2018 11:16	Zignature Venison Formula	Due to my dog having allergies, I have been trying to find a suitable grain free food that he can tolerate without itching or redness of his ears. We started feeding Zignature grain free venison formula approximately a year ago and before that fed Pure Vita grain free. In March, my dog started coughing, had lack of energy and lack of appetite. I brought him to the vet thinking he had kennel cough and after an x ray, he was diagnosed with dilated cardiomyopathy and given two months to live. I read an article about taurine deficiency causing DCM and asked her to draw a taurine level but she said only cats have taurine deficiency so she didn't do this. I have since read more articles about dogs being diagnosed with DCM after being on a legume heavy diet and wish I would have insisted on a taurine level. I have since started supplementing taurine and L carnitine to my dog's diet along with the three heart medications he needs to take twice daily and he has survived four months so far. I contacted Zignature and implored them to add taurine to their food and a representative wrote me back and said they are going to start adding this. While it is probably too late to save my dog, it is my hope that many other dogs and owners will not have to go down this terrible road by simply having dog food companies make sure they change up their foods by adding taurine and not adding so many legumes. I am also cooking fresh ground venison to add to my dog's diet and only giving half the amount of kibble. The heart meds are really expensive as well. The Vetmedin alone is about $3 a pill and he has to take 1 1/2 pills daily. I am asking you to please step in and save future dogs from an untimely death due to pet food. I did so much research trying to find the absolute best food to help my allergic dog and I rue the day I started feeding him Zignature. He is a rescue and we do not know his breed but the vet thinks he is Am Staff/hound and the shelter he came from listed him as a boxer/hound mix, so he might be a combination of all four. Thank you for your time.	4	Years	Unknown	Dog	70	Pound

EON-359051	7/12/2018 16:48	Kirkland Signature Nature's Domain Salmon Meal & Sweet Potato Dog Food (Grain Free)	In CY 2012, my Saluki Taku was part of a targeted cardiac study conducted at (b) (6) State University. As part of the study, (b) (6) wore a Holter vest and received an echocardiogram. The results of his screening indicated no heart issues/defects - his heart was healthy. On (b) (6) (b) (6) was diagnosed by both my vet and a veterinary cardiologist as having congestive heart failure, severely advanced dilated cardiomyopathy, heart arrhythmia and a grossly enlarged left heart ventricle (left ventricle was nearly 2x it's normal size while the right ventricle was normal sized). He was placed on a host of cardiac medications that helped improve his quality of life for several weeks, but the disease had progressed too far. On (b) (6) we made the decision to euthanize him. Prior to his diagnosis in February 2018, (b) (6) was aging gracefully and was an overall healthy, active dog. He developed a cough one morning and upon vet check we received the shocking diagnosis. For several years we had been feeding (b) (6) Kirkland Signature Nature's Domain Salmon Meal &amp; Sweet Potato Grain-Free dog food. Occasionally we alternated between this food and the chicken based grain free dog food (same brand). Purchased in large 35 lb bags at Costco. Neither the cardiologist who diagnosed (b) (6), nor the team at (b) (6) were able to explain to me why it was that he developed such serious, severe heart disease at age 11/12 after being cardiac cleared in CY 2012. (b) (6) did have two litter-mates who died very young from arrhythmia (they died under the age of four); but the rest of the dogs in the litter were heart healthy as was (b) (6) I read the FDA report issued today, July 12, 2018 (FDA Investigating Potential Connection Between Diet and Cases of Canine Heart Disease) with great shock and sadness. Based upon what I have read and my own experience with my dog, I am extremely concerned that the Kirkland brand grain-free dog food I have used for years (containing peas, potatoes and potato starch as high-content ingredients), may have led to to my dog's severe heart disease, suffering and eventual death. Until he awoke with a cough that morning in February 2018 , we had no indication whatsoever that he was so sick with advanced heart disease.	12	Years	Saluki	Dog	60	Pound

If (b) (6) records regarding his heart disease from my vet (b) (6) or the cardiologist will be helpful in your research to identify/confirm that these grain-free diets are a contributing factor or are the root cause of DCM in these dogs , please let me know. Thank you.

EON-358044	7/2/2018 7:56	Hill's Prescription Diet Urinary Care c/d Multicare	I needed to put cat on a premade food as we were going away for some time, and wanted a dry food to give him. Vet sent in a prescription to Chewy.com for new food. Cat did well on first bag of food, no problems. When I started the second bag of food he started to have problems, which I did not recognize as food related at first. He would vomit undigested food several hours after eating. He clawed at bathroom door and howled terribly. Then attempted to enter shower with water running. He drank copius amounts of water. When I realized that the problem was the new bag of food, I stopped immediately. He was better within a day or so.	15	Years	American Shorthair	Cat	17	Pound

I searched online and was unable to find the pet recall but decided to check the food.  I laid out papertowels and started sifting through the food. There are tiny black hard hair like elements protruding from many pieces of the food. Fed 1/3 serving to cat; let dog lick the spoon. During the early morning hours dog was panting and restless. A visit to his crate revealed 2 large piles of undigested food - from his supper of Blue Buffalo kibble, rice and plain yogurt plus his medication. Additionally, he had defecated in the crate. None of these are usual outcomes. I let him outside around 4 am, where he had diarrhea. Entry back into the house resulted in spontaneous spewing of a colorless, mucoid liquid - 3 events in livingroom; one in bedroom. I removed any residual kibble and left him with water. Tomorrow morning I will introduce kibble. Around 8 am, walked (b) (6) to the park where he assumed the position to poop. However, the result was a forceful exit of a clear, mucoid sustance. I am monitoring him carefully and did report the incident to the market where the product was purchased. They removed the remaining can of the same brand from the shelf. There is also a sick cat (b) (6) involved in this problem for whom I will file a separate report. The only item the 2 shared was Nutrish - first and last time purchase. Within the first 30 mins 2 of my dogs were taking each others bones so I took them away and set them up. My other dog (b) (6) had gone upstairs to eat his. Later that night (maybe 2 hours later) I put my 2 youngest dogs in their crates and (b) (6) came into my room as I got ready for bed. He seemed just fine; completely alert. I picked (b) (6) up, put him on the bed like we do every night and he laid down for bed with me. I later woke up at 2am and found (b) (6) throwing up in my bed. He was throwing up this Busy Bone because I could see it in his vomit. I placed him on the floor and got him into the bathroom which is in my bedroom so if he got sick again it would be on the tile floor. I cleaned off my bed and went into the bathroom where he had thrown up again. While I cleaned that up and then began changing my bedsheets, he walked downstairs. It was very visible he didn't feel well. He has thrown up in the past and normally he'll get some water and lay down until he feels better. I called for (b) (6) to come back upstairs and he did. I changed out his water bowl and showed him the fresh water and he decided to go to his chair that he lays under in my room. I thought as long as he's comfortable, it was fine. I could hear him breathing and he seemed to not be getting sick any more so we laid back down. I woke up 2 hours later for work to find his deceased on my bedroom floor. When my husband woke up from me yelling for him, he found vomit of this bone all over the downstairs floor. We unfortunately didn't even have time to get him to a vet to be seen before he passed away; literally in a matter of 2 hours. My other 2 dogs seemed to be okay but my youngest Pomeranian did begin having diarrhea. He recovered pretty quickly after sleeping a lot and seems to be doing fine. He and my Golden Retriever puppy had very little of these bones. My Golden Retriever did not experience any issues that I noticed. I am so thankful I took these bones away from them or I truly believe the end results would have been much worse. We have been feeding the cat Royal Canin Digest Sensitive for years. Two things happened; we replenished the wet food AND gave her some dry food (Royal Canin Intense Hairball 34) because she had been having some hairball issues which she has from time to time. Over about a week from the time we started the new wet food and dry she started eating less and less; drinking less as well. Ultimately she stopped eating altogether, throwing up and dropping weight quickly (down to 6 lbs). We took her to the vet and then veterinary hospital. We had various tests and they could find nothing wrong other then extensive gas in her stomach and high kidney levels. She was rehydrated and started on an antibiotic. We've noticed that on the days this happens she's not as active and seems depressed like and right before she throws up she has a certain appearance on her face that you can just tell she doesn't feel good and doesn't want to drink water after. In the vomit there are always pieces that are good sized about half inch to an inch big each that you can clearly notice is the dream bone treat along with pieces of her food. She also has diarrhea on these days. First time I noticed it happen I remember thinking the treat might be the cause and before I could let my bf know (the other owner of her) I found out he had already given the dogs the treat again the next day. I let him know and he said she was fine that day so we have been trying eliminating certain protein sources of diets thinking possibly allergy related only because she had recently started itching also with no sign of parasites externally or in stool. The times she has vomited have all been the days they've gotten the dream bones which say are easier to digest and better for dogs but then why after several hours is she throwing up with pieces of it this big still? It hasn't been a specific flavor we give our dogs and each time she throws up no matter the flavor and is the only time she throws up from what we can tell. The treat is the only thing consistent at this point on the days this happens.	2	Years	Bulldog - French	Dog	30	Pound

I received it and noticed the date on the label said 2015. I immediately called the company and was prompted to leave a message. The next day a person called me and left a message on my home phone stating that the product is good for 5 years and therefore safe to use. I returned their call and spoke to the woman and said I was not going to give a 3 yr old product to my dog to eat. She insisted the product was still good and doesn't suffer any deterioration over time because of their unique way of processing. I still refused and asked if they didn't have any fresher product in their warehouse, that I would want my money back. She said I should call back later and ask for Mike. She said to wait about an hour and a half. I agreed. 15 minutes later, she called me back and said that the date on the label was the date the label was printed, not the date the product was made. I asked her where, then, was I to find the information about the product's date. She said the date the product was made was in the LOT# above the barcode. On my bottle, the LOT# was completely smeared off except for the letters LOT#. I told her I was not comfortable not knowing when it was made and since her first explanation contradicted this, I requested a refund. I was concerned that they were selling old product. She assured me this was not so and seemed insulted that I didn't take her word for it. Instead of issuing a refund she said they would send me a new bottle that would have the LOT# clearly visible, so I could see the date of manufacture. The new bottle arrived with a clearly printed LOT#, but it was not written in the form of a date. So I googled the LOT# and got no results relevant. 			the bar code. This gave me a date of 2014. Even older. SO I called again. I told them I had concerns that the product was too old to use and that I had left a bad review on line. Upon hearing I had left a bad review, she quickly had me speak to a man who said he was the VP. His name is Stan. He told me the LOT# was the only information on the bottle that mattered. He said that the other date was when the label was printed and the barcode date I found online was when the barcode was registered. I told him the LOT# was not in the form of a date and he said that the last 2 digits in the LOT# indicate the year. The last two numbers were 18. I reluctantly agreed to try the product. He took the opportunity to attempt to get me to buy other accompanying products from them, which I refused. I started using the product and within 12 hours my dog got severe diarrhea. So I stopped. I put her on a hamburger and rice diet and it cleared up. I tried once more to confirm it was this product and not some other issue, and again, she was very sick from it. I called the company back around the 11th or 12th of June, and told them I was having negative effects and wanted to return it. This time a different woman named Crystal said it was normal for the dog to get some diarrhea when they "detox" from such a powerful probiotic. She urged me to try to keep my dog on it at a very small dose. She, also, tried to tell me if I was using their accompanying products, the dog would not be suffering so, and tried to initiate another purchase. I refused. I waited for the "detox" effect to come under control and use the tiniest sprinkle of it as directed by Crystal. However, this time the dog's diarrhea was not just clearing up even though I had stopped the product use. The "detox" effect they described was not rectifying. The dog remained in a severe state of diarrhea, even after the product was discontinued. I brought her to the vet and she was put on a strong antibiotic, Metronidazole, to fight bacteria and parasites in her gut.

			Prior to calling the company the final time, to say I simply will not be using it and again request my refund, I looked carefully at the label again. This time, the LOT# on the second bottle, which was clearly printed on the bottle when it arrived, had completely dissipated from the bottle. It was gone, without a trace. I was shocked. There was no sign of a smudge or a smear, at all. I cannot even speculate how this occurred. I read online that some printer inks can do this when exposed to ultra-violet light. But, it happened so quickly, while just sitting in the pantry of my home, where there is no exposure to this kind of strong light. It was not smeared, or in any way rubbed. There was no trace of the information. No trace of the ink. The ONLY information on the label that evaporated was the LOT#. So, now I have 2 bottles of product from this company, which, made my dog get severe diarrhea, and according to their own VP, the only information that can be found on their label or their bottle, that can indicate when the product was made, is the LOT# and on BOTH bottles that information is illegible (the first bottle) and the ink has evaporated completely,(the second bottle) in less than 3 weeks. Making the manufacture date of the product untraceable, which, brings me back to my original concern, which was the original reply I was given by their company, that they are selling a product that is 3 years old. And the product has caused my pet to become very ill and the company continues to urge me to continue use of the product despite her reaction. On my last conversation, which took place today, I initiated the refund again, with a telephone sales person and was almost immediately transferred to Stan, the VP, who grew angry with me for questioning why the labels are so unaccountable to the consumer. He said that I seemed to be accusing them of doing it on purpose. I said that I used to own my own business also, and that to expect my customers to trust me beyond any accountability, and especially when their was some time of product issue would be unthinkable to me. My product was furniture. There was no loved ones lives at stake but I still went above and beyond to make sure my customers were happy. To expect me to not be concerned about product dates of a consumable product for my pet, which has clearly caused her health problems and that BOTH LOT#s have suspicious issues, rendering them untraceable, that would

			cause any person red flags, was not realistic on his part. I told him I have no reason to blindly trust you. He had the gall to attempt one last time to sell me an accompanying product that would rectify the severity of her reaction to the first product saying this "detox" effect is normal. I told him that if the detox effect is so severe without the other product, then they should never be sold separately in the first place. A dog cannot go for weeks at a time with diarrhea induced by his product. I told him she could have become dehydrated and that with this supposed "normal detox" happening, she has no chance to absorb the nutrients from her food and she may have gotten much sicker, if I had indeed followed their advice and kept her on it despite her being sick from it. I have photos of the bottles when they arrived showing the labels. I took the photos to add to my online review. I still have the two bottles that can be examined to determine why their labels are leaving the customer with no way to trace their date of manufacture. It is my concern that the company isis fact selling 3 year old product and that they are, in fact, manipulating the product labels to conceal this from their customers. I will be able to provide you with the photos and the bottles. Please let me know if you will be pursuing this or of I should be taking my complaint to another agency and if so, which agency you would send me to. Thank You. (b) (6) Company info N'Zymes.com A Division of BioPet, Inc. 8298 ArvilleSt. Suite 103 Las Vegas, NV 89193 877-816-6500 702-228-0097

EON-356446	6/13/2018 13:16	Iams Proactive Health Minichunks	My dog recently died a horrible death and I suspect the Iams dog food that she was eating. When I noticed that my other dog refused to eat any more of the Iams dry dog food, I Googled Iams and found lots of people saying that their dog died a terrible death like my sweet baby girl did. What can be done? I have no idea where to start. I did keep the bag of food. For a couple of days she seemed to act strange, like going to a back room to nap. She would also stare at the wall like she was seeing something. On the third or fourth day I found her collapsed in the front room and would not get up when called. Investigating her lack of interest, I realized that she could not stand. Her front legs were paralyzed. This was on a Saturday night, I'm new in this area and did not know of an after hour clinic. I thought that since she did not seem to be in pain, I would take her on Sunday after I could find a referral of a vet for after hours. Wish I would have acted sooner in hindsight. That night was a horrible night for the both of us with her vomiting and pooping with large quantities of jelled blood. I need to avoid sugar as per veterinary advice. It will spike insulin production even more and cause hypoglycemia. I purchased this product as the label clearly boldly states NO ADDED SUGAR. I have been feeding it to my dog. I then see in the ingredients that cultured dextrose is added. Looking this up it is nothing more than a sugar. I find this inexcusable labeling.

Took him to vet and no diagnosis after abdominal xray, CBC, ruling out tick bourne illnesses. Dog recovered 18 hours after initial onset of symptoms with no veterinary interventions. Two days later we a found foreign object in dog food (Diamond Natural Grain Free). I contacted the dog food manufacturer and (b) (6) DVM from Diamond identified the object as a piece of silicone caulking used on their machinery. EON-355789	6/6/2018 18:44	Purina Friskies Pate Poultry Platter	Last night my cat vomited violently, but she ate right afterward, so we didn't know what was up. The food we gave her a few hours prior was Purina Friskies Pate Poultry Platter. About 7 hours later I gave cat a little more with seemingly no issue. Four hours later we thought cat was begging for food; I put the rest of the can of Poultry Platter in her dish. She licked a bit of the gravy off and then a few minutes later regurgitated her previous meal and vomited "violently" around the home. I threw away the food and washed her bowl, then gave her a different flavor, but she lost her appetite. She hasn't vomited like this for many months and the last time it happened we suspected it was a bad can of Poultry Platter, so she hasn't eaten Poultry Platter in nearly a year. The first two cans she consumed recently she regurgitated; that seems too coincidental to me. I gave my cat her insulin near the time she vomited, so if she doesn't regain her appetite in time, she'll probably go into insulin shock. Update: I have retrieved the discarded food and can from the trash in case anyone wants them. I became aware of this issue by searching Authority chicken jerky reviews on line and I am thankful that my pets are okay while other pet owners sadly lost theirs. EON-355674	6/5/2018 18:24	Good Lovin' Dog Chews Maple Smoked Hambones	I purchased the product, "Good Lovin' Dog Chews" Brand "Maple Smoked Ham Bones" from PetCo in (b) (6) on 6/3/18 as a treat for my dog. No expiration date or lot number appears in the packaging (in retrospect). I gave my dog, (b) (6)', this bone as a treat on 6/4 evening. She was supervised in the same room while she chewed on it for about an hour. It was then taken away and later that evening, she was placed in her crate for sleep (without any toys or bones). She appeared well at the time of crating. Sometime between 3 and 6am today, 6/5, we awoke to (b) (6) having forceful and repeated vomiting. The vomit initially had some small amount of food particles and a few very small (5-8mm?) chips of bone from her Hambone treat. She last was fed just prior to having the bone treat in the evening of 6/4. due to her vomiting she was not fed this morning, but allowed sips of water. She continued to have vomiting and began to have blood tinged vomit around 0800. We contacted her vet and arranged for an appointment at 240pm, and she had a total of 8-9 episodes of bloody emesis between 6a-2p. She also became lethargic and clearly felt unwell by the time of her assessment. At the vet's, she had labwork and x rays. the x ray showed significant inflammation of the GI tract and stomach and several(4-5) small shards of Ham Bones as focal points of irritation between the stomach and colon. Her bloodwork was concerning for early infection, her body temperature was unusually low, and she was showing significant signs of dehydration. Her pancreatic enzymes were checked to rule out pancreatitis and they returned as normal. She is currently hospitalized and receiving IV hydration, antibiotics, antiemetics, and carafate, and is being observed to rule out GI tract perforation or obstruction. The packaging notes that the pet should be supervised (she was), ensure she chewed the treat into small pieces before consuming (she clearly did), and that it can cause issues if consumed "rapidly and in large chunks", neither of which were the case. I truly believe this product represents a major risk to dogs, and that the package labeling is misleading (particularly if they are marketing towards "aggressive" chewers	1	Years	Corgi - Welsh Cardigan	Dog	25	Pound

I had a monthly autoship from Chewy.com. We fed nothing else, no treats or table food. In March we noted his tummy was rumbling and he had foul gas. We discussed that we may need to swap his dog food at some point to Senior and maybe something that agreed with his stomach more. We noticed he was eating less and sleeping in more. We thought it was age. Then in April he started having bad diarrhea and vomiting. Vomiting everywhere and refusing to eat his food. We started leaving it out longer so he would eat. I have a black Persian cat that got into the food and immediately vomited it. We then noticed he'd vomit within a couple of hours of eating it. I put him on a bland diet. He was fine. So I blended up some of his food into that, and he vomited. The Vet did a full bloodwork, poop and xray of him. His liver and kidneys at the time were fine, but his gut flora numbers showed huge Gastrointestinal issues. He was given 2 shots there and put on 5 different meds. I was giving him 11+ pills a day and he was also put on a Vet Scripted Royal Canin Gastrointestinal Low Fat Diet. For 10 more days I gave him pills and due to his anorexia from sickness, I used a turkey baster to feed him the Vet Prescribed food. Which he'd never eat on his own. I tried the dry food and other varieties of vet prescribed food to include novel proteins. He denied them all. Our next Vet visit we were told she couldn't do much more for him. We'd need a range of tests...etc. She gave him Prednisone. I bought Purinal Hydrolized Food. He at that. I was so relieved. But the next day he faltered. He'd lost 30lbs in a few weeks. EON-355218	5/30/2018 12:08	Kibbles 'n Bits Original Savory Beef & Chicken Flavors Dry Dog Food	My dog, (b) (6) fell very ill with vomiting, diarrhea, lethargic, and achy. She was hardly moving and the only food that she had eaten was the Kibble N Bits - we also had a 2nd dog on the same food who became ill from it as well. My other Dog (b) (6) is a 4 year old spayed Mal-Shi and she was the one that fell ill 1st. Her problems started on 5/20/18 and lasted until 5/23/18 once she got sick we stopped all food for all dogs right away and (b) (6) and (b) (6) have since gotten better. I only believe this is the dog food itself because I had a friend who actually had to take her dog into the vet in this last week and she had just purchased a bag of Kibbles N Bits and her dog has fallen ill to the point that it's organs are starting to shut down.	12	Days	Collie - Border	Dog	29	Pound

Within 1-2 days he had stopped eating entirely, and when we took him to the vet they asked if he'd eaten something caustic like a battery as his fur had lost some color, and they thought perhaps he was mildly poisoned. They diagnosed him with 'gastroenteritis' and we started switching his food, which up until that time was fine...looking back after the diagnosis the timing of his odd behaviour started close after the first bone, and he stopped eating entirely after the second. EON-355048	5/27/2018 19:36	Purina One SmartBlend Puppy Food	Upon purchasing Purina One SmartBlend Puppy Food for my 10 week old puppy I began to feed her based upon the Feeding Recommendations chart located on the side of the bag. I switched foods from Taste of the Wild to Purina (after being given a list of a few foods to try at her vet visit) since she kept an upset tummy from the high amount of protein in the TOTW food. She loves the taste of the Purina One, which I was so happy about, however, she would cry as if she was constantly hungry. I assumed this was attributed to the fact that she liked the way the food tasted and less to do with the feeding recommendations. My puppy is considered a medium breed and we expect her to fall somewhere between the 40-55 pound mark when fully grown. Since I was feeding her the recommended amount of food per the chart for a puppy that would eventually weigh 21-50 pounds as an adult, I decided to look and see what the difference was between what I was currently feeding her versus that of a puppy that would eventually weigh 51-75 pounds as an adult (in the event that she topped out on the high end and maybe I wasn't feeding her enough). I was shocked to find that the chart recommends that you would feed a puppy that would eventually weigh more as an adult LESS food. I recognize the small margin between 1/3 and 1/4, however, the vast difference in weights of these two categories (21 pounds vs. 75 pounds) is appalling. Why would you feed a puppy that will weigh 75 pounds as an adult LESS food than you would feed a puppy that will weigh 21 pounds as an adult? You wouldn't, I'm sure. This lead me to examine the rest of the chart. It essentially looks as if the entire "4 to 5 months" column and the "6 to 9 months" column should be switched. Basically, in this chart, puppies of all weight classes as adults are fed less food (stark differences) from 6 to 9 months than 5 to 7 months, yet then pushed up even higher from 10 to 11 months. Why would you all of a sudden give a growing puppy up to a cup less food for two months just to bump them up 2 to 3 more cups in another 2 months? None of this made any sense to me and made me question if I was even doing what was right for my puppy and her nutrition. How could I trust this when it didn't make any sense? I immediately called Purina and was given ZERO answers. I was told that 4 is bigger than 3, therefore, 1/4 is larger than 1/3. Negative. Then I was told that I was reading the chart wrong and that if my puppy weighed 11

			pounds that I should be feeding her from the 3-12 pound weight class and that I shouldn't be feeding her as much as I am. Wrong again. The chart clearly says "Weight of Puppy When Fully Grown". After getting no answers by phone, I decided to email the company so that I could attach a screenshot of the chart that is on the side of the bag, as well as the EXACT same chart on their website with the issues circled so that there was no confusion about my concerns. I received a follow up email stating that I would receive a response within 48 hours time. I have yet to receive a response and that was well over a week ago. Three days ago, I was so upset with no response, I decided to utilize the live chat feature with the company and spoke with someone who once again could not answer my questions. I was told that they would forward my concerns to another department and asked for my information so that they could offer me a response. I had the transcript of this conversation emailed to me in the event I did not hear anything. Crickets again. At this point I am very concerned with following the guidelines, however, I do not wish to make a swift decision about changing my dog's food again. I wish to receive confirmation that the guidelines are either correct (even though I do not see how they could be), or I wish to receive an updated food chart with the correct values and recommendations for my puppy. I even played around with several puppy food calculators, entering in weights, kcal values, etc. and the chart simply isn't adding up. Please help! Purina is not responding to me and I take my puppy's nutrition very seriously. I wish there was a way for me to upload a screenshot of the chart in question, however, I do not see that option. I will, however, provide you with a link to the chart I'm speaking of and give you specifics concerning the values noted in this complaint.

EON-355044	5/27/2018 17:44	Carolina prime premium chicken tenders	Pet has been healthy / stable with current medications / co-morbidities. Purchased and began feeding jerky treats on tuesday 5/22, on 5/25 @3am pet began with vomiting and diarrhea. Diarrhea was transient, but vomiting was prolonged. Pet vomited 15 times prior to maropitant injection at 11:22 am. No further vomiting beyond that point. Over the course of the day her lethargy increased significantly and she developed abdominal pain. X-rays were suggestive of pancreatitis. Lab abnormalities included elevated liver enzymes (ALT 1272, elevations in all, and say as well) mild hypoglycemia (glu - 68), and an increased precision-PSL via Antech laboratories. Pet was taken to emergency referral center where she was noted to be hypotensive and hypoglycemic on presentation with a developing abdominal effusion. She was admitted for supportive care. The following day her ALT had increased to over 3000 (I think 3300, but exact number not available for this report). An abdominal ultrasound was performed which was not supportive of pancreatitis, and no evidence of hepatic masses present. The liver was diffusely coarse, but no specific cause for this change was evident. Patient remained hospitalized for another overnight. Recheck liver panel on 5/27 indicated ALT decreased to 3000, patient clinically much improved. Abdominal effusion still present (7lb wt gain in hospital), fluid to be submitted for analysis upon return to business hours on 5/29. Patient was discharged on antibiotic and hepatoprotectant. Patient is improving, but not fully recovered. Plan to recheck liver values in 72 hours. No known injury or toxin exposure, no known exposure to Leptospirosis. We had purchased the food last fall to supplement our dog's regular food. She was treated by our veterinarians for several months before the company announced the recall. The vets continued to treat her after the recall but her health had suffered greatly. We were notified by our local Kroger that we had purchased the recalled dogfood on a number of occasions. The vets agreed that this was most likely the cause of this terrible intestinal issues. We accumulated several thousand dollars in vet bills as they ran test after test. This energetic and fun spirited dog became terribly ill. I feel very strongly that this episode with the pentobarbital in the food could have been prevented. As it was, we had to have our beloved pet euthanized on (b) (6) . It was difficult, but the humane thing to do, in order to end her suffering. EON-354371	5/22/2018 5:12	Marshall's Carnivore Plus Diet	This problem is complicated, please bare with me. In March we attended our local Petco in (b) (6) and were picking up our usual Ferret supplies and we decided to grab a back up bag of Ferret food of Marshall's Chicken Select, unfortunately when we got to the aisle we were faced with a real problem, even though it was ordered by the store they never recieved the Chicken Select ferret food, the only other bag on the shelf was Marshall's Carnivore Plus diet. We figured since it was by Marshall and it wouldn't be voiding their 1 year warrenty on our Ferrets (stating that if we feed them the Marshall's diet and they fall sick, Marshall's will held reliable 100%) and our little happy go lucky ferret (who was trained for epilepsy and was 1 month away from being certified as a Emotional Support Animal) wouldn't starve to death either. However we waited until we finished off our supply of Chicken select and fed (b) (6) his first meal with the Marshall's Carnivore Plus on April 5th and he seemed to like it too, he had more energy and spring in his bounce, I remember him going to pick out a toy at another Petco on April 5th, and he was fine, the morning of April 6th he was fine and was running around playing while I was home, but when my man and I came home at 10pm on April 6th from work (b) (6) looked like he was pooping, however when I check on him around 11pm he was still trying to use the rest room. We rushed him to the E.R. at (b) (6) Animal Hospital in (b) (6) and were told he had bladder stones, and we had two options: Euthenizatia or Surgery which would cost us 3,500$ we went for a second opinion at (b) (6) Animal Hospital and found out he was at bladder rupture point and to take him back to (b) (6) so we did. We went through with the surgery, he was there over the weekend, they removed his catheder and nothing changed, so they offered to do a 2 week catheder so he could come home and his body rejected it. They said we could do an expiremental surgery (another $3,000) and he had a 20% chance of survival, we decided to do it in hopes he would be coming home. fair warning this is about to get dark, upsetting and mortifying fast	1	Years		Other	2	Pound

			(b) (6) made it through the surgery, got a $1,000 grant for unusual ferret surgeries, yes he is legit a celebrity now, however he wouldn't stop bleeding from the wound, the $1,000 grant went to a blood transfusion for him, and we got the call a half hour later that he had a brain aneurism. NO JOKE!! Our 1 year old ferret was 99.9% gone. (b) (6) human father, (b) (6) suffered a seizure from shock that I had to coax him out of (I was terrified I was going to lose him too) and when we arrived at the hospital only (b) (6) heart was the only thing still going in his little body. After we called a friend who showed up for emotional support we said our final goodbyes and laid (b) (6) to rest throjgh Euthenazia at 12:22 am on (b) (6) which tugged at my heart horribly because I was almost born on (b) (6) but I arrived on the (b) (6) Now we called Marshall's and those people are horrible, the woman on the phone basically called me a liar, and when I said we had the stones analyzed at a lab and it came back to diet change, she pretty much told me there was no way it was their food and told me I chose to feed it to him, insisting we should have let him starve. We still have (b) (6) paper work. They are 100% to blame, they said the type of stones he had were non genetic and definitely diet change related. Later on in (b) (6) (around the (b) (6) t) we finally brought our "som" (b) (6) home, we had him cremated 2 months after his 1st birthday...and Marshall's only awarded us 185$ (the cost of adopting (b) (6) ) in a non cashable check due to them spelling our city wrong, putting (b) (6) instead of (b) (6), and refused to help with the bills. Peta has an ongoing investigation with them, and they are how I got to this form. This food contains traces of Peas and Grains and their regular Ferret Diet contains Corn and grains, the only food they sell that doesn't have the grains, peas or corn traces is Marshall's Chicken Select Diet (our normal one we fed (b) (6) since we adopted him) which is HIGHLY DANGEROUS to ferrets since they are STRICTLY MEAT EATING animals only.

I see numerous complaints since 12/2017 since IAMS changed their formula and appears to have split from Eukanuba, and stories of dogs with the same symptons my poor dogs have one since 4/1/18 on deaths door, and since his two sisters and two younger daughters to one of his sisters all are sick, vet bills, and staying up nights rotating taking out them for bloody diarehea to turn to black water in just one day, vomiting and hand feeding to save their lives. PLEASE READ THESE COMPLAINTS - Same symptons as my dogs: https://www.consumeraffairs.com/pets/iams.html. Please help, most vets don't even know the symptons, they do test on top of tests - need to get together with the vets and help these dogs - So many stories of dogs being put back on the food after get better to get a relapse after realizing what happened, some are fortunate enough to just try a different food and know it is the food, when you trusted a company for years and they sell off and change the formula with poison - how are you to know. LAWS NEED TO CHANGE!! 1st day vomit and want to eat but can't hold anything even water down, next day diarrhea with fresh blood at end, and refuse to eat from this point on; next day BLACK water stool, excessive water drinking now, force feed from this point on, along with constant body twitches. Only till I read the consumer complaints, no thank to not being recalled, did I see eery similar symptons, then I went COLD turkey on changing foods and others didn't get sick, and dogs that were sick reversed symptons with Vet. Royal Canin GI food and Antibiotic that reversed the stages of the symptoms, except the first affeced who is still sick and went from muscles to skin and bones with swollen glands. Still force feeding him. If this were food for human consumption it would have been recalled!!! Please make this company held accountable for their irresponsible actions, knowingly and keeping food on market when numerous complaints, probably just for profit. They actually told me to return the unopened bags to the retailer to put on shelves to resell since no recall (CRAZY)! I wish I could attach photos of my dog before and after this food. I have learned much the hard way since this happened, and would like to make some

			suggestions, NEVER SELL DOG FOOD IN PAPER BAGS, need to be sealed plastic, and many bad ingredients in these foods that are not for human consumption. I have photos of all the process, the diarrhea, etc. and have the food still and packages!!!! There should be laws against a company buying out another company and using their packaging with approved vet, etc. data that no longer relates to the changed formula!! That is what is really hurting people that used this food for years with no problem and then Dec., 2017 all complaints on all their types of food under IAMS. There should also be LABELS on the bags stating how to STORE food that is not GRAIN FREE, it is known to grow mold. This food is not the cheap stuff either, and when combined with the vet bills is way more then it is worth, not to mention the upset to the lives of people that have restless nights staying up to let one dog out after another with diarrhea and/or vomiting. Please do something about this! I had a supply of the old formula in the 15 lb plastic bags is why I feel I wasn't affected till april, 2018, till I started buying the larger 30 lb. and larger bags in paper rather than plastic. No other dogs got sick when I took them off this food. I also have 4 younger 7 month old dogs that were never on this food, they ate Victors all their life, and they never got sick!!!! This food needs to be taken off the shelves and laws changed, it isn't descent for these days to have to worry so much about what food to feed your dogs or cats!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

My local store was out and I had to purchase a different brand...I chose Purina Dog Chow 4/2/18. Within 2 wks and almost 3/4 of the bag my dogs appetite started to decline. I had to begin bribing her to eat. By 4/30/18 she was no longer eating and now having trouble walking. Took to vet for exam. She had lost 3 lbs. Back at vet 5/3/18 and had complete blood panel and stools tested. Bloodwork came back showing pancreatitis and highly elevated liver enzymes. On 5/4/18, she was put on Amoxicillin for liver and Cerenia for nausea.No improvement. Back at vet 5/14/18 for abdominal/stomach x-rays and now down 7 lbs. Vet ordered ultrasound for 5/17/18. I noticed, since the weight loss now of 7 lbs, that her neck lymph nodes were swollen. Vet gave me the news today that my dog has Lymphoma. Vet has put her on Prednisolone with the hopes of remission. He says possibly 4 mos if successful. She had a clean bill of health at her Senior Well-Check prior to the new food.	12	Years	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	63	Pound

EON-353998	5/16/2018 20:40	Only Natural Pet HW Protect Herbal Formula	the company i'm making a report about is called: "only natural pet." their website is: www.onlynaturalpet.com. the issue with this company is that, being a "food" related company, meaning that their all-natural products are ingested by people's pets, they need and should be required to have an expiration on their products, should they not?! i'm actually quite appalled that they've been able to get away with not having expiration dates printed on their products, specifically the all-natural products, aka: herbal formula products for more than 10 years. What they have told me is that the products last for up to 3 years of they're uponened and for up to 2 years after opening. a consumer shouldn't have to call the company for an expiration date. it's concerning that a company that claims to care about our pet's health, doesn't care about notifying us parents, about how long these products are good for. please make this company add expiration dates to their products. just like each individual product at the store has an expiration date if it's food related, this company has to and should be made to do the same.

One cat was really affected by it immediately and was constantly projectile vomiting nonstop and at one point began to seize up so I rushed her to the vet and they treated her. It all happened so suddenly. I just had no idea what was going on. I took her to the vet too before she became so bad but this was a different vet and he suggested to stop feeding them the food because he said in his opinion it was definitely the food that had caused this. Was brought into the Aloha Veterinary Hospital, there I was told that (b) (6) had a heart aliment he was given an ECG and it was shown to me, he had a slow heart beat, his rate 'irregular'. Everything else was normal, blood work, urinalysis, X-Rays, everything. No cause for the heart damage could be found, so he was not put on any medication. I became worried. (b) (6) assured me that if (b) (6) required a Pacemaker, that (b) (6) preformed those operations and that dogs lived for many happy years, don't be concerned... Later that night, at about 9:30 pm I manage to coax (b) (6) to eat some 'boiled chicken thigh'. He eats heartily, sleeps well. The next day he eats his food without an issue. The following Wednesday, we have a regular appointment with (b) (6) Animal Hospital, (b) (6) is re-checked, his heartbeat is way better but its still 'irregular'. (b) (6) is happy healthy is acting unaware as though there is no problem. I get an appointment to see the Cardiologist on May 3, (b) (6) of the Las Vegas Veterinary Cardiology Specialists and he suggested the best course was to put a halter monitor on (b) (6) for 24 hours then we can find out exact what his problem is. I coaxed him into eating some boiled chicken at about 11:32 am, that was the last time he ate... (b) (6) started vomiting and defecating. He became quiet, but he never fell asleep. We had to carry him outside. I gave him water from a Turkey Baster. (b) (6) was very thirsty. We both though (b) (6) had a 'sour tummy' and would get better in 24 hours. We brought him upstairs to bed with us. (b) (6) wanted to sleep on the bathroom floor. I woke up at midnight, his head was up, he was alert and breathing. I woke up at 2:32 I saw his head was down, I thought he was getting some sleep, but I felt his chest he was no longer breathing, I could not feel a heart beat, his eyes were open. On Monday (b) (6) called and stated that the harness test that we had done did not show any cardiac anomalies, so he surmised it had to be something that (b) (6) got into, but (b) (6) e had a very discerning palate, the other dogs, yes, (b) (6) no. EON-352983	5/5/2018 20:28	Trader Joe Turkey and Giblet Dinner Premium Cat Food	I was opening a can of Trader Joe cat food when the top popped open (it has a pull tab which I was opening when it popped open on it's own), making a loud pop like a firecracker, and the food had a rotten odor. The next can I opened was snubbed by the cats who usually love this brand, leading me to think it was a problem with the whole batch and not just one can.

So we are now currently stopped the dog food. They dont get human food. We may have to take the corgi into the vets.	7	Years	Corgi - Welsh Cardigan	Dog	23	Pound

EON-352896	5/4/2018 13:16	NO Name on packaging	I believe that the ingredients listed on treats in a local bakery are falsified. The owner, (b) (6), claims to make all the treats at home and from all natural ingredient herself. However, I do know that information is false. Her employee has reported that the owner purchases them from the internet and from another individual that makes them in her home. The owner only adds icing to them. The store employee stated the owner actually has no clue as to what these treats are made of. When a friend questioned the owner about one of the treats ingredients, (b) (6) stated she wasn't sure as she hadn't made that one herself. The products that are ordered online from Paw Street does not include any ingrediants information at all on the packaging. The employees also stated the owner only registered one of her products because it was too expensive otherwise. Paw Street recently signed with Specks and they are now selling their treats in 12 speck locations also. I am not sure why specks did not investigate beforehand. Before I decided to make this report I researched to see if Paw Street was licensed. I found that their (b) (6) business license was dissolved and could not locate a feed license. I fear that her neglect could cause serious harm.

EON-352706	5/3/2018 1:12	9Lices Indoor complete	I had a cat who suddenly became ill out of nowhere, I took her to the vet and her temperature had dropped and her vet told me she most likely wouldn't survive with treatment so I made the decision to put her down instead of making her suffer. One day she was fine and he next she collapsed, I read about how these dog foods were finding euthanasia medicine in the bag and her symptoms lined up and she was eating 9lives which is made by the same company so I held on to the food to see if something would come from it. I wanted to get it tested to see if that could be the cause of her death and possibly prevent future illness of other beloved pets.
EON-352704	5/2/2018 23:32	Golden Rewards Chicken Jerky Recipie - 3 Ounces	I purchased this treat as it has no sugar, and that is something that I am cautious about when buying treats for my dog. Over the course of approximately 1 week, I gave her approximately 1 full piece as I broke it in half each time. In hindsight, she was acting a little odd initially as she was sleeping behind the chair which was not the norm, but still eating and otherwise acting fine. Within a matter of days, still within that week I would say, she began vomiting and having diarrhea. She was drinking a lot of water, and started vomiting up the water as well. Then she stopped eating. Thinking it was her insulin levels, I took her to the vet and it really wasn't very high at all, most especially since she stopped eating. On the onset of the 3rd day without eating, my vet said to bring her back in. I did and at that point, she was now barely able to stand. The vet ran several tests, and determined from the results of her blood work, that she was in renal failure. Three months prior, her blood work was normal and there were no issues other than a slightly elevated glucose level for which her insulin units were adjusted and again, she stabilized. The vet gave her various shots, cerenia, convenia, and vitamin b-complex to try to stimulate her appetite. I brought <sup>(b) (6)</sup> back to the vet on Thursday morning to begin day one of three days of IV therapy. IV fluid (lactated ringers solution) was administered throughout the day. I picked her up at 6:30pm, she was responsive but still very weak. I kept her warm but she passed away right before midnight.	10.5	Years	Pinscher - Miniature	Dog	12	Pound
