Introduction

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA or Agency) is the regulatory, scientific, public health and consumer protection agency responsible for ensuring all human and animal drugs, medical devices, cosmetics, foods, food additives, drugs and medicated feeds for food producing animals, tobacco and radiation emitting devices safe, and effective.

The mission of the Center for Devices and Radiological Health (CDRH or Center) is to protect and promote the public health by performing essential public health tasks by making sure that medical devices and radiological health products are safe for people in the United States. The Office of Communications and Education (OCE or Office) manages communication regarding medical devices and radiation-emitting products to external audiences, education for regulated industry, and communication and training for CDRH employees. The Division of Communication (DC or CDRH Comms) provides strategic direction for and manages the development and release of internal and external communication regarding medical devices and radiation-emitting products for the Center.

Duties/Responsibilities

Reporting directly to the External Communication Branch Chief, you will serve as a Health Communications Specialist responsible for identifying and integrating traditional and modern health external communication strategies, as well as new and emerging web-based technologies and social media, for the purpose of advancing public health communications for the FDA on behalf of the Division related to medical devices and radiation emitting products. Additionally, the Health Communications Specialist will perform the following duties:

- Supports the Division's strategic communication programs, research efforts, and findings to develop and deliver public health messages about the benefits and risks of medical devices and regulatory policies.
- Coordinates the gathering of data and other information and drafts documents, such as Safety Communications, fact sheets, program briefings, one-page program summaries, and web pages.
- Supports the development and implementation of communication and marketing programs, projects, and strategies for the general public and other audiences. Ensures health communication activities are based on theory and use accepted principles, methods, and practices.
- Presents health communication briefings or presentations to various groups (i.e., federal, state, and local constituents) to support health communication and information dissemination efforts for assigned programs and reviewing, editing, and clearing communication and marketing materials and presentations by professional staff.
- Develops messages and materials that are scientifically valid and consistent with program initiatives or objectives based on communication practices and marketing theories and principles; audience research (including concept, message, and usability testing); and targeted or tailored for diverse audiences (messages and materials address cultural and socioeconomic challenges to effective communication and consider the diverse interests, needs, concerns, and priorities of population segments).

Qualifications

To be placed into a Cures position, candidates must meet the following criteria:

1. Scientific, Technical, and Professional Fields
2. Qualified and Outstanding Candidates
  - a. Qualified applies to all candidates for Cures appointments. The FDA OTS will use the basic requirements defined in the OPM Qualification Standards as a baseline for comparing experience levels and other candidate attributes for relevant positions.

- b. Outstanding candidates can be defined by existing outstanding work experience, outstanding performance rating, or both.

In order to qualify for this Title 21 Cures position, the candidate(s) must meet the following required qualifications. Please note: Additional education and experience listed that is not indicated as required is preferable and desired. Candidates who do not meet the “desired” criteria will not be excluded from consideration for this position.

Professional Experience: To qualify for this position, you must demonstrate in your resume the necessary qualifying experience for this position, which is equivalent to the following:

- Writing and editing communication materials related to public health and/or safety initiatives for distribution to professional and lay audiences (e.g., health professionals and the general public); and
- Assisting with developing or executing strategic communications initiatives, e.g., identifying target audiences, developing key messaging, and assisting with tracking program metrics and developing reports for leadership.

Desired Professional Experience:

- Project and Self-Management Skills – Shown ability to get things done and deliver in a complex environment (high visibility, deadlines, accelerated timelines).
- Ability to communicate effectively, orally and in writing, with non-technical and technical staff.
- Able to meet deadlines in a fast-paced environment while managing multiple priorities.
- Knowledge of health communication and marketing goals and objectives, primary and secondary data sources, environmental scanning, need assessments, and health risk communication sufficient to identify information gaps, needs, and opportunities.
- Ability to define and analyze target audiences; collaborate with staff and partners to formulate communication and marketing strategies.
- Skill in planning and implementing health communication and marketing programs and outreach-partnership efforts.
- Skill in written communication techniques, and the ability to write documents such as program and project descriptions, communication and marketing plans, reports about audience research and results, scopes of work, and training tools. Ability to report on research and evaluation results orally, and in writing.
- Ability to apply research or evaluation results to the development of health communication and marketing messages.
