

Dear Ms. Reese,

Please consider alternatives to methylphenidate. The alternative would be to find out what medically was really wrong with the child as opposed to just administering a drug to make all the symptoms "go away". I realize it takes time and trouble to do it this way and parents are often at their wits end when their children supposedly have ADD or ADHD, so they don't want to take the time. But to give a child a drug that can destroy developing organs instead of finding an actual cure for that individual is a crime.

Approval of this patch is gross negligence. Do not approve it.

Kay Curtis