Re: GE foods

Dear Commissioner Henney,

It bothers me greatly that I as a consumer have no way of knowing whether I buy genetically modified foods at the grocery store or not. People should have the right to decide for themselves whether they want to take part in that great experiment or not. There are enough indications of potential hazards for public health and the environment that prudence demands

1. Vigorous safety testing of all genetically engineered foods, with long-range safety in mind and
2. The requirement that all genetically engineered foods or foods containing GE ingredients be labeled.

The public has a right to know and to determine themselves what they are eating.

Sincerely,

Gisela S. Ray
