Dear Commissioner Jane Henney,

Emerging studies show that genetically engineered organisms found in United States could create new allergic reactions, antibiotic resistance and other crippling effects in humans.

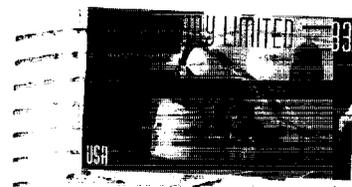

I have a personal interest in genetically engineered foods that come to my family table without my consent. I believe I should be aware of what I eat. I believe I should be aware of what my family eats. I believe all genetically engineered food should be labeled as such.

I believe strongly that a moratorium should be placed upon all new genetically engineered organisms until these new foods are proven safe, not just GRAS (generally recognized as safe). Furthermore, from a biochemical standpoint, we do not know enough to use foods to administer vaccines (Prevention Magazine, comments on "future foods").

Sincerely,
Gina Nee Dels
