Dear Dr. Henney:

WOW! We were delighted...potato chips that we could relax fat-wise and munch! My husband has a Ph.D.; I have a Masters Degree...Intelligent, relatively informed, cautious... My husband is healthy and exercises and is almost NEVER sick in any way. So, WOW!!

We bought WOW. Less than a day later, he became severely ill...second day later feeling worse...third day, with cramps, feelings of nausea and severe stomach pains, maybe even chest? area, contacted doctor who by phone said: gastrointestinal...fourth day...without much if any food began feeling better and WOW...someone else told us they'd not been feeling well...only thing in common and with no other unusual food nor fever, WOW!! We inquired of friends and they said they had been advised not to eat it...SO, we for the fun of it called Proctor and Gamble to ask/tell...

We were THEN informed that ON THE PACKAGE THERE WAS A WARNING!!!!!!!!!!!! in tiny print that what happened to my husband COULD happen to others...Astonishing...We, two very literate people who DO read labels TRUSTED IMPLICITLY WOW... Why should we have to spend hours in a grocery store reading teeny weeny print on TRUSTED merchandise...All-American POTATO CHIPS????? Sure, we know they are fattening and we even read to see if any reduced fat and any canola oil or baked, etc etc...BUT warnings for HEALTH on POTATO CHIPS???

Please, for the sake of people who DO NOT READ and for those who are FOREIGN stop making this product OR sell by prescription.

My last comment, Dr. Henney is: Assuming your family is literate and ultra cautious since you are with the FDA...Would you be happy if you or son or daughter or husband bought a "trusted" product and became very sick for a weekend and how would you feel towards the FDA who had said something like: this is a safe product for MOST consumers, ESPECIALLY FOR ANYONE WHO HAS HOURS TO SHOP IN A GROCERY STORE WITH A MAGNIFYING GLASS FOR EACH AND EVERY ITEM PUT IN THE SHOPPING CART???????????

My best wishes for you, YOUR FAMILY and eaters everywhere,

Renee Rossman (Mrs. Jules) Renee Rossman
